CORK, Ireland — A three-day race with death ended in victory for rescuers today when two men trapped in a midget submarine on the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean were lifted to the surface safe and well.

They had only 90 minutes of oxygen left when they were freed from their submarine and placed on the Vickers Voyager, the sub's mother ship and headquarters for the rescue effort.

Roger Mallinson, 35, and Roger Chapman, 28, clambered under their own power out of their crippled 19-foot submarine Pisces III 75 hours and 50 minutes after it sank in 1,375 feet of water off the Irish coast.

But the men escaped by a whisker.

Their midget sub, disabled while burying a new transatlantic telephone cable Wednesday, carried what was expected to be air enough for only 72 hours, plus a 45-minute emergency supply of oxygen. But they managed to stretch out the oxygen just long enough.

The rescue effort began shortly afterward with rescue subs flown in from Canada and Scotland and a U.S. unmanned rescue craft also participating.

The Canadian coast guard vessel John Cabot helped haul the Pisces III to the surface after the midget submarine from Scotland, Pisces II, managed to attach a strong rescue cable to the stricken vessel.

The John Cabot went to the rescue scene from off the British coast after hearing of the call for help.

The rescue effort was plagued throughout by mechanical difficulties and turbulent seas that cut underwater visibility almost to zero.

The Pisces II attached the rescue cable to the Pisces III today after an earlier attempt failed Friday night.

Pisces II and Pisces V, the other rescue sub flown in from Canada, took 11 hours to find the disabled craft Friday and tie a guide line to it so they could find it again when they descended with the heavy line.

Emergency oxygen supplies from face masks apparently were the difference between life and death for the submariners.

It took 3½ hours to haul the sub to the surface today with the rescue cable attached to the John Cabot, the guide line attached to the Vickers Voyager and another line running from the U.S. unmanned undersea craft, Curiv III, all helping in the effort.

Four doctors aboard the Vickers Voyager examined Chapman and Mallinson. A helicopter flew them to Cork, where they transferred immediately to a jet for a flight to Barrow-in-Furness, England, where their families waited.

Sir Leonard Redshaw, chairman of Vickers Oceanics, owner of the Pisces, said the men were brought up in "our last chance." He described the operation as the deepest underseas rescue ever attempted.

HOUSE FIRE KILLS COMOX MAN

COMOX — A 44-year-old Comox man was burned to death when fire gutted his home early today.

Courtenay RCMP said Kenneth Roy Jenkins, of Taylor Way, Comox, died in the fire which started shortly after midnight.

Cause of the fire and the amount of damage are not yet known.

Jenkins was alone in the house.

NEWS BRIEFS

IRA Chief Nabbed

BELFAST (UPI) — Seamus Twomey, reputed chief of staff of the Irish Republican Army's extremist provisional wing, was arrested today in a raid on a remote farmhouse in the Irish Republic, police in Dublin said.

Dissidents Jailed

MOSCOW (AP) — Pyotr Yakir and Viktor Krasin, two prominent Soviet dissidents, were sentenced today to three-year prison terms on charges of "anti-Soviet propaganda."

Emerald Stolen

HIDDENITE, N.C. (UPI) — North America's largest emerald was reported stolen Friday but the owner says trying to sell the 1,438-carat crystal, worth $50,000, "would be like trying to sell the Mona Lisa." The unnamed stone was taken this week from the American Gem Co. museum here, the Alexander County sheriff's office said.

Heavy Fighting

SAIGON (UPI) — The South Vietnamese command today reported heavy fighting along a key government road in the Mekong Delta and an intense mortar barrage against defence lines around the former imperial capital of Hue.

Thousands Flee Naples Cholera

Times News Services

NAPLES — Thousands of persons were streaming out of this city today, fleeing from a cholera outbreak which has already taken nine lives.

And the cholera appeared to be spreading despite an extensive vaccination program.

Hospital officials said early today that the number of confirmed cases has risen to 42 and the number of suspected cases to more than 160.

To combat the spread of the disease, the government has started shipping 500,000 doses of cholera vaccine to Naples and the Adriatic city of Bari which has reported 10 confirmed and 40 suspected cases.

Fear is rising in this Mediterranean port of 1.3 million people, where the streets are filled with the stench of disinfectant and burning garbage.

Thousands of persons were reported heading out of the city in cars Friday night, while drug stores and clinics were besieged by people trying to obtain vaccine or antibiotics. But most shops were sold out.

Other residents of Naples took to the streets for the second consecutive day to protest a shortage of vaccine and demand immediate sanitation measures in the city's crowded slums.

At Portici 1,000 persons mobbed the mayor's car and beat on it with their fists as he tried to enter his office.

Later a crowd of 3,000 public housing residents burned tires, furniture and bags of garbage in the street.

BLAZING ANGER

SICAMOUS (CP) — A North Vancouver man who told police he set a forest fire near here on Aug. 16 to express his anger, got a 60-day jail sentence for arson Friday.

Jeff Walton, 22, told police he set the fire because he was "just angry" at everything, police said. He pleaded guilty.

The fire burned more than three acres and blocked traffic on Highway 97-A for more than three hours. It cost about $10,000 to extinguish the blaze, a forestry branch official said.

OTTAWA — Leaders of Canada's striking non-operating rail unions are meeting non-stop to decide if they will obey compromise legislation passed by Parliament early today forcing them back to work by midnight.

There were signs of continued defiance from strike leaders in B.C. who termed the final wage settlement passed by Parliament as "an insult."

Co-chairman of the British Columbia joint strike committee Nick Zapantis said the British Columbia membership could very well defy the back-to-work order, even if the national leadership recommends acceptance.

If any case, he said he doubted a membership meeting to consider Parliament's action can be arranged until some time Sunday.

"We feel at present that (the offer) is unacceptable and we expect the (national) leadership to say the same," he said.

Parliament early today ordered the country's 56,000 non-operating railway employees back to work with legislation that also bars possible strikes by two other railway unions.

The legislation will give an immediate 34 cents an hour increase retroactive to Jan. 1, in contrast to the 30 cents an hour proposed by the government earlier.

The average hourly wage will be raised by $4.19 by July 1, 1974, from the present average hourly wage of $3.54 for non-ops.

This would still leave railway workers making less money than janitors in other industries, Zapartis said.

"It tells me they think we are so stupid we will take anything they offer," he added.

Spokesmen for Canadian National and Canadioan Pacific railroads said they expected the strikers to begin reporting for work as required by law at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. Some services could begin by noon Sunday and full services could be provided by Tuesday morning if the men come back to work, they said.

The Senate passed the bill by a unanimous voice vote at 5:40 a.m. EDT after an hour and half of debate, and acting governor-general, associate supreme court Justice Ronald Martland, gave the bill Royal assent 20 minutes later.

In the Commons, the legislation was approved on a vote of 187-26. The 96 Liberals, 84 Conservatives, six Social Credit party members and Independent Rock LaSalle were in favor.

The 25 New Democratic Party members and Social Credit member Lionel Beaudoin were opposed.

Failure of the men to return could result in jail terms for union leaders and fines against them of up to $5000 each for every day the workers stay out.

The amended legislation, if accepted by the unions, would cost the railways another $300 million over two years if wage raises are given to all workers, statements from CP Rail and Canadian National Railways said.

The present annual wage bill is now $850 million.

"This could well give a serious inflationary push to the economy," the CP Rail statement said, calling for action to help railways adjust their revenues to meet the costs.

NDP leader David Lewis said there would be no purpose in workers defying the law.

During debate on the bill, Transport Minister Jean Marchand and Labor Minister John Munro argued that Parliament should not be the place where wage levels for the workers are set.

Marchand, a former Quebec labor leader, led off with an impassioned speech that even union leaders in the public gallery admitted was eloquent.

"But we don't agree with him," said one union official.

As the Conservatives and NDP submitted proposals to raise the minimum wage above that set by the bill, Munro called upon the MPs not to make Parliament an auction place.

More labor disputes would come before Parliament if the minimum wage level was raised on the floor of the Commons, he warned.

33 Killed In Hotel Fire Panic

Times News Services

COPENHAGEN — At least 33 persons were killed early today when flames swept through a six-storey hotel in one of the Danish capital's worst fire disasters, police reported.

Another 20 are missing.

Many of the bodies so far brought out of the fire-ravaged Hafnia Hotel, in the heart of Copenhagen, were charred beyond recognition. There were fears that more bodies might still be in the rubble. (See picture on Page 2.)

The 85 guests in the hotel were mostly tourists from West Germany, the United States, Sweden and Britain.

The fire at the 75-year-old hotel near the City Hall square, was the worst hotel blaze to hit Denmark since the Second World War.

A fire department spokesman said the blaze was believed to have started on the main staircase between the second and third floors.

Some were hurt leaping from windows while others grabbed bedsheets, knotted them together, and slid down to safety.

A number of persons fled upward and then ran to adjoining roooftops.

The fire department spokesman said that ladders were raised but "many of the people did not understand us although we yelled to them in many languages."

Egg Prices Up 2 Cents Monday

Egg prices will rise two cents a dozen Monday.

An $8 a ton increase in the price of chicken feed is responsible for the hike, Ed Morgan, secretary-manager of the B.C. Egg Marketing Board, said today.

Feed industry spokesmen earlier this week predicted a 17-cent-a-dozen increase in production costs for eggs, based on the Canadian Wheat Board's decision to charge the $190-a-ton export price for wheat from local port elevators instead of the $121 domestic price.

Shortages of feed grains, and consequent higher prices, have been caused by the rail strike.

Morgan said there was a "strong possibility" that egg prices will level off once the strike is settled.

"I feel myself that once the strike is over and the grain shipments start moving again, the possibility exists that prices could move in the opposite direction," he said.

A spokesman for one of the largest feed manufacturing companies in the Lower Mainland said Friday his company, which he did not wish identified, had decided to wait until at least Thursday to decide whether to buy export grain from the Port of Vancouver.

The spokesman said his company is hoping truck shipments and an early end to the rail strike will get the company over the shortage without having to buy substantial amounts of export grain.

The supply situation generally still is rough, he said, but farmers are assured of getting adequate supplies. The cost of those supplies, however, will depend on whether export wheat is bought.

Who-Was-Who Washington Worry

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Watergate scandals and the current investigation of Vice-President Agnew have plunged the board of the Social List of Washington into confusion with their deadline for the 1974 edition one week away.

Who will be left in next year's Green Book? (the nickname for the social list because of its green suede cover)? Who will be dropped?

In the past, any breath of scandal or too much notoriety has meant that people previously included in Washington's prestigious, annual social register get bounced from its pages. Ostracism has always been the price of too many unfavorable headlines.

This year the four women and one man who make up "the secret five" board of directors of the Green List are wrestling with their consciences and all the charges accruing from the Watergate scandals. And the Agnew situation.

Those connected with the Green Book insist that there is one firm rule, adhered to through the 42 years the Green Book has been published: "Anyone involved in scandal does not make the book."

This year the question is: Does this rule go as high as President Nixon, who refutes all claims about his knowledge of Watergate?

And should Agnew's name be deleted because the government has told him that he is being investigated in connection with possible charges of "bribery, extortion, and conspiracy?"

The committee has a week to exercise the use of the red pencil before the list goes to the printer.

Carolyn Hagner Shaw, the book's publisher, says she "doesn't have the faintest idea" what decisions her committee will make this year.

"I don't want to hear or see or know anything about the board's decisions," she says.

Many have been dropped from the Green Book in the past.

Oil Sands Plant Set

CALGARY (CP) — Plans for a $700 million oil extraction plant to produce 100,000 barrels a day from the huge Athabasca oil sands in Northern Alberta were announced Friday by Shell Canada Ltd. and Shell Exploration Ltd.

Shell's production would also add to the production of 125,000 barrels a day proposed for the sands by Syncrude Canada Ltd.

In the past, companies other than Syncrude and Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., currently in operation at the sands, have appeared hesitant about the economice feasibility of extracting the oil from the saturated sands.

The oil sands are said to contain more than half of North America's crude oil reserve.

A hearing is scheduled for Sept. 9 before the energy resources conservation board to decide on the future of Shell's proposal.

If permission for the construction is granted, building would start in less than three years and production would begin by 1980, reaching full output two years later.

Syncrude's plans call for production to start by 1978.

Shell Explorer is a subsidiary of the United States-based Shell Oil Ltd.

The company said the area which would be mined by its operation is believed to contain enough crude oil to keep the plant operating for 65 years.

The anticipated life of the project, as presented in Shell's submission, is 25 years.

Syncrude is expected to announce next Tuesday whether it will go ahead with plans for an $800 million extraction plant at the sands. The company has scheduled a news conference in Edmonton for that date.

Friday was the deadline set by the Alberta government for the four-company consortium to reach its decision, although informed sources said the deadline could be extended to allow for further negotiations between the consortium and the province.

The owners of Syncrude — Imperial Oil Ltd., Cities Service Ltd., Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd., and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., have had a proposal for development of the sands in the works for 10 years.

It takes about two tons of sand to produce one barrel of oil.

'Terrible Night' For Topers

"What a terrible night the police had," Judge William Ostler said in Victoria provincial court today after sentencing four people arrested for impaired driving on the first night of the Labor Day weekend.

Ostler fined Donald Stopherd, 27, of Cobble Hill, a total of $700 for impaired driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Prosecutor Rick Issac said Stopherd was skidding on Quadra Street late Friday night when his car hit another vehicle at the corner of Quadra and Bay.

Stopherd made several U-turns in the middle of the street and left the scene of the accident driving 70 miles per hour. He was arrested a short time later. Damage in the accident was slight and there were no injuries.

Samuel Gibson Mars, 52, of 1334 McNair, was also fined $400 for impaired driving early today on Broughton.

Patrick Redmond, 30, of 550 Johnson Street, was fined a total of $625 for impaired driving, driving without insurance and without a licence on Goldstream Ave. late Friday.

Price Drop Seen

TORONTO (CP) — K. G. Murray, president of the Meat Packers Council of Canada, said Friday the price of fresh meat and meat products will continue to drop after Labor Day.

V.I. Cable Contract Let

B.C. Hydro has awarded a $13 million-plus contract to an Italian firm for two underwater transmission cables between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The cables, which won't go into service until 1976, will double the authority's ability to transmit high voltage direct current to the island, raising capacity from 312,000 kilowatts to at least 624,000 kilowatts.

A Hydro statement said that the order is being placed now with Pirelli Industries of Milan because there are only a few companies in the world capable of handling the work and all are booked for years in advance.

The contractor has indicated the on-shore portions of the new cables will be manufactured at the company's plant in St. John, Quebec.

Present underwater transmission to Vancouver Island is by three DC cables, two for a 312,000 kilowatt circuit and one spare, and seven alternating current cables, three for each of two 120,000 kilowatt circuits and one spare.

Hydro spokesmen said last year only extra cables can meet expanding power demand on the island fast enough.

A new cable terminal on the Lower Mainland will be built near Canoe Pass at the northwest tip of Delta for the new DC circuit. The new cable route will avoid the Roberts Bank superport, where power cables have been broken in recent years by ships dragging anchors.

Cable will be laid in Georgia Strait and Trincomali Channel, between Galiano and Salt Spring Islands, for a total of about 19 miles. The remaining 23 miles, on the Gulf Islands, will be spanned by conventional aerial conductors.

Power from Hydro's integrated electric system is converted to direct current at the Lower Mainland end of the DC line for transmission, then converted back to alternating current at a terminal just north of Duncan for distribution to island customers.

The Hydro statement said another multi-million dollar contract, to supply and install converting and related equipment for the new DC circuit, will likely be awarded within a few months. Installation of this equipment will also begin in 1976.

LADY FIRST ANGERS POLICE

EDMONTON (CP) — An official grievance has been lodged over the transfer of a policewoman into a job where she will be in charge of male detectives.

"Can she lead a squad of men on a raid and hussle and fight?" asked one source within the police department who did not want his name to be used.

The grievance over the transfer was lodged by the executive board of the city police association and sent to chief constable Fred Sloane.

It stems from the tranfer of temporary acting S. Sgt., Eileen Finlayson into the Criminal Investigation Department.

She is to relieve other staff sergeants on their days off in two general assignment units which contain about 16 detectives.

One detective said the executive, in making the tranfer, "just slapped every detective on this force and said you're incompetent."

Several said that although she passed an examination — she completed the test to become a staff sergeant in 1970 and has been on the promotion list since then — she has never done the practical work that experienced detectives have.

S. Sgt. Finlayson said Friday that policewomen should not be confined to one area on the force and should have the same opportunities as the male detectives.

Killer Blast

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (Reuter)— At least four persons died and 35 were injured when a four-storey building caught fire here Wednesday night. Rescue workers said they feared that six others may have been buried in the rubble. An anonymous telephone caller had warned police that a building would be blown up, but the state government denied the explosion was caused by a bomb, and attributed it to a gas cylinder.

Crime Rate Up

CALGARY (CP) — Crime in Calgary rose substantially last year compared with 1971, the city police department says in its annual report. Major crime rose by 15 per cent. The highest increases were in wounding, up 88 per cent, frauds, up 28 per cent, and major theft, up 20 per cent.

STORMS EASE HEAT

NEW YORK (AP) — Scattered rain and thunderstorms gave the first wave of Labor Day weekend motorists fleeting respite from the sizzling heat wave that has besieged the East Coast and parts of the midwestern United States.

But the National Weather Service termed the cooling storms only the release of a "summer buildup" of moisture in the air.

The forecast still was for temperatures in the 90s until at least Tuesday, with all the accompanying problems of power shortages, air pollution and water emergencies.

Rain showers swept down the Hudson Valley from northern New York state to New York City, cooling tens of thousands of motorists packed along the New York Thruway.

Temperatures plummeted 12 degrees in the path of the evening rains.

Brief but strong evening thundershowers were reported in southern Connecticut, in Florida and over parts of the Midwest as super-heated air released the moisture it absorbed during the day.

But a stagnant high-pressure system continued to dominate the afflicted area, and a coldweather front over Canada on which the National Weather Services pins its hopes for next week was moving slowly, a weather spokesman said.

The five-day-old heat siege forced the New York State Power Pool to cut voltage by five per cent for the fourth consecutive day.

Voltage reductions also were ordered in Camden and Atlantic City, N.J.

the weather

A Pacific disturbance is giving rain to the North Coast. Elsewhere skies are relatively clear as a ridge of high pressure remains across the province. Frost was reported in the Cariboo early today. Skies will remain sunny across Southern B.C. through Sunday. Periods of rain are expected to continue along the North Coast and into western sections of the central Interior while the cloud continues its advance across central regions.

The time of year is coming to move indoors for some table top photography. It only takes a little planning, and free rein for the imagination, to come up with tabletop pictures which tell a story. They can be created to relate a satiric or humorous message, in one picture, or a series of pictures. Once created or found, the character might be photographed in many situations.

It would seem that still life subjects can be anything and can be found everywhere. It is the photographer's choice of what he wants and what he wants to say with the photograph.

We invite you to come in to our Yates Street store or our Town and Country store and discuss these and other ideas with our Certified Photographic Counsellors.

DRIVER EDUCATION — THE BEST INSURANCE OF ALL

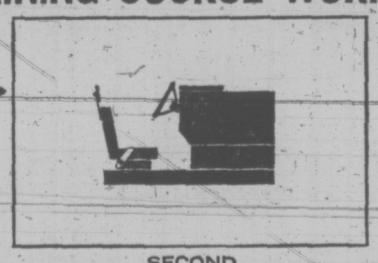
BCAA DRIVER TRAINING AVAILABLE TO EVERYONE

The BCAA Mobile Units contain twelve Simulator Cars together with complete wide screen projection facilities and recording and evaluation equipment.

HOW THE BCAA DRIVER TRAINING COURSE WORKS

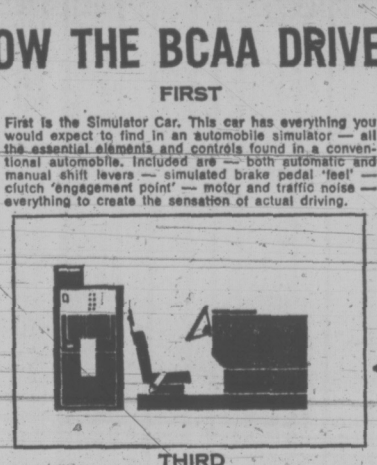
FIRST

First is the Simulator Car. This car has everything you would expect to find in an automobile simulator — all the essential elements and controls found in a conventional automobile. Included are — both automatic and manual shift levers — simulated brake pedal 'feel' — clutch 'engagement point' — motor and traffic noise — everything to create the sensation of actual driving.



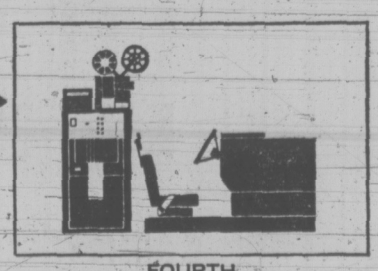
SECOND

Next is the recorder. This will print a continuous permenant record of individual driver actions, correct or incorrect. It tells when and where errors are made, and the degree of error. In addition the Instant Recorder gives immediate indication of a student's performance.



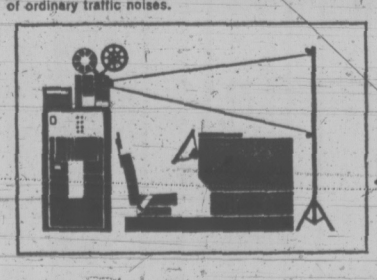
THIRD

We add a projector with special lens for projection on a wide screen. Also a full colour film library, so processed that it provides full vision of oncoming traffic patterns as well as traffic approaching from the rear and the sides. Sound is also added so that the student driver not only sees realism, but hears it as well with the reproduction of ordinary traffic noises.



FOURTH

To complete the filmed roadway, we have a daylight type wide screen. The realistic full colour films projected on this screen — plus the true traffic sounds — create the impression the student driver is actually driving a conventional car on the road. The combination of wide screen and wide angle lens gives a panoramic view which very closely approaches the field of vision of the human eye.



FIFTH

Finally we have perhaps the most important element — the instructor. Instructors in charge of the BCAA Mobile Driver Training Units are thoroughly trained and experienced in the use of the electronic equipment, and in evaluating the recorded information. They are fully competent to provide sound training which will result in safer drivers.

Birdwatchers Don't Mourn Summer

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

In case you haven't noticed, we're about to run out of summer.

Disturbing news? To some maybe, but certainly not to birdwatchers. For weeks now we've been aware of summer's impending demise and have not mourned its passing.

Quite the contrary, we've revelled in the joys that come with the seasonal transition to autumn. Not the least of these is the return of old friends from the north, friends who dropped in for a few weeks last spring on their way to summer homes that range anywhere from Sandspit to Siberia, friends sometimes called birds-of-passage but more often simply, migrants.

One of the more familiar of these migrants that grace our shores from March to May and again from August to November, is a delicate little gull — the smallest gull to regularly come our way — called Bonaparte's Gull; no, not after the Bonaparte of French military reknown but a distant relative of his, Charles Lucien Bonaparte.

But it is Bonaparte the gull and not Bonaparte the man that interest us today.

In autumn, on the other hand, their black nuptial headwear gives way to almost pure white, making the problem of identification doubly challenging.

Today, instead of a small gull with a black head you will have to be on the watch for a gull which, while still small, now sports a white head with two dark smudges behind the eyes.

Backheaded or otherwise, Bonaparte's Gulls have an interesting feeding technique (they share it with several species of gulls) which seems to show a degree of intelligence and foresight not normally attributed to these so-called lower forms of life.

I refer to their habit of standing belly-deep in the water, stomping their feet rapidly, stirring up hidden marine animals and expertly dispatching same with a quick snap of their beaks.

On the sands of Morecambe Bay, Lancashire, the Flookburgh cocklers use an adaption of the gull's marking time technique for catching cockles. The cockler's way involves the use of a device called a jumbo — a stout plank about four feet long with upright stays at each corner and wooden bars joining these for handles.

The cockler grips the handles, jambs the jumbo into the sand and rocks it back and forth. As the sand is stirred, the cockles rise to the surface where they are raked up and gathered.

Just why the agitation has this effect is not clear. Some feel that the creatures hidden in the sand at low tide mistake the disturbance for the pounding waves of the incoming tide. Thinking it time to rise and eat, the cockles expose themselves.

More than 33,000 pounds of them were jumboed into records of the Flookburgh fish market in one season recently.

As for the gulls, their stomping, marking time, puddling, as the action is variously known, simply makes food available that otherwise might go unnoticed. Who got the idea first, the gulls or the cocklers, remains a moot point but my money is on the gulls.

N.Y. Toughens Anti-Drug Law

NEW YORK (WP) — The toughest drug abuse law in the U.S. took effect in New York State today and officials are gearing up for an expected surge of cases that some critics say will overwhelm judicial and prison facilities.

The new anti-drug law proscribes stiff minimum prison sentences for convicted dealers and possessors of illicit narcotics and dangerous drugs. For some narcotics felonies, imprisonment becomes mandatory.

Where in the past the state dealt most harshly with traffickers in large lots of drugs, the new legislation makes it a felonly to sell or possess even relatively small amounts.

In addition, the law severely limits the old plea-bargaining system, under which defendants charged with drug felonies could plead guilty to lesser charges in exchange for lighter penalties. The law requires that some narcotics felons, if parolled from prison, must live out their lives on parole.

Both critics and supporters of the new law agree it is inevitable that the state's courts and prisons are about to become very busy places. With the sharp restrictions on plea-bargaining, thousands of criminal trails are expected, and Governor Nelson Rockefeller this week named 16 special court of claims judges to handle the influx. He is authorized to nominate a total of 100 special judges.

David Diamond, counsel to the New York State Drug Abuse Control Commission, said that $66 million has been set aside for the immediate necessities of getting judges, courtrooms, enforcement personnel and prison facilities "to handle the beginning influx."

Drug abuse control counsel Diamond conceded that demands on the state's penal and court system will increase, but said "we think we have the manpower and facilities to cope."

He said the law is designed, in part, to deter narcotics crime in the first place, by "scaring off" dealers and users with stiff new penalties. In the Albany area, he said, "there have already been indications that some drug dealers are holding last-minute going-out-of-business sales."

One police official estimated that under the old law, 96 per cent of those arrested copped a plea, pleading guilty to a lesser offence in return for helping police convict other drug offenders. He estimated that under the new law 96 per cent will go to trial.

In contrast to New York's strict marijuana laws, 11 states have relaxed their statutes over the past yer, removing criminal penalties on the private use of marijuana. Six other states are in the process of considering such reforms.

Nixon, Agnew Meet

Times News Services

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — President Richard Nixon and Vice-President Spiro Agnew met privately here today for two hours amid mounting reports of White House concern that Agnew may be indicted.

White House spokesman Gerald Warren denounced as "erroneous" and "false" televised speculation that Nixon would seek Agnew's resignation. But Warren conceded under questioning that he had no idea of what the vice-president wanted to discuss.

No details were available after the meeting.

The announcement of the Nixon-Agnew get-together came after CBS speculated that they would be meeting in a "showdown" session to discuss the vice-president's future.

A White House aide said that the president would be violating his own presumptions about Agnew's innocence if he asked him to step down.

Nonetheless, the Agnew issue was a major item of discussion this week in the San Clemente compound of the Western White House. There was a report that Nixon had asked for a "contingency plan" to fill the office of vice-president if Agnew should resign.

This was denied Friday by Warren — as it was at the White House when the same question was raised three weeks ago.

The 25th amendment to the U.S. constitution provides that the president shall pick a successor if the office of vice-president is vacant, subject to the approval of a majority of both houses of congress.

Ferry Line-Ups Shorter

B.C. Ferry line-ups at Swartz Bay were back to normal early today after the three-hour waits reported Friday for Labor Day weekend holidayers trying to get off Vancouver Island.

A ferry spokesman said Vancouver-bound motorists should encounter only one-hour waits for all sailings today.

The outlook for United States-bound tourists wasn't as bright.

A Black Ball ferry spokesman advised motorists to be in the line-ups at least two hours before scheduled sailings. Line-ups for the Anacortes ferry from Sidney were growing rapidly early today.

All Air Canada flights to Vancouver are booked until Sunday night, but there are a few seats left on Pacific Western flights later today.

Pay Frozen

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon asked the United States Congress on Friday to defer for 60 days a pending pay increase for federal employees, declaring that it would "needlessly fan the flames of inflation."

FILES MISSING AFTER SIT-IN

OTTAWA (CP) — Some confidential files on the controversial James Bay hydro development are missing following the end of an Indian Affairs building sit-in, according to department officials.

Following the sit-in in the 15-storey federal building, about 200 of the demonstrators drove their drive-yourself vans and rented buses to Parliament Hill, but left peaceably after a few Indian war dances when Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien could not meet with them.

During the early morning departure from the building Friday, police officers were on guard on the doors.

A departmental official said files on the James Bay project, a multi-million-dollar hydro power development in northwestern Quebec that will flood land claimed by native groups, were missing.

Most of the demonstrators were members of the youth association, a militant movement. They included Indians and Metis and were mostly between ages 15 and 30.

Now for a Better Way

The Friday night Commons vote that set the non-operating railway workers' wage increases on a scale that will result in a January 1, 1974, rate of $4.21 an hour should please everyone for the time being. The rate is a parliamentary compromise, moved by the Conservatives, after the members found the government's $4.15 too low and the NDP's $4.34 too high.

The striking workers have gained a higher base from which to wrest a still further increase from the arbitrator appointed under the Bill. The government won acceptance in principle of its solution, and the relatively small increase over its original figure should mean little in the final negotiating result, which may be still higher. The Conservatives won by having their figure accepted. And the NDP was able to cling to the principle of collective bargaining without having to implement it after it had, in this case, broken down. The railways, forced to raise wages by parliamentary action, will undoubtedly get aid through a subsidy.

That leaves the public. And if the workers have been temporarily satisfied to the point where they will get the trains running again, the relief will be nation-wide. That is still not clear.

The negative side has been irretrievably costly. The country must have suffered millions of dollars damage in lost business, delayed deliveries, closed-down factories, ruined vacations and tourist programs, and other tangible and intangible factors. But Parliament again came face to face with the need for a whole new approach to the problem of wage negotiations in essential services and there were signs that some effort may be made in this direction.

The answer would not need to be a legislated ban on striking, but a new means of equating individual needs and the public interest so that striking would not be an almost inevitable result of stalemate in negotiation. Such a solution will not be easily found, but the effort would be worthwhile in view of the saving that would ensue. A government with the courage to tackle it realistically would command wide public support, including that of many union workers.

One fact comes through clearly from the week's doings on Parliament Hill. Despite a variety of opinions on what wages striking workers should receive, members on both sides of the House closed ranks when Parliament was threatened by mob violence — violence, it should be noted, which the union leaders officially disowned and rejected. There was no disposition to panic, or to concede anything more than had been regularly planned in caucus, and the disturbance quickly took its proper place as a foolish error by a small minority of the demonstrators.

But the eventual return to work should not be the signal for Parliament to breathe a sigh of relief and forget the matter. The basic problem still remains in a dozen other guises, and the country's economy cannot fumble on much farther into the twentieth century dragging so clumsy an anchor.

Picture Speaks Louder Than Pieties

David McTaggart, Canadian commander of the nuclear protest vessel Greenpeace III was expelled from Tahiti by French authorities as an undesirable and has now reached home. With serious eye injuries, which McTaggart claims he received while being beaten by French officers who boarded the Greenpeace, the Canadian captain is obviously an embarrassment to French authorities.

They may find it even more embarrassing that one crew member smuggled out film of the boarding incident. It shows the ship's navigator bent almost double, surrounded by three French sailors, two of the sailors are holding the navigator in this uncomfortable position. Official French releases claim that Mr. McTaggart suffered his injuries while trying to throw two French sailors overboard. They also denied using truncheons on the Greenpeace crew. But the picture speaks louder than French pieties and shows that at least some violence was used against the crew.

The fact that the French government held the tests in the first place indicated disdain for world opinion. But to board a protesting vessel — perhaps two vessels since a similar New Zealand registered vessel has disappeared — on the high seas and manhandle the crew shows incredible arrogance.

In the modern world international incidents such as this are protested through cooly worded diplomatic notes. But at the very least the Canadian government should pursue the matter until Mr. McTaggart receives full medical recompense and the Greenpeace crew receives an apology from the French government.

Agreement on the Principle

OTTAWA — It is starkly obvious from the violence of Thursday that the strike leaders of the railway non-operating employees misread the temper of a section of their own supporters; in particular a group of Montreal militants. It would be tragic if they should now make a like mistake in reading the mind of the House of Commons.

In threatening on Thursday night to defy the directive in the Munro Bill, the union leaders may have been influenced in part by sympathetic references to the general plight in which their members found themselves. The House that evening, by a vote of 192 to 24, gave second reading — in theory approval in principle — to the railway legislation. While the majority was impressive, it could be said that the members were not unanimous since the New Democrats, supported by two rebellious Conservatives, were counted against the bill.

A law passed by a majority, even a small one, is of course no less valid than one commanding unanimous support. But in this case the strikers should also recognize a fact which may be less obvious. The House continually wrangles over the meaning of "principle." While the NDP chose to oppose second reading and denounced the terms of settlement proposed by the government, a careful reading of the debate will show that they did not challenge the principles which are fundamental to the bill.

Hostile Reception

It was precisely for this reason that David Lewis received an intermittently hostile reception from strikers on Parliament Hill chanting their defiant slogan: "We will not go back."

The basic principles of the legislation are simple. Parliament, in the national interest, decrees a resumption of operations by the companies and employees (a continuance in the case of unions not yet on strike). It also asserts its right to prescribe a settlement, which is partly specific and partly open to amendment through processes spelled out in the bill.

Any debate in Parliament will range beyond the precise propositions being considered. Every Liberal knew that the government would take a drubbing from the opposition for its general handling of the dispute. What else would be expected of any opposition worth its salt? In fact, however, the Conservative proposals in respect to this particular dispute were only marginally different from the Liberal proposals. Thus one amendment would have simply updated Mr. Justice Munroe by adjusting the terms to take account of increased living costs since the date of the award.

How close the two majority parties actually were was demonstrated rather dramatically on Friday morning when Jean Marchand drew almost as much applause from Conservatives as from Liberals for an impassioned speech in reply to Mr. Lewis.

From all this fire and eloquence, it might have appeared to interested visitors, however, that a basic rift had opened between the New Democrats and other parties. What was its nature?

Mr. Lewis did not challenge the argument of national necessity or the propriety of parliamentary intervention. He embraced it. "My hon. friends and I agree, of course, that a national rail strike causes extreme hardship on many sections of the country and that it is very deleterious to the economy as a whole. We, of course, agree that Parliament has a duty to the people of Canada and to the public interest and that there comes a point in a strike like a national railway strike at which members of Parliament must take the responsibility of making certain that rail operations are resumed . . ."

DAVID LEWIS
. . . there comes a point

Nor did the NDP leader have any doubts that the point for the assumption of his responsibility had been reached. In his argument with the strikers on the steps of the Centre Block, he contended that the return to work was not the important thing. This precipitated an angry and sustained outburst before he could even complete the thought. It was that nothing more was to be gained in open contest since the companies would not negotiate in good faith. In other words, the national interest coincided in the view of Mr. Lewis with the interest of the strikers; both now pointing to a parliamentary settlement.

Oddly, Mr. Lewis — possibly because the circumstances were so abnormal — seemed none too sure of his own argument on Thursday. According to his out-door version, the railways have never negotiated in good faith, which fits the contention that the non-ops have fallen badly behind other workers. Inside, he maintained that "there are seldom real negotiations between the railways and employees organizations", which seems reasonably consistent. But in the same speech and same paragraph, he added: "Let us not say that the situation has been awful over the years because as a whole both sides have behaved very well, even since 1966 . . ." How this assertion can be reconciled with the others is not clear.

It is certain, however, that Mr. Lewis was not opposed to a parliamentary settlement. His case was that the terms should be altered to make them fairer to the workers. Essentially, those in the Bill were based on the recommendations of Mr. Justice Munroe; Mr. Lewis would have proceeded from the recommendations of Professor Weldon, the union nominee. What's fair is a matter of judgment, not determinable by some convenient slide rule. As Mr. Marchand was later to point out, collective bargaining normally involves tussles of strength, not the successful pursuit of abstract justice.

Deemed Impartial

The government's case is that it was reasonable to proceed from the Munroe recommendations because the chairman of the Board is deemed to be impartial whereas the other nominees, whatever their qualifications may be, are nominated by parties to the labor dispute.

Although Mr. Lewis mentioned the defiant declaration of the union negotiating committee, he was most careful not to endorse it. He cited it as a reason why members of Parliament should "open their minds", but prefaced this interesting observation with the words: "I can merely say that this Parliament should not yield to threats of this sort or any other sort . . ."

It could not be otherwise, for the NDP holds power in three provinces and aspires to similar responsibilities in Ottawa. How then could it take the position that citizens who disagree with the law can disobey the law?

Thus the vote on "principle" cannot obscure the fact that Parliament was not in fact divided on basic principles. This ought not to be lost on the strikers' committee. If the past is a reasonable guide in these matters, they will recognize this reality now that the decision has been taken.

STUART UNDERHILL

Reflections by the Beach

There is something about Oak Bay that encourages the seaside philosopher. The sea and mountains, viewed across the beach on a calm day, induce serenity. The passing parade provides ample food for thought.

For example, there are those raiding parties from inland Victoria, filling large buckets with precious sand and pebbles. They don't like being asked if what they are doing might be an offence punishable under law.

Who is going to miss a teeny-weeny bit of beach? Suppose they do leave a hole, the next tide will fill it up with more shiny pebbles. No Oak Bay prowler car will come crunching along the strand on their account. Their buckets loaded, they vanish with their loot.

Their excavations remind the philosopher of the vulnerability of islands; he does not like to see them nibbled away, however minutely.

Everyone in Victoria is retired, semi-retired, or just plain tired. True or false? A newspaper columnist in Vancouver refers to this capital as Ennui-by-the-Sea. There are all those jokes about croquet, tea and crumpets, and dowagers in funny hats.

Eastern Ramparts

The ramparts of eastern Canada erect themselves along the lower mainland of B.C. They are more effective at keeping the islanders out than they are in containing the mainland hordes. They crushingly outnumber us, may soon over-run us here. If they cannot understand us, how shall we understand them?

Their vanguard already is installed in the quaint and possibly crumbling legislative buildings. When they stand tiptoe to look out their little windows, they see another B.C. They are not trying to run businesses. Their thoughts are not dwelling on the order and orthodoxy considered desirable in Oak Bay and its environs. They do not heed the shrill cries of warning that rise from the splintered parties of the middle class.

In their view of history the pendulum has completed its swing across a century in which successive provincial governments have worked hand in glove with wheeler-dealers and big companies. Now a government is hand in glove with the opposite side, the trade unions whose contest with the dragon Management is never-ending.

Martin Robin is a persuasive chronicler of former times in his book The Rush for Spoils. He recalls an interview which writer Pierre Berton had in 1958 with that colossus of private enterprise, H. R. MacMillan.

MacMillan said: "The one great difference between B.C. and the rest of Canada is that a much higher proportion of people here . . . is on somebody else's payroll and a much lower proportion satisfied farmers or small independent capitalists. That's why it's considered more of a sin to make money here than in any other part of the country . . . No, not sin . . . that is not the word I'm looking for . . . 'offence against society' is what I mean."

Consider these statistics: registered voters in the August 1972 provincial election, 1,343,357; total paid workers in B.C. in 1972, 794,000; total union membership, 332,091.

Scott Wallace, Progressive Conservative MLA for Oak Bay, observed in a recent speech: "The New Democratic government although elected by only 39.59 per cent of the voters, rapidly proceeded to repay a debt to the union membership which over the New Democratic Party's lean years had helped sustain the party and finally had helped it to become government."

How far they were prepared to go in repaying the debt was demonstrated by their "total capitulation" to union demands which ended the recent five-day B.C. ferry strike, Wallace said.

He spelled out the impact the settlement would have on the B.C. economy. An 18 per cent wage increase would be regarded by workers in other industries as the minimum guideline, thus spurring inflation. The government's disregard of the illegal aspect of the ferry workers' strike would encourage others to flout the law.

His speech won approving applause from his audience, the Victoria Kiwanis Club. Businessmen, particularly those who have been cuffed by recessional cycles, flinch from the insatiable demands of the unions. Where is it all going to end? they ask and they have only one answer: in disaster.

But the men in the legislative buildings are not looking at the tidy business community of Victoria, last outpost of the small capitalist which last August elected two quasi-conservatives, one Liberal and one Social Credit.

Turbulent Masses

Their eyes are fixed on the turbulent masses of Vancouver, and on the hard-handed men in the construction industry and mines and logging camps and fisheries. They know that among them the ferry settlement is not talked of as a disaster. Far from it. "If the ferry workers got 18 per cent, maybe we can get 20," is the more likely theme. Shake the money tree and the fruit will fall.

When Britain's Labour Party was swept into power in 1945 the late Aneurin Bevan taunted the defeated Conservatives with the cry: "We are the masters now!" Perhaps the NDP is too young in office to make that claim. Rene Levesque, the fox of Quebec politics, sees them rather as "a bunch of dedicated kids" learning as they go along.

Tucked away in a cove on the coast of South Devon there is a melancholy sight. Huddled against the foot of a cliff are the remains of a dozen cottages. Only the walls are left and they are fast disintegrating.

At the turn of the century those ruins were a lively fishing village. Then "they" came and scooped away ton after ton of shingle from the beach for ballast for a dock at nearby Plymouth. With the next great winter storm the waves did not merely surge up the beach and run foaming back to the sea. The new contours hurled them high in the air. Tons of water crashed on the roofs of the cottages, smashing them and drowning the trapped inhabitants.

There is plenty of room for philosophers on the Oak Bay beaches. Choose your own log. Bring a paddle for safety's sake.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

By Freeman King

For those who wander along the roads and trails there are many oddities that can be seen, especially among the very old trees.

If you travel along Finlayson Road over the bridge from Goldstream picnic site you will see many old broad leaf maples mingled with cedars and red alders.

One maple in particular is close to the road. One would say that it is several hundred years old. It has many burls that can be seen as far up as the crown and there are other features which make it fascinating.

The trunk contains many holes, some as small as golf balls while others are over a foot wide. The shallow holes have apparently not been made by man. They take various shapes and around the edges of the holes they show the new growth of wood.

The entrance to the holes are worn smooth by some animals, though they don't appear to nest in them. One looks as if a racoon used it, as claw marks lead into the hole.

The burls on the tree seem to have a regular space between them.

It is also completely covered with a very heavy growth of moss which reaches to the crown. It appears from examining the insides of the larger holes that the wood is dead and starting to crumble here, although the tree's new growth is still very sound, and no doubt putting on its annual ring of wood and bark.

Close by another maple has grown with three more or less main trunks shaped like a three-tined pitchfork, which would remind any old-time Prairie farmer of the steam threshing rig.

Nearby these two trees a very old red cedar stump which fell many years ago contains three springboard holes at the upper end of the 12-foot stump. Many plants, ranging from lichens to flowers and shrubs, grow from the top. Therefore it has become one of nature's finest flower pots.

Not too far away there is another old maple that is no longer growing, yet 20 feet up the trunk there are several growing specimens of bracket fungi. It is apparent that some of the fungi are several years old because you can see the ring growth.

One fungus is at least two feet in length and the underside, or spooring face, is clean and white.

Nature always has so many mysteries for us to see.

An Old Tory Game: Swallow the Leader

By PETER REILLY

On a fine spring day in 1972, not long after I had announced my candidacy for the Progressive Conservative nomination in Ottawa West, I dropped in to see John Diefenbaker in his Centre Block office, just across from Bob Stanfield's.

I've harbored an affection for the old man ever since he took over the Tories. He was a radical, a populist, brooked no interference with his views, and he accomplished two things while he was leader that I think are lasting and admirable.

The first was the Bill of Rights.

The second, which has already changed the face of Canada, was his democratization of his party. When he talked about the domination of the Bay St. bochoos he knew what he was talking about, and he took the party away from them. He made it possible for Canadians of every region, every language and religion to feel comfortable within the Progressive Conservative party, and that has led to its becoming the most truly national political party in Canada.

Anyway, there we were in his office and he was, as usual, giving advice:

"You can win easily in Ottawa West. Forget about unemployment, inflation, all that stuff. The issue is bilingualism. You can win on that. Those Camp followers across the hall don't know anything about it . . ."

Well, as it turned out, unemployment, inflation and all that stuff turned out to be bigger issues than bilingualism. There were lots of things wrong with the manner in which the Trudeau government had chosen to implement the principle, and I said so during the campaign.

Lo, within a few days after the election, the government sent Bud Drury, grand panjandrum of Westmount and president of the treasury board, scuttling across Wellington St. to the National Press Building with a whole new language manifesto. It paralleled in almost every regard the recommendations I'd made during the campaign, and only my native Irish modesty forbade me to claim credit for it.

Without going into tiresome

details, the principles enunciated by a sweating Drury promised that civil servants with tenure would not find their careers impeded because they either could not or would not learn a second language, and that their unions would be consulted in all aspects of the implementation program.

A few days after Parliament convened on Jan. 8, Trudeau hinted darkly at the introduction of a resolution that was going to make those rotten Tories put up or shut up about bilingualism.

When it turned out that the famous put-up-or-shut-up resolution was merely a recitation of the Drury post-election apologia, most PCs were delighted. Clearly, it represented a victory for the party's position, since it contained, among other things, principles which had been put in the form of amendments to the Official Languages Act by PC members in 1969, and which had been contemptuously dismissed by the Liberals at that time.

Not all of my colleagues were delighted, however. They couldn't tell you precisely why, but gradually, it came out. They were going to oppose it chiefly because Stanfield was in favor of it. Caucus meetings abounded during which the resolution began to assume the proportions of a declaration of war.

Canadian soldiers were sent off on a bootless venture to Vietnam with less debate. Piddling increases in the old-age pension were whistled through caucus with almost no dissent. The filibuster which ought to have been staged to protest against the unemployment insurance fraud of 1972 fizzled out before it really got started.

As the time for introduction and debate of the resolution grew closer, the pressure grew. Sharing a sofa with Mr. and Mrs. Diefenbaker at the Ottawa airport one day, I got it. Shaking his head, the chief wondered why I was going to support it.

"Simply because it embodies my whole election plank on bilingualism ought to be enough reason," I replied.

"Huh. You're going along with the Camp followers."

Jack Horner, a large, cowboy-booted person given to wearing sport coats that defy description, went into my riding to address a group called the Canadian Loyalist Association, whose chief preoccupation appears to be restaging the Wolfe-Montcalm number and settling things once and for all.

To say he bad-mouthed me for my stand on bilingualism would be an understatement, so I shall say only that the kindest thing he said about me was that I was "a shallow person."

There was the famous Diefenbaker diatribe on June 4, during which he turned his back on Stanfield and went on for the better part of an hour, turning toward him, neck craned forward like a turkey buzzard, long enough only to say that "me too was never the slogan on a standard that would make for a fighting opposition. . . ."

Stanfield took it; he took it all, but it is a shame that he had to.

As it happened, there was more. There was a deliberate and highly organized effort to undermine his leadership, and the men behind it were Diefenbaker, as ex-officio chaplain, and Horner, whip of the rump caucus.

The dissidents were well warned where their course was leading. On June 6, the day the vote was due, party whip Tom Bell told a crowded caucus that "we could stand two or three negative votes if members had real problems in their ridings, but a dozen or more will be interpreted — and make no mistake about it — as an attack on Bob Stanfield."

Far from restraining the Diefenhorner gang, this admonition appeared to give them new heart. Emissaries were all over the place, soliciting signatures on a kind of loyalty oath. Apparently some of the more timid members wanted documentary proof that enough others were going to vote against so that they wouldn't be among a handful caught between a rock and a hard place. The word was out that the Chief wanted at least 15 votes.

HORNER

DIEFENBAKER

Catapulting the merely bizarre to the incredible, Richard Jackson, parliamentary bureau chief for the Ottawa Journal and a journalist who has never been seen, to my knowledge, to agonize overlong about objectivity, burst into the lobby minutes before the vote, bellowing: "Surely there are 20 of you guys with enough guts to stand up for the English language."

As it turned out, there were 16 of them with enough of whatever it takes to play the old Tory game of swallow the leader. They succeeded only in furthering their Neanderthal image.

Stanfield has remained consistently cool about the whole thing; it remains to be seen whether he'll punish anyone. He's been advised to, God knows.

Among the advisers is Claude Ryan, who wrote after the vote that unless something was seen to be done to denigrate the nay-sayers, the impression would be abroad in Quebec that Stanfield condoned the anti-French tone of their dissident vote, as well as their well-organized affront to his own leadership.

The 16 renegades will, of course, claim that it was a question of principle.

An Indecent Haste to Spend

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

At the moment, Mr. Bob Porter is a public relations man, No. 2 in the hierarchy, at Crown Zellerbach, a rather healthy forest giant. He is in a salary range of $17,000-$18,000. This month Bob Porter will become a public relations man, No. 2 in the hierarchy, at Bob Strachan's government auto insurance baby. He will be in a salary range of something over $20,000 and insurance people estimate it may be as high as $24,000.

This has nothing to do with the fortunate Mr. Porter, but with a small disturbing pattern that has become apparent and is sweeping through to a wider audience and does disturb a number of people who hold the best wishes for the idealistic new NDP government of this province. It is that the new people in power are rather too quickly fulfilling the old cliche that socialists are too careless with the other people's money. Mr. Porter is just a symptom, but he's an accurate one.

There is the matter, first of all, of the private insurance companies (who got what they deserved) filing their silly law suit and charging that Strachan is stealing away their people at salaries above the going rate. There is nothing wrong with the stealing: after all, we supposedly need top people to run Strachan's B.C. Insurance Corporation when it takes over all car insurance on March 1.

But surely Mr. Strachan, who must be still cowering in the cupboard after that humiliation handed his commonsense reputation by the ferry workers, is being rather loose with the facts in his denials of being over-generous with our money. He claims to be paying going rates. He's not.

Gordon Root, who is to head the p.r. operation, was hired at some $35,000. Bob Jones is supposed to be getting $27,500. The BCIC has hired men from Wawanesa, Safeco, two from Commercial Union and the Guardian, to mention a few. None of them has complained about the salary increases. Every auto underwriter in Vancouver will be out of work on March 1. A happy income for many of them has been $10,000. The ones who've gone to the BCIC find themselves making $15,000.

There is the matter of the BCIC grabbing holus-bolus seven storeys in the Royal Centre, probably the most expensive rental space in town. It is true that the BCIC is to take over the All-State building in New Westminster? Some 17 service centres have to be built around the province, to assess damages to cars involved in accidents. There are reports of an exorbitant sum paid for a location in Haney, without competitive bids. Abbotsford sources say a property there went for $110,100 when the BCIC, by shopping around, could have paid as little as $20,000.

In all this is the element of speed verging on panic that has marked the rather questionable insistence on the BCIC making that March 1 target. It is understood that more experienced government insurance people brought in from Saskatchewan and Manitoba, general manager Norman Bornick for example, have cautioned that a more conservative, if less spectacular, date be agreed to. Political pride has overcome actuarial prudence.

Money supposedly solves anything and to achieve that date, they're throwing around the money, as the above purchases indicate. In the same way as the BCIC, without asking for tenders, threw its $125,000 per month computer contract to IBM without asking for bids. The other computer giants now claim they could have done if for less.

There's a sense of the money being committed first, the questions coming later.

I would suggest that this realization is coming to a rather wider proportion of people these last few days, particularly since the NDP were played for such patsies on the illegal ferry strike. Poor Mr. Strachan and the cabinet were revealed as compliant eunuchs who had to buy their way out of a self-induced trap. We'll be hearing too much of that 15-21 per cent increase in wage negotiations to come.

What Mr. Barrett, in his freshman year that ends this week, does not realize yet is that there is a cumulative effect in the public mind on all these niggling little matters. His own salary being jumped to $52,000; $6,000 hush money being given to deputy ministers he wants to — but can't — shove out; a trifle too many non-entities being elevated to $17,000 flack jobs — the bits and pieces multiply and finally sink through.

We know Mr. Bennett, overly parsimonious as so many personal millionaires tend to be, went too far in one direction. But Mr. Barrett and colleagues, an unfathomable piggy bank before them, are in grave danger of fulfilling all the stale predictions of the free enterprise kneejerkers: that socialists once let into the candy store tend to go wild.

Rail Workers Have Lot to 'Catch Up'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — As any major strike unfolds, all but one issue on which the unions and management have disagreed, usually falls away. That issue is money — cents per hour — and percentage increases.

This has happened in the rail strike. It is understandable, although unfortunate, the "other issues" help explain the failures of the bargaining process implicit in the call of the general railway strike.

Stuck to Reports

Jack Weldon, an economics professor at McGill, was the union nominee on the conciliation board in this dispute. The chairman of the board was Judge F. C. Munroe, of the B.C. Supreme Court.

Essentially, the rail unions stuck firmly to Weldon's minority report until the general strike was rolling. Essentially, management stuck somewhere short of Munroe's (chairman's) report, until after the general strike was on. The management indicated it was prepared to talk "Munroe."

Of course, management knows that the act for the maintenance of rail operations which Parliament is passing would have to embody the money recommendations of Munroe. If the government legislated higher (that is toward Weldon) or lower it would destroy the future of all conciliation board chairmen.

Jobs Disappearing

Weldon's recommendations arise out of the following interpretations. In my opinion the first three of these are unassailable.

First, there has been an extraordinary disappearance of jobs in the railways. Graphically, this has gone on steadily since dieselization in the early 1950s. In the last 20 years, the rail labor force has been cut almost in half, while gross rail productivity has gone up and up.

Secondly, in the past decade there has developed a remarkably high attrition in the rail labor force. That is, through resignation and retirement, the turnover in rail employees has steadily climbed. It now averages about 18 per cent a year. This attribition is highest among newer employees.

Thirdly, percentage settlements of the past have prejudiced the earnings of the base rate workers on the railways. Through a series of such percentage increases, the men in their thousands at their lowest rates have fallen further and further behind both their high-rate colleagues and other unionized workers, say in steel or cars, who usually get increases spelled out in cents per hour, not percentages.

Pension Confusion

The pension situation in railways is in confusion, at least in the employees mind. The companies' offer in these negotiations to sweeten pensions was jeopardized by the over-generous claims of the companies on what their offer meant in terms of percentage increase in the package.

Productivity of rail workers has increased greatly for many years. It shows no signs of ending or reversing. It has been and promises to be substantially higher than productivity gains in manufacturing industries.

At this stage of the national crisis caused by the rail strike, most people, including the parties, have lost interest in all but the money settlement.

"Weldon" recommended a percentage increase of 10.79 each year for two years, but he indicated the first year's increase might well be put in cents per hour rather than in percentages. Thus his money argument can be reduced to 39 cents an hour, and 10.79 per cent the second year.

right honorable gentleman, that he dearly loves to re-

Between "Munroe" at 30 cents an hour and "Weldon" at 39 cents an hour we have the crudest, simplest difference between union and management.

It will be sad if the ministers of labor and transport do not deal with Weldon's contentions about "catch up," about the absolute necessity for job security, about the imperative that company pensions claims be examined by a neutral inquirer and about the need to end the charade that rail workers really have a free process of collective bargaining.

Gumbo's Stuck With It

By JOHN NICHOL

Word has reached Ottawa that the voters of Gumbo Junction are feeling alienated from the Canadian Dream. The reeve put it this way: "The whole system is run by the establishment from Central Canada. Our member of Parliament isn't even on the Parliamentary Restaurant Committee. Separatism is not a dirty word out here any more."

And Ottawa is responding. It was announced today that there will be a Gumbo Junction Economic Conference later this year. Gumbo Junction will be represented by the reeve, Claymore Compost, and the acting postmistress, Mrs. Silo T. Windburn. Ottawa will send five cabinet ministers, four calling birds, three French hens, two turtle doves, and a partridge in a pear tree.

We are fortunate indeed to have with us today the head planner for the conference. He is a faceless senior civil servant and wishes to remain anonymous. That is why he is wearing the black bag with the eye holes.

Q. Welcome Professor! Why is this conference being held?

A. We are aware that the voters of Gumbo Junction feel alienated from the Canadian Dream. They said so at the last election. The government lost both polls. Six to three in one, and nine to four in the other. That sends up a pretty clear smoke signal. Something must be done.

Q. Like what?

A. Well we are going to hold a conference, meet these people on their home ground, and listen to their complaints. This is a vast country, with widely divergent cultural roots and economic problems. We want to make sure the people of Gumbo Junction know that we care about their role in Confederation.

Q. So what will you do?

A. We will present a working paper which analyses the particular specific problems of this vital part of Canada. We have had it prepared at the Royal Central Canadian Institute of Socio-Economic Research of Downtown Toronto. We got it cheap—only $600,000.

Q. Couldn't you buy Gumbo Junction for half that?

A. You could — but what would you do with it?

Q. A good question! Will you make specific proposals?

A. We will indeed. We will increase train service from one train a week to two — and we will add an extra boxcar and a brakeman. We are putting sixty students from Roachdale College in there next summer to tackle the roach problem. And we plan to set up a joint Federal-Gumbo Junction Long Range Planning Group.

Q. What sort of problems will it tackle?

A. Pressing problems which cause alienation!

Q. For instance?

A. Should the train station be converted from coal oil to propane? Should McGregor be forbidden to burn stumps on the road to Bullhead Bay? Things like that.

Q. What else will you do?

A. We will make the local officials feel needed. We will ask the reeve to meet the Queen. We will take the postmistress to Cape Kennedy to watch the launching of the next Telesat Satellite. We may even send Les Feux Follets to perform at the Fish Derby.

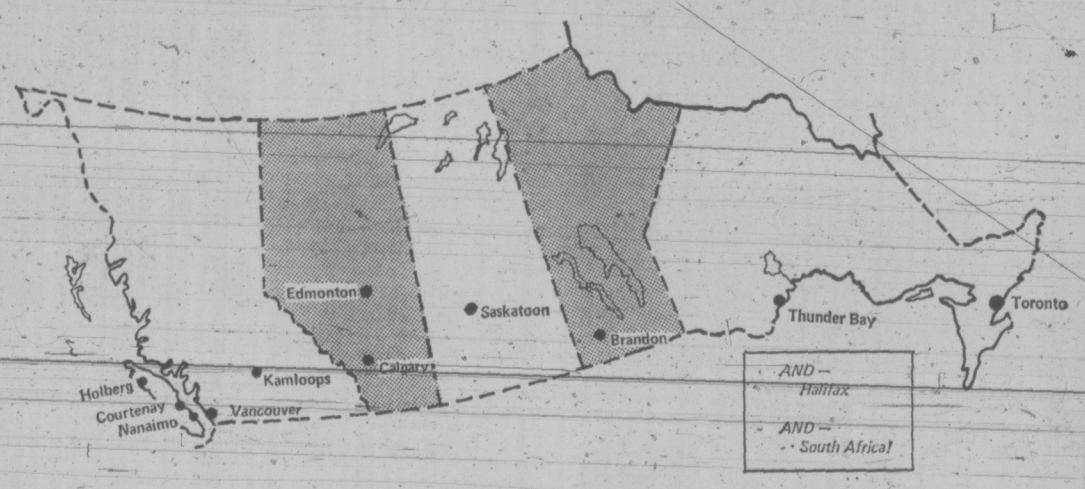
Q. And do you think that these programs will be gratefully received?

A. I know so. We are all Canadians after all! We are not a melting pot. Our cultural currents run deep, co-mingled but separate, individual but together. There is a time to sow and a time to reap. Per ardua ad astra! Ad more usque ad mare! What God has joined together let no man put asunder!

Q. Thank you Professor! Anything further?

A. Yes, I just hope you press fellows will come out to Gumbo and get the story straight for once.

To Get Money Fast- Study This Map



It shows where recent buyers of Victoria and Island homes came from. Places like Brandon, Man., and Thunder Bay, far away at the Lakehead. If you want to sell your home fast, you have to tell people in places like these.

How can you do it?

It's very simple—list your house with NRS through Block Bros. Full details and pictures will appear in the NRS catalogue, distributed to 1,400 salesmen in B.C. and Alberta and available to any interested person (including other Realtors) in or out of these provinces. When a prospect in Pincher Creek or Prince Rupert reads about your house, he can place an offer through his local NRS affiliate or Block Bros. office. Makes selling — and buying—so easy!

The Canadian Dream

Photos, interviews by Lon Wood

Some 42,000 young people are ready to throng Greater Victoria campuses, kindergartens and grade schools. What do they want out of life? There are probably 42,000 answers — six of which are contained here.

Antonio Manuel Couto De Sousa wants to be rich. Not just well-to-do, but loaded — rolling in it.

Tony's case is not put in brash tones, but in a soft-spoken manner infused with values seemingly beyond his 17 years:

"My father is a simple man. He has lots of friends — makes his own wine. Our house is like Grand Central Station every night after work."

Work for the senior De Sousa — and most Portuguese Canadians in Victoria, says Tony — is gardening.

"We have always been on the poor side of things, and likely because of this I have always wanted to be very, very rich."

Tony was born on the island of San Miguel in the Azores and came to Canada with two older sisters, an older brother and his parents when he was five.

"My grandfather is still there. He had a fishing fleet but became too old to operate it. He still has a lot of land on San Miguel — about 29 or 30 acres."

And that's where Tony's dream comes in.

"I've always had the dream of making the isle of San Miguel a big tourist resort. Victoria could always be my home, though — I was raised here.

The path Tony hopes to take oscillates between a career as a tax lawyer and one as a naval architect:

"I've always been fascinated by the sea and catching fish — that's from my grandfather I suppose. And I love boats. Sometimes I just sit down and think I might become a naval architect — I do read up on it, make maps and draw boats."

When he starts Grade 11 at Mount Douglas senior secondary next week, he'll dig right in with zeal.

"I'm on an academic bent, and if I really have to work at something, I enjoy it more. I used to get lousy marks — then I made up my mind not to get caught short.

"There was no pressure from my folks, but a lot of obvious disappointment had the same effect.

"I started going up to a lot of teachers and asking them what specifically they wanted of me. It brought my marks up to an A average."

Though he does not attend church, Tony names God as his sole idol.

"I don't like to listen to priests — I don't like to confess to them either. I think they (all religion) refer to the same power — and belief in this power is something you can do all the time, anywhere.,

Tony said that only due to his upbringing is he able to give faith a second thought. Even so-called Jesus freaks have missed the boat in this regard, he says.

"They've done their thing — taking dope or whatever — now it's just another thing on the list, or over-compensation. I doubt there's much real faith behind it."

"I get a lot of philosophy from her. She's very good at making people see things. She's always wanted to be a psychiatrist — she's got the brains. She's the black sheep of the family. .

"I've always said I'd be a bachelor, but I'll probably have a wife and family — someone like my youngest sister."

Food for Thought and the Kids

Some day, Evelyn James will load her sons into a car and strike out for her birthplace the tiny fishing village of Cape Mudge, on Quadra Island off Campbell River.

"I'll go to Mudge mainly to learn Kwakuitl, my native tongue," she says. "I was two when I was taken to the city, and each year ever since I've wanted more to pick up on my background."

Life in the city was no picnic for Evelyn — now 23.

"I was the youngest of 13 brothers and sisters—and to this day I have no idea how my parents managed," she said.

At 14 she bore her son Gilbert, now 8. Then — dismissed from Grade 8 — she took up life in Vancouver's skid row:

"I've been through it all — but I'm above it now and nothing is going to bring me down."

This fall Evelyn starts first year university transfer courses at Camosun College. She has been at the University of Victoria since January — all through the summer — making up her Grade 12.

"I admit I'm a little tired of reading now, but it will still be another seven years before I'm done," she says.

Her goal is to become a physical education teacher in the public school system and to study Indian history for instruction at native schools.

"Above all I want to be able to look after my kids and give them what I never had — a set of encyclopedias, new furniture — Gilbert wants a lot of things," she said.

For herself there will be driving lessons and a car, for "real independence."

Evelyn is permanently separated from her husband — father of two-year-old Maury. Both boys usually go everywhere with their mom, who views them more as inspiration than burden:

"There are times I give up — then I see them smiling. That does it."

In her spare time Evelyn plays league softball and basketball, enjoys cooking and plans to work as a B.C. human resources department volunteer, making regular visits to an elderly Indian woman who has no family.

"I want you to tell everyone — especially those who have known me — that you can get on top," she said — raising her voice slightly — after the interview in her tiny Hampton Road cottage. "I thought it would be hard going back — but so far, so good."

EVELYN . . . so far so good

Choice of Two Beats In Balmy Manhattan

Dean Clarkson was in Grade I when his father died — and he admits trying to fill the gap has sometimes made school tough for him.

"I like to talk to people in class — which is considered being bad," says the tow-headed nine-year-old, adding that his eagerness for companionship motivates him to chat out of place.

"When I didn't have anyone to play with, my dad would play soccer with me. Now if I don't have anyone, and my mom's out, I'm alone."

Dean, an only child, spent the latter part of this summer collecting rocks, riding his five-speed and building a tree fort in his yard at 1879 Forrester. And going into Grade 5 at Richmond elementary means one thing:

"Work harder and pay attention to what the class is doing — not talking or fooling — that's what my plan is this year. And I hear we'll be learning more about the explorers in Grade 5 — that's interesting to me."

For the future he is looking towards becoming either a policeman or a news reporter.

"I will live in New York — I think it's warm there and I'd like working in a place I haven't been before. I would like writing, and asking people what they think and all that — or operating a police car during an emergency."

Dean's faith in an end to inflation is implicit, for his financial plans include "saving $5,000 to buy a car and a house."

Right now Dean's finances are underwritten by an allowance he gets for cutting and watering the lawn, emptying the garbage and cooking "some" lunches for he and his mom.

"I can cook Alpha-Ghetti and macaroni and cheese. I think I could make a pizza.

The person he admires most now is his 11-year-old friend Douglas Gill.

"He' s nice to me and we've been through a lot together — like climbing Mount Tolmie and stuff."

Sitting cradled in the garden swing in his yard he concedes one final point:

"Actually, I'd rather not go to school at all. Why can't we be born intelligent?"

THE SECOND DEGREE

Ann John will likely have the most well-adjusted pets on the block.

Ann, 17, plans to obtain a degree in psychology at UVic, then a degree in biology.

"Psychology will support me — in the field of social work — and the biology is just because I am interested in animals and plants," she says.

To her first year on campus, the graduate of Esquimalt senior secondary takes a B average—and a $200 government scholarship.

"I've been through most of the buildings at UVic, but now I'll be looking for changes in the system as it differs from high school," she said.

ANN

Once out of university, Ann will seek a simple life:

"I'm not very extravagent. I would like to travel. Keeping active all the time, being interested in people — that's important. And like everyone else, I want happiness."

In her final year of high school, Ann kept active through involvement in drama, the school annual, and the math, biology and scholarship clubs.

Outside school she teaches Sunday school and works with Junior Achievement. (Her company this year, Sticky Fingers, produced glue and paid a 10 per cent divident on its dollar shares.)

For the summer Ann worked as a lab assistant in the Esquimalt secondary's biology department. For her first year at UVic she will share a suite with two other girls and will hopefully resume part-time work in a department store.

LISA . . . the name stays

Long Life, a Place to Live and a Good Job

The First Year Makes You Big

Sitting on a bale of hay in her backyard, 6½-year-old Lisa Robin Mitchell contemplates entering her first year of school:

"They have a wood centre to make things—and there will be dress-ups. We'll have a lunch hour—then I'll have lunch. And there are no desks—just cushions on the floor, and couches."

Lisa will be attending Sundanee elementary, the Greater Victoria school board's experimental less-structured school, which opens Tuesday for the first time.

Lisa continues:

"Going to school means I'm not little any more—but I didn't mind being little."

The Mitchell yard at 2655 Roseberry has a vegetable garden, and Lisa's parents also keep honeybees. This combination seems to have influenced her plans for the future:

"Did you see the corn? We've got peas, carrots, corn and tomatoes—and mommy built the fort.

"I'm going to have my special kind of place out in the country. I'm going to be a kindergarten teacher—but we won't stay in the room. We'll go out all the time, learning about animals. I'll let them ride my pony named Penny, feed the goats, ducks, geese. I have one dollar and seven cents. This should go towards saving for the pony but I'll probably spend it."

In her spare time in the country, Lisa plans to plant peach and pear trees around her little cottage. She says her friend, six-year-old Joanne Munch, will likely operate a kindergarten "right beside me."

"Maybe we'll live together—yes, and we are not going to change our names. It will be just Lisa and Joanne."

One might think the most exciting summer job a 14-year-old could get would be scrubbing Haida the Sealand killer whale daily with a bucket of hot suds and a long-handled scrub brush.

This summer the job was Brian Fowler's — and although it wasn't all you might imagine, it did pay for purchase of a stereo set for his bedroom and back-to-school items for the ninth grade at Lansdowne junior secondary.

He did wash Haida daily — after a day in the lot affixing bumper stickers he would take soap and brush to her life-sized effigy mounted at the marina entrance.

"It has to be done every day," he grins. "The seagulls — you know. . . ."

Since Grade 6, Brian's goal has been to learn electronics through the armed forces.

"They pay your way through university and pay you while you learn," he says. "You'd have to pay twice as much on your own.

"Some others I know feel they will join too — there are challenges and each challenge teaches you independence. I could retire early enough to go into business myself, maybe."

Brian's parents were both in the air force when they met in Alberta, but if he shares their feeling for the military he is less enthused at present about the forces leading to matrimony:

"I'll be staying a bachelor. Anyway, married life will probably be gone in the next 10 to 20 years. I wish I was wrong — for those millions of people who are now married.

"And women's lib — that's one thing I hate. Women should be treated as they are now, only not so harshly. With a women's lib revolution there won't be another couple left in the world."

In his spare time Brian plays Babe Ruth hardball and basketball with the City of Victoria league. He also enjoys salmon fishing with his father, an Oak Bay policeman.

For the future Brian predicts atomic power will curb an energy crisis and science will come up with cures for cancer and tuberculosis.

And what does he want out of life?

"A long life, place to live and a good job — somewhere in the west, likely . . . up-Island where there is fresh air, fish and lots of room."

KEN KIERNAN
. . . still active

. . . And Now There Are Three

Fired by B.C. voters a year ago this week, the 17 former members of the Social Credit government cabinet have not been recruited into the corridors of business or establishment power.

Only half a dozen are still actively engaged in politics, another half dozen have retired, and the rest have returned to their former occupations or found jobs where they can.

Of the remaining political aspirants, three are still sitting in the house — Frank Richter, Pat Jordan and James Chabot.

Dan Campbell and Grace McCarthy are working as $1,000 a month administrative assistants to the Leader of the Opposition, who since W. A. C. Bennett retired does not exist.

Phil Gaglardi, 60, may be the only former cabinet minister with a chance of being nominated for leadership of the Social Credit party this fall. He has returned to his home town Kamloops to look after business and religious interests, while actively campaigning for the Socreds.

Other cabinet ministers who have followed Bennett's example and retired into a mellow old age are Wesley Black, 63, who went on a world cruise with the newly-defeated premier; Waldo Skillings, 66, who also cruised, and is now fighting court cases for unemployment payments; and 78-year-old William Chant.

Ken Kiernen, 51, is working part-time as first vice-president of the Social Credit League, and helping manage party headquarters in Vancouver.

The two lawyers of the former cabinet, Donald Brothers and Leslie Peterson, have resumed legal practice in Victoria and Vancouver respectively.

Ray Williston, former minister of lands, forests and water resources, is working as a consultant to the pulp and paper industry in New Brunswick.

Ralph Loffmark has returned to his professorship of commerce and business administration at the University of B.C.

Perhaps the biggest tumble from power happened to former Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford. Injured in a New Westminster demonstration which saw the B.C. cabinet manhandled by angry workers, Shelford was unemployed for four months.

He found a job as municipal clerk in remote Fort St. James, which he held for less than two months. He now works for a lumbermen's association in Terrace.

Cabinet ministers become eligible for a pension at age 55 after serving a minimum three legislative sessions.

The pension is 3 per cent of the highest average ministerial salary received, multiplied by the years of service.

Your Whole Life Can Be Summed-Up in One Push

By WAYNE HARDING

Computer technologists are among the first to acknowledge this. One of them is T. D. Stirling, director of the experimental Computing Science Program at Simon Fraser University.

"We are sinking deeper and deeper into a quagmire," says Stirling, confirming that data banks are collecting personal histories faster than ever before while governments and industry fail to exercise significant controls over what and how much information about a man's personal life is collected.

At the same time, access to this information by corporate subscribers who are able to call up an individual's history at the push of a button, is also increasing.

Stirling is chairman of a committee of the Canadian Information Processing Society which was formed to identify areas where compufers have a "dehumanizing influence" on society, including the question of invasion of privacy.

The committee's work is on-going and Stirling suggests one of its duties will be to set up some guidelines hopefully to govern the now indiscriminate collection of personal data.

It was the lack of such guidelines that particularly concerned a federal task force which last year looked into the question of the right to privacy versus computer technology.

The task force reported:

- There are virtually no safeguards to counter the tendency of private business and governments to gather more information than they appear to immediately need;
- There are no safeguards against collection of information on racial background or religious and political persuasion which could be the basis of discrimination;
- There are no controls to insure that "Third party" information, based on conversation with neighbors or acquaintances, does not get into a citizen's personal records at a data bank.

One of the most distressing findings of the task force was the degree of inaccuracy in data storage systems. In one test, 75 per cent of respondents found errors in their personal files which they would not otherwise have seen.

Department stores have pioneered data banks to provide themselves with credit ratings of their customers. So far, most of these are internal systems but there would be obvious advantages if these store-houses of personal information were integrated — advantages for the merchants.

The largest store-house of such information exists in the network of credit bureaus throughout Canada.

W. G. Ellis, president of the Credit Bureau of Victoria, expects computerized storage of credit reports will be completed by the end of the decade.

"But then, what is a computer anyway?" asks Ellis rhetorically. 'We have files here. What difference is there if the information is on tapes instead of paper?"

The only difference, Ellis sees, is that, using an integrated data bank, credit would become more convenient for the consumer.

Ellis admits credit bureaus sometimes have information about a person that has no direct bearing on financial responsibility. "We used to clip newspapers quite extensively. But that's not very economical," he says.

He insists credit grantors are not interested in personal matters not related to financial responsibility.

He says he does not feel credit bureaus would seek data, such as that relating to health and crime records, should it be available.

"Of course, we have to supply what the credit grantors want and if they wanted this information, I guess we would have to supply it."

Do mistakes get filed away in people's credit dossiers? "Sure, they do," says Ellis. "There is always human mistakes. Just read the newspapers."

Ellis does not see invasion of privacy being at stake in the co-ordinated processing of credit information. "The consumer, whether he knows it or not, wants it . . . when a person wants credit, he is prepared to allow this sort of thing."

Far more than credit grantors, governments have continued use of lists of names and biographical information of their constituents.

As a result, "governments are potentially the biggest misusers of information on citizens," warned the Newfoundland and Labrador Computer Service Centre in a brief last year to the federal task force on computer technology.

The centre — which, incidentally is government-operated — said, "governments should first articulate policies to prevent this."

But they are clearly not inclined to do so.

"The government seems to have no objection to invading a person's privacy for tax purposes or for the investigation of crime . . . when it comes to personal privacy they are unconcerned," says computer technologist Stirling.

Stirling cites "the way government information has a way of getting into private hands" as one of the most obvious misuses of governments' data banks.

Provincial governments often sell lists of registered car owners to businesses "to help offset costs." One can only wonder what other lists might be for sale as costs rise, Stirling adds.

The task force report expressed concern about government use of information collected through medical insurance schemes. It noted that in the province of Manitoba, health records are checked against lists of applicants for drivers' licences even though this is not widely known to citizens giving these health records.

In less blatant cases, health records are often used for research into epidemic diseases and pattens of health care.

To prevent the continued undermining of the traditional confidence between doctor and patient, the task force recommended "before data are entered into the health-records system both the patient and the physician should clearly understand who will use the medical records and for what specific purpose."

While no action has been taken on the task force's warnings, computer technology has moved a step further into the ethically-murky area of mass processing of medical records. A central computer data bank recording the prescription drug uses of all Canadians has been devised and is in the process of being plugged into every hospital and pharmacy in Canada.

The Canadian government's commitment to the wholesale electronic cataloguing of the people was signalled in 1963 by the seemingly innocent introduction of the Social Insurance Number.

SIN was praised in government announcements as an instrument to assist in the orderly distribution of public monies within then rapidly developing social legislation. By implication, if not by statement, the social insurance numbering system was linked with the Canada Pension Plan.

Today a citizen's Social Insurance Number is simply the name by which the government keeps track of him — not only for social insurance but also tax evasion.

Private corporations and the provincial governments have also seen the value of a single identity number for every Canadian and the number must be produced by applicants for provincial grants and some department store credit. It's very efficient and the public has not objected to SIN.

Civil libertarians however have expressed concern over one of the latest government developments in computer technology, the Canadian Police Information Centre.

The system links all major city police centres in Canada with a data bank in Ottawa which provides at the flick of a switch, crimes, suspects, ex-convicts, people wanted on warrants, and perhaps more are available in seconds to every investigator in the country.

Not a set of stereo speakers, but the world's most powerful computer (above), this machine can carry out 36 million instructions a second in a variety of fields. Below is the anti-septically-clean control room of a Quebec-Hydro data centre.

UVIC PAPER 'TO GROW UP'

University of Victoria's student newspaper the Martlet is scheduled to do a lot of growing up this year, according to editor David Climenhaga, a fourth year arts student.

"It'll be radical, but in a positive sense, no personality smears, or attacks — more of a student newspaper.

"I want to open it up and get some interaction going."

"We're being subsidized by students (through the Alma Mater Society) who don't have enough power over the paper — and I want to get their views back into the pages."

The Martlet, recently hampered by student apathy, a lack of interest and a shift away from covering university acitivities, will concentrate this year on news.

The first regular issue comes off the presses Thursday and will be published on a weekly basis.

Although he lacks a full staff until students start registering, Climenhaga wants students to be interested in using the paper as a job-training experience. He hopes to import professionals from the community to give seminars to student newspaper reporters.

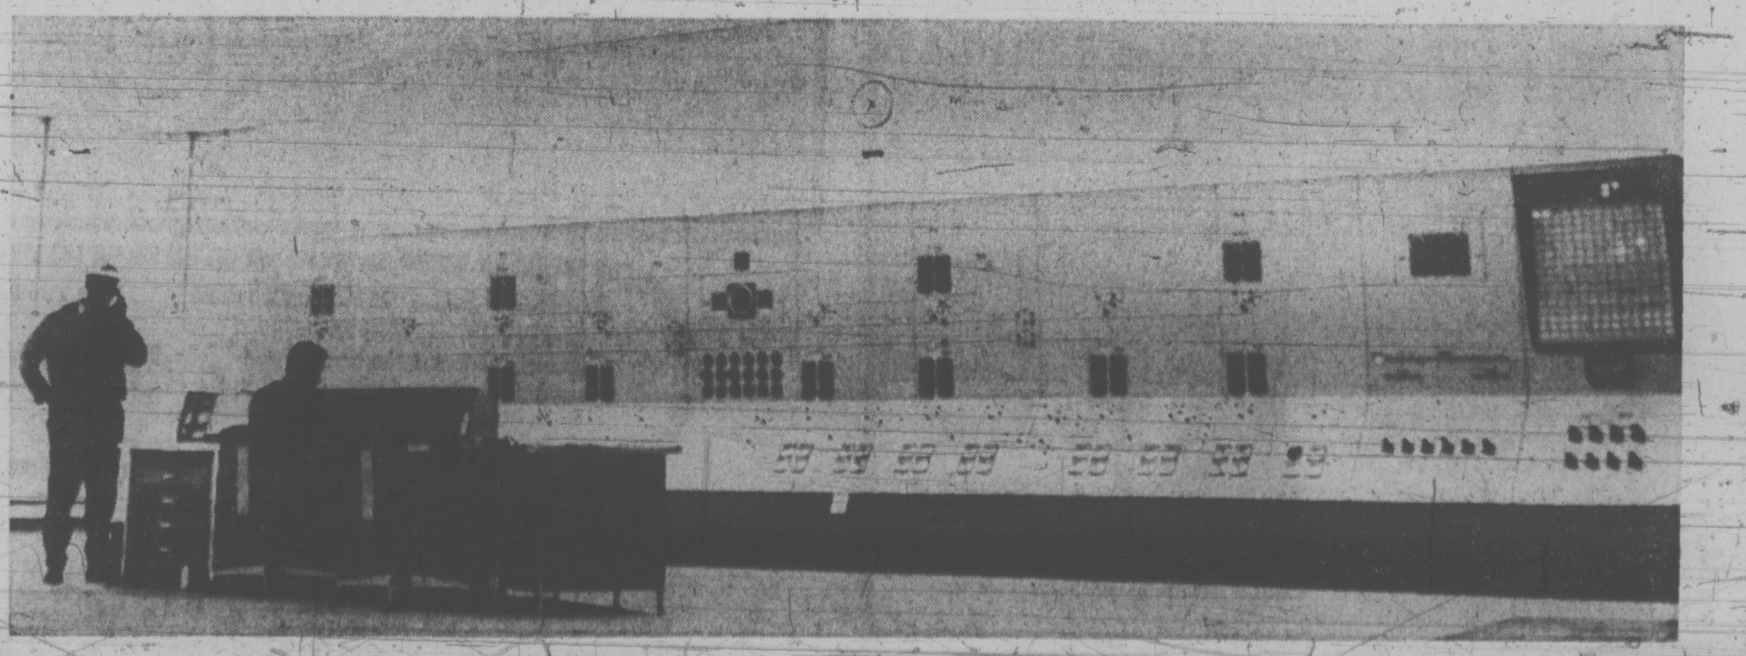
Also arranged is an "intelligence swap" with the UVic creative writing department and students can receive course credit for newspaper features.

He admits some of the opinions that will be seen in the editorial pages. They include:

—The need for student representation on the board of governors. "Students are the largest part of the university, yet they've got the least say in university affairs."

—More than "token" student representation on university senate. (Two student representatives are now elected).

"Given the way the university works, students just basically need more representation. It's all 1960s talk and no one takes it all seriously any more — but that's the trouble."



Forest Service Defends Pesticide Use

The B.C. Forest Service defended its use of pesticides Friday and proposed a five-point scheme to control use of pesticides in the province.

In a brief to the Mackenzie Royal Commission holding hearings here, the government service said only 24,000 acres of forest land had been treated with pesticides in the past four years. This amounted to less than .02 per cent of B.C's 134 million acres of forest land.

The submission was made on behalf of the forest service by Robert Sutton, forester-in-charge of planning and research and the forest service's representative on the B.C. interdepartmental pesticides committe.

For future controls the forest services proposed:

—All users of pesticides should make a concerted effort to ensure that pesticides are employed only when there is no other reasonable alternative, at the lowest dosage possible and to make certain the end justified the means.

—Increased research to find pesticides that are more selective to the target species and less persistent in the environment.

—An educational program to keep the public informed of the "true facts."

—Increased staffing of the government agencies concerned with regulating pesticides in registration, policy administration, training, licensing, extension services, and research and development work in pesticides, equipment and procedures.

—The initiation of more definitive monitoring programs of treated areas.

Speaking about the staff shortages, Sutton described himself as being firstly employed for planning and research, and said his work with pesticides was "a sometime, part-time job."

"I have other things to do. I think and I hope that the forest service is going to get additional staff and put the hat on someone else's head. It deserves someone full-time."

He also stressed that "the present emotional conflict should not be allowed to interfere with proper scientific analysis of the pesticide problem and its ultimate solution."

While the government agency "strongly supports the cancellation of any pesticide if it is properly documented as a hazard to human health, wildlife, or other parts of the environment, Sutton said, "we are concerned . . . about the possible cancellation or restriction of documented safe pesticides which are properly employed."

He defended the services use of the controversial 2, 4-D and 2, 4, 5-T which he said "are most valuable in our herbiciding operations and there does not appear to be effective alternatives."

He noted that "some 3,700 acres of herbiciding using 2, 4-D and 2, 4 5-T, planned and approved by all agencies" had been cancelled this year when the forest service learned of the appointment of the royal commission in pesticide uses. "Thus our use of herbicides this year dropped to almost zero," he said.

Sutton was questioned by commission chairman Dr. Cortland Mackenzie who wondered if the forest industry had been "sold a bill of goods" by the chemical industry and if there had ever been any study done to determine whether or not pesticide treatment was economical.

"The whole country is covered with forest," said Mackenzie, "and the only holes in them have been made by man."

Sutton replied that the forest service and industry undertake pesticide treatment when forests are in certain danger of death as a result of pests and that dead forests are a serious fire hazard.

Another brief, presented to the commission by Esther Wightman, 4101 Tyndall, who has a diploma in horticulture, suggested various alternatives for insect control.

She explained that her brief was prompted by the reactions her daughter suffered after using insect repellants. Her daughter had collapsed once after using a stick-type repellant on her horse, and had been taken to hospital feeling sick and groggy after using repellant lotion on her wrists and ankles.

Mrs. Wightman also criticized aerosol sprays, saying few people realized the area covered by the spray. She suggested the addition of some washable dye to the spray might make users more cautious.

For insect control, Mrs. Wightman suggested around the garden using grease and sacking bands on fruit trees to prevent certain insects attacking the tree and the use of rolled newspapers as earwig traps and salt for slugs as being preferable to insecticides.

TEAMSTER BID FOR RAILMEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Teamsters Union locals 31 and 213 have applied to the British Columbia Labor Relations Board to take over representation of about 250 non-operating employees of the British Columbia Railway.

Local 31 president Blair Whitelock said Friday the locals have signed up a majority of the workers, who are now members of the brotherhood of railway clerks.

The employees are mostly drivers, warehousemen and clerical employees.

Meanwhile, mediator Clark Gilmour Friday continued negotiations with the United Transportation Union representing 450 operating employees of the provincially-owned railway.

Murder Rate Up

Figures show 478 people were murdered last year, an increase of 52 over 1971.

The worst single incident was a fire at Montreal's Bluebird Cafe last Sept. 1 which left 37 people dead and 54 injured. The fire started when arsonists poured gasoline down the stairway of the cafe.

Three policemen and one custodial officer were among the 1972 murder victims. In 1971 three policemen were murdered.

The 1972 murder rate increased to 2.19 murder victims for every 100,000 population from 1.96 in 1971.

Of the 1,244 people charged with murders last year, 1,168 were adults and 76 were juveniles.

Quebec had the most murder victims — 148 in 105 incidents. Ontario was second with 132 people killed in 125 incidents.

Domestic murders accounted for 33.5 per cent of all murders in 1972. Murders during the commission of another criminal act such as robbery, rape or arson claimed 83 victims across Canada.

Now U.S. Getting Jumpy About Takeover Bids

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In a novel twist to a tale familiar to Canadians, some Americans are getting upset about rising foreign investment in the U.S. economy.

Canadian investment in the U.S. is valued at more than three and a half billion dollars and a government-inspired bid to boost it is one of the causes of American resentment.

The current instability of the U.S. economy has been the major factor in complaints about foreign takeovers, proposed takeovers and capital investments.

One congressman has already proposed legislation limiting foreign investment and a senator is considering a bill to prevent foreign governments or their agencies from acquiring U.S. corporations.

The spark for the latter is the bid by the Canada Development Corporation, a government agency, to take over Texasgulf Corporation, a bid now before the U.S. courts where it has been vigorously opposed.

One of the opponents is Senator Lloyd M. Bentsen, a Texas Democrat. Bentsen is chairman of the senate financial markets subcommittee which will hold hearings next month on the impact of institutional investors on the U.S. stock markets.

A spokesman for Bentsen said the senator will decide after the hearings whether to introduce legislation to ban takeovers by foreign governments or their entities.

"He is thinking specifically of Texasgulf and the Canadian Development Corporation," the spokesman said.

Depressed stock prices and currency fluctuations are encouraging the foreign investor to snap up U.S. company shares.

An official of the U.S. commerce department said foreign investment in the U.S. has been rising substantially.

The increase in value of foreign investment in the U.S. economy rose seven hundred million dollars last year, he said.

Of this, Canadian investment accounted for two hundred and seventy three million dollars. A further breakdown shows that of the 1972 Canadian total, one hundred and fifty million dollars was reinvested earnings and one hundred and twenty-three million dollars was new money used to acquire or establish U.S. companies or shares in them.

This was a substantial increase from the previous year when the new investment was eighty-five million dollars of which only some six million went on actually acquiring or setting up companies. The reinvestment of earnings in 1971 was one hundred and thirty-seven million dollars.

Altogether Canada's "stake" in the U.S. economy amounted to three billion six hundred and twelve million dollars at Dec. 31 of 1972.

It was three billion three hundred and thirty-nine million at the end of 1971 and three billion one hundred and seventeen million at the end of 1970.

Over-all foreign investment in the U.S. was valued at fourteen and a half billion dollars by the end of 1972.

Canada is not the only country rapidly increasing its U.S. holdings.

The value of foreign investments altogether increased by seven hundred million dollars last year. Japan accounted for one hundred and five million dollars in new investment.

The Nixon administration officially supports foreign investment. For one thing, it helps the U.S. balance of payments situation.

One government official described the complaints about rising foreign intervention in the economy as "way out of kilter."

"We don't expect that kind of response when we are investing outside our country," he said. "We encourage foreign investment and we expect to get more."

However, the official was cautious about the CDC bid to grab Texasgulf. He would not express an opinion on foreign government involvement in the U.S. economy.

But Sen. Bentsen has no such reservations. He is firmly opposed to any attempt by foreign governments to get involved in U.S. companies.

Bentsen testified in the court case, at Houston, Tex., in which the takeover is being contested on grounds that a Texas company cannot be more than 50 per cent owned by foreigners or have more than half of its board of directors living outside the state, and that the CDC was engaged in a secret conspiracy to take over Texasgulf.

The CDC has offered to buy ten million shares of Texasgulf for two hundred and ninety million dollars to take control of the company.

Bentsen's spokesman here said the senator believes that any such negotiations should be conducted between governments, not privately.

The spokesman said Bentsen is not opposed to private investment in the U.S. although it was difficult to imagine approval of a deal allowing Canadian investors to take over a U.S. newspaper chain or a national magazine.

The senator, he said, is quite aware of the feelings of Canadians about U.S. investments in their economy.

There is also concern in the U.S., he said, about the possibility of large U.S. investments by the oil-rich Arab states. In some cases this could involve Arab government money.

MOVED LATELY?
We need to know about it.
Why?
Because the new auto insurance plan goes into effect soon.
We'll be sending out insurance forms to every vehicle owner and licensed driver in British Columbia. If we don't have your correct address, you might not get them.
Without these forms, you can't be sure you're covered. And without insurance coverage, you cannot legally drive.
So, if you have moved recently, and haven't told the Motor Vehicle Branch, or if you're planning to move soon, please fill in the coupon below. It only takes a minute to fill out and mail.
Do it today.

MPs DEMANDING FRENCH PROTEST

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Members of Parliament from B.C. are anxious to protest in person to four of their French counterparts here next week about the Greenpeace III incident.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said in the Commons that he will do what he can to arrange a meeting between the Canadian and French legislators to discuss the incident in which the nuclear-protest vessel's captain, David McTaggart, of Veancouver, was injured in one eye. The French have denied that their sailors beat up members of the crew.

John Reynolds (PC-Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) noted in the House of Commons Friday that four "members of the French assembly" will visit Parliament Hill next week.

"In view of the fact that pictures show that the French government lied to Canada about the boarding of the Greenpeace, has the minister asked the French government not to send representatives to this meeting until it owns up to the fact that its men illegally boarded one of our ships and beat up our sailors?" he asked Sharp.

"On the contrary," the minister replied, "I would think that this afforded an excellent opportunity for all members of Parliament to impress on members of the French Assembly the justice of our case."

He said he will see what can be done to facilitate a meeting.

Bralorne Profits Double

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bralorne Resources Ltd. reported Friday the company has more than doubled its net earnings for the first half of 1973 compared to the first half of 1972.

Net earnings for the first six months of 1973 totalled $1,367,000 or 27.9 cents a share including extraordinary items compared to net earnings of $652,000 or 13.4 cents a share for the same period of 1972.

President F. W. Fitzpatrick attributed the increase to the inclusion of net gains from extraordinary items. Extraordinary items included a gain of $3.9 million on the sale of Bralorne's interest in Bracell Petroleums Ltd. and a $3 million provision for the estimated loss on the Bradina joint venture investment.

Wheat Price Ceiling Eyed

By VICTOR MACKIE
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A ceiling on wheat and feed grain prices is being considered by Justice Minister Otto Lang, minister in charge of the Wheat Board, as one proposal for curbing the rapid rise in food prices.

Such a plan is now in the process of being studied by the grain experts in his department with a view to determining its advantages and disadvantages, the minister said Friday.

"It is nowhere near the stage yet where I could present it to cabinet. However sometime later in September I hope to have a program along this line to take into cabinet," he said.

"I have been giving considerable thought to this and I think the farmers might accept some ceiling now in return for a firm floor price. But of course there are many ramifications to such a program and they all have to be examined," he added.

The Food Prices Review board has warned that wheat prices now up over $5 a bushel will force bread prices even higher perhaps as high as 15 per cent in September and up another 20 per cent in October.

It also forecast that macaroni and other pastas would rise in price because of the high prices farmers are getting for durum wheat.

Lang came under fire in the Commons Friday for rapidly rising food prices.

J. P. Nowlan (P.C.-Annapolis Valley) wanted to know if the minister is re-examining Wheat Board policies to bring some help to domestic producers and thereby avoid such developments as a 17 cents a dozen increase in eggs at the West Coast because of the cost of feed grains in the west.

The minister said grain prices have been rising in recent months because of the continuing rail strike and the price of animal products have been rising in relation to grain prices.

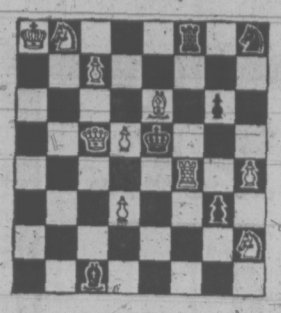
BLACK: 6



WHITE: 10

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

OPENING SURPRISES

Constantly, new ideas are discovered in the openings—the initial phase of the game—fruitful outcome of work in the "homework" that players study before participating in tournaments. They examine profoundly the lines preferred by their future opponents, hoping to find ways and means of beating out the habitual lines of play of their adversaries. This leads to exciting innovations in almost every important International Grandmaster tournament, and especially in the Chess Olympics where masters often try out lines they have worked on.

WHITE: William Martz, USA.

BLACK: Istavan Czom, Hungary.

(a) The most usual lines of continuations against the Nimzo-Indian Defense are: 4. P-K3 (The Rubinstein System); 4. Q-B2 (the classical line of Capablanca). Other alternatives are 4. B-N5 (The Leningrad Attack) and 4. P-QR3 (The Saemisch Attack). All above lines have been tried many times in tournament play. Martz has been playing 4. P-B3 for some time now.

(b) Czom, who has played Martz before, was well-prepared.

(c) Considered best here is 5.P-QR3. White now has weakened his centre.

(d) A similar idea was played in the Portisch-Forintes game played in the 1973 Hungarian Championship. Black threatens Q-R5ch followed by N-N6.

(e) It would have been dangerous to play 7.N-R3, Q-R5ch; 8.N-B2, QxBP.

(f) Adds up well with the previous move.

(g) If 8.PxP, Q-B3; 9.PxPch, BxP; 10. Q-B2, N-B3, and Black has the better game by far.

(h) A nasty surprise for White. Attack is Black's idea in the piece sacrifice.

(i) There's no defense against 27 . . . Q-N7 ch mate; 27 . . . Q-B6 mate or 27 . . RxN; 28.QxR; N-N6 mate.

Too Young For Court

CALGARY (CP) — Two Calgary boys, aged 7 and 8, charged with arson in a fire which destroyed the grand igloo at the Calgary Stampede Park Wednesday, will be dealt with by child protection authorities instead of the juvenile court.

Charlie James, chief juvenile probation officer with the city's social services department, said Friday children under 12 are not charged in juvenile court. Instead, they and their parents or guardians will be investigated for child neglect.

Stardust Ruled Guilty in Oil Spill

The freighter Irish Stardust was found guilty Friday of discharging 200 tons of oil into the sea after she ran aground Jan. 25 on Haddington Island near Alert Bay.

All "reasonable precautions" were taken to avoid the collision with the island, Judge William Ostler said in Victoria provincial court, but precautions to minimize the oil spill could have been but were not taken.

The ship's trial started in July and Ostler will pass sentence Sept. 18. Skipper James Caird, found guilty in May of failing to report the oil spill to the proper pollution prevention officers, will be sentenced the same day.

Maximum fine on both charges is $100,000.

Ostler agreed that after the grounding, Caird's primary concern was for the safety of his crew.

"But an experienced master should know within an hour, the state of his ship," Ostler said.

Within the hour after the grounding, Caird had radioed the ship's owners that he was proceeding to drydock. It wasn't until the light of day that the master and crew members noticed an oil slick in the wake of the ship, Ostler said.

"But, in my opinion he did not need the exhortation of the dawn to alert him to the fact that his wounded vessel was bleeding oil.

"In his testimony, Mr. Caird asked the question, 'What could be done?', but that question should have been posed to the pollution prevention officers who are experienced in answering the question and doing something about it.

"The issue in this case is not the effectiveness of the steps taken after grounding, but whether taking those steps was a reasonable precaution."

Ostler agreed that Caird's decision of whether to head for a close anchorage at Port McNeill or to continue to drydock at Victoria was a difficult one.

"I realize the difference between making this decision in a courtroom on a sunny afternoon and in the dark on a winter night on the bridge of a wounded ship."

But the decision to go to Port McNeill would have been a "reasonable precaution" to take. Caird did not take it, Ostler said.

When the Stardust limped into Victoria Harbor 11 hours after the grounding, it was too late to take those "reasonable precautions.", Ostler said, and the subsequent clean-up operations involved 125 people working for three weeks at a cost of $395,000.

Repairs to the Stardust cost more than $1 million.

In his judgment, Ostler praised the "articulate and persuasive" submission of defence lawyer Donovan Lowry.

"But I conclude that there were 'reasonable precautions' which could and should have been taken to minimize the oil spill, but were not.

"Tennyson's 'Inviolate sea' is a poetic illusion. Ships are daily profaning the waters that give them sustenance."

Mounted Police Take to the Air

City-Based Helicopter Will Help in Searches, Rescue

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The RCMP in British Columbia has taken delivery of its first "flying police car"—a $150,000 helicopter which will be based at Victoria International Airport.

The trim blue and white machine, which can carry four passengers or an attendant with two stretchers, will cover Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland for the most part but can be dispatched to wherever the action is in B.C.

Basically it's a police vehicle for police work, Insp. Vincent Cain explained Friday. He is second in command of the force's Criminal Investigation Branch in the province.

That means such chores as lifting men and equipment, such as identification experts and tracker dogs, to the scene of a crime, flying border patrols, responding to bank robberies, chasing escaped prisoners, looking for cattle rustlers, flying highway patrols and occasionally, moving special prisoners.

When not tied up with these duties, it could be used for search and rescue work.

The helicopter will "increase our capacity to provide a police service," said Insp. Cain.

"We feel we can exert a definite influence with it on law enforcement in remote areas," said Sgt. Lorne Newson, also of the CIB and a fixed wing pilot.

The helicopter is a model 206B Jetranger II made by Bell, jet turbine powered, with a flight range of three hours and a cruising speed of about 135 miles an hour.

Its pilot is Const. Tom Vickers, 36, who moves to Victoria from Whitehorse. The force intends adding a second pilot to the crew, which includes an engineer. The RCMP also has a two-engine Grumman Goose in its Victoria air detachment.

Only the second helicopter in the RCMP inventory (a larger model went into service in Newfoundland about a year ago), the machine was bought after a feasibility study conducted in B.C. two years ago, said Newson.

Apart from bringing police into action much sooner in remote areas, it can actually save money although it will cost about $150 an hour to operate. Cain notes it can be more expensive in time and manpower hours when police have to travel by car, boat and sometimes on foot to reach an isolated place.

Newson recalled that during the feasibility study he went along during a search for a body along the island's north coast in the vicinity of Cape Scott.

While no body was found, the helicopter quickly covered miles of rugged coast which he estimates would have taken all of the men in two north island detachments days to comb.

Drivers who pass on highways where there is a solid line stand out like a sore thumb from the air, he said.

The helicopter will co-ordinate its highway patrols by radio with police cars.

There are secondary benefits from an airborne police patrol. Newson recalls another occasion when the helicopter crew spotted an illegal net, which stood out plainly from the air, stretched across the Cowichan River near Duncan. Word was relayed to fisheries authorities.

Helicopter policemen can also keep an eye peeled for oil spills or forest fires.

Landing gear for the Jetranger II is skids but on each skid is a packaged float. These can be inflated by the pilot in four seconds if the helicopter is going to be forced down on water.

Vickers said the machine is not equipped to fly on instruments alone.

POISON FAILS TO KILL DOGS

Two Colwood dogs are in "fair" condition today after eating rat poison that may been intentionally put out to kill them, RCMP said today.

The dogs, one from the 2700 block Leigh Road, the other from the 700 block Goldstream, ate the poison between noon and 2 p.m. Thursday.

The dogs were taken to a veterinarian and are now at home recuperating.

"It is possible that someone is putting out rat poison on cheese and meat, and dogs are getting into it, or that someone is intentionally setting out poison to kill the dogs," an RCMP spokesman said.

Police would not release the names of the dog-owners but said they are warning other residents to keep a close watch on their pets.

The incident Thursday was the second dog-poisoning in two weeks.

Fire Blamed On Children

The Little League clubhouse at Cook and Hillside was damaged by fire Friday, believed to have been started by children playing with matches.

The fire broke out at 2 p.m., and caused $1,000 damage to the east wall and roof of the clubhouse.

Victoria police said Friday the fire may have been caused by children dropping matches on paper which had accumulated under the dugout.

Three juveniles, aged 14, 14 and 13 are being questioned.

1,500 Ask for Police Vote

A petition with more than 1,500 signatures asking for a referendum on policing of Central Saanich will be presented to the municipal council Tuesday.

The document already has 1,546 names and will get more over the weekend, said Charlie Mollard of 7152 Maber, spokesman for the group behind the petition.

Mollard said the petitioners want Central Saanich to take a hard look at the cost and efficiency of all alternative police forces for the area — the present local force, the RCMP, joining a larger force like the Saanich police, and others.

No decision by council should be taken until public opinion has been determined by referendum in the November civic election, the petition says.

The group was given 14 days to circulate the petition, and Mayor Archie Galbraith said it would need at least 800 signatures to carry more weight than another petition presented to council last February which opposed replacing the local force with the RCMP.

Traveller's Tale From New–Old Japan

THE NEXT BEST THING to going on a trip is welcoming the returning traveller, in this case a son who arrived on our doorstep with gifts and a set of mixed impressions from across the Pacific.

While Ron unpacked his flight bag, we bombarded him with questions. Had everything gone well, and how did he like Japan? How had the weather been? Had the children in his care enjoyed their four-week visit?

Ron accepted this parental fussing with indulgent calm while he handed out presents.

The trip had gone very well, he said, and gave his mother a large batique furoshki, the headscarf or carryall that Japanese women find indispensable.

The weather had been very hot and humid. Here, for me, was a section of bamboo trunk to hold pencils, and a handful of seaweed candies that I probably wouldn't much care for. Both he and his charges had kindnesses showered on them wherever they went. The oblong box held wooden lacquerware in red, black and gold, the fish-hooks of interesting design were for me, and the tricky little slide viewer was Win's.

Now, he would like to ask two questions of his own. How was the fishing, and what was for dinner?

In bits and pieces these last few days, Ron has told us more about his journey as adult leader of four lively 11-year-olds chosen by Victoria chapter of Children's International Summer Villages to join other young ones from many lands in Kyoto.

The slight cough he brought home — a pollution cough, he called it — has vanished. That same industrial smog robbed his group of a view of Fujiyama. But mountains were no novelty to these pilgrims from British Columbia, and the loss was compensated for by the sights, sounds and amiable encounters that filled their weeks.

Highlights:

Bullet train rides between industrial cities with the rice paddies of an older Japan streaming past at 120 miles an hour.

Visits to homes where they enjoyed exquisitely-polished hospitality in Westernized surroundings, but slept well on tatamai mats unrolled in rooms that made no concession to Western ways.

An evening among fishermen who plied their ancient craft by torchlight handling eight cormorants to a boat. Each bird was fitted with leash and throat ring and all dived busily for little silvery fish.

A shoreside restaurant served the cormorants' catch, fried whole. Elsewhere in their food adventurings, the visitors found any number of taste surprises.

The seaweed that figures prominently in the Japanese diet supplied one of them. Ron enjoyed the subtly marinated raw fish of a land that worries about the state of its home seas, and learned to cope with the uncooked egg that stared at him with a yellow eye from its bowl.

Before the end of his stay he was taking both the metric system and the yen (300 to a discounted Canadian dollar) for granted. He acquired some useful Japanese words and phrases, and even a sentence or two which he hoarded for times of need.

On his occasion of greatest need, none of these proved adequate. He can grin at the recollection now, but his situation at the time would have worried the daylights out of Win and me had we known about it.

A virus that had been going the rounds sent him off to hospital in an ambulance. In spite of a temperature of 103 and his prone position, he was impressed by random glimpses of a fireworks display billed as the world's largest, that dazzled and sparkled against the night sky. The virus was a hit-and-run quickie. The shot prescribed by a Japanese doctor who had trained at Johns Hopkins sent it scampering: the recovered victim taxied back to the village that same night.

Late in the travellers' stay, illuminations of a different sort blazed on the hills around Kyoto. Bonfires had been kindled in ancient word-characters deeply grooved into the slopes. A city of an industrialized Japan that still cherishes age-old traditions was honoring the ancestors.

GUS HAS PROBLEMS —HE'S GROUNDED

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Gus isn't stupid — he's just unfortunate.

He looks like any ordinary seagull but he's become introverted as a result of his physical handicaps — he can't fly or swim.

So he just sits indoors all day, eating tinned salmon and coloring old newspapers.

"He leaves messages all over the house — Gus was here," said Patti McKnight, 22, of 2275 Tryon Rd.

Patti found him two weeks ago today sitting in the middle of the Pat Bay Highway while cars drove around him.

She took him home, force fed him half a tin of salmon and put him in a washtub.

"By Monday he was chipper," she said. "And he's been happy ever since — until Sunday."

That was the day he tried to fly.

"I stood about 10 feet from him and flapped my arms and jumped up and down, imitating him."

"Frequently he would jump up and down and not get anywhere — two flaps to a jump was the most he could do."

But in the middle of his final jump he got picked up by a gust of wind and disappeared over the bank to Tsehum Harbour.

That's when Patti discovered Gus couldn't swim. He started to sink and Patti rescued him in a canoe.

So he just sits safely indoors all day, eating tinned salmon and coloring old newspapers.

"I'm looking for somebody who has a lot of animals and who'll take care of him," said Patti, "He's not stupid — he's just unfortunate."

More Now See Taxes; Inflation Tied

• YOUR TAXES •

By I. H. ASPER

One of the most beneficial results of the political debate over tax reform during the past few years is that there is a growing awareness amongst the public of the very close relationship between taxes and inflation. The result is that government have become more concerned about the effect of their tax policies on encouraging further inflation.

The subject is on the tip of everyone's tongue these days as the western world is struggling to combat a higher than usual rate of inflation. Indeed, quite apart from the fiscal policies all governments are applying to the problem, it is probable that one of the contributing factors to price increases in Canada is the inflation psychology that seems to have taken root.

That is, business, in pricing its goods, labor, in making its wage demands, and the consumer in his spending attitudes, seems to have adopted the view that further price increases and cost rises are inevitable and they conduct themselves accordingly, and to some extent feed the fires of inflation.

The tax system itself is not innocent in this regard. While it is true that governments also suffer from inflation — that is, their cost of operation of program increases each year because of increasing wages and increasing benefits in social programs — nevertheless, it is becoming more and more publicly recognized that governments contribute mightily to inflation, and are also the main beneficiaries of inflation.

Because government has become the biggest purchaser of services and the biggest consumer of goods, as well as the largest employer in the society, it's spending habits in effect dictate what kind of an economy we're going to have. Thus, the massive increases in government spending, to the extent that those increases have not been used to render cash payments to individuals within the country, have contributed significantly to price and wage increases On the other hand, as prices and wages go up, so do the profits on business increase, and, as well, wages increase, so that the tax take by government increases. This is true both at the federal and provincial levels.

For example, one's wages may rise by 5 per cent, sufficient to offset the increase in the cost of living, but the full 5 per cent increase in wages is taxed, so that the standard of living of the earner will drop. This is even more dramatically seen at the level of provincial taxes, particularly where consumption taxes are concerned. Take the sales tax, for example.

Assuming a 5 per cent sales tax rate, a coat that cost $100 in 1969 would cost the taxpayer an additional $5 for sales tax. If, by 1974 that same coat is selling for $125, not only is the cost increased by the price increase, but the sales tax, even though the rate of tax hasn't changed, would now be $6.25. In effect, there has been a significant tax increase, even though the tax rate hasn't changed.

A look at provincial budgets where the tax rates on retail sales has stayed constant and population has stayed constant is most revealing. In Manitoba, for example, the population has stayed constant since 1967 when a 5 per cent sales tax was introduced, and the rate has not been changed. Yet in six years the amount of sales tax collected by the government has doubled.

Because of the acute public concern over inflation, the federal government acted last year to introduce, for the first time in Canadian history, an anti-inflation factor in the tax system. As well as arranging for those on fixed income to receive annual pension increases based on the cost of living changes, Finance Minister Turner introduced effective for the current year, a provision which says, in effect, for the wage earner in Canada who received a wage increase less than the increase in the cost of living, the wage increase will not be permitted to move him into a higher tax bracket. This has often happened, particularly in the lower income groups, because of the marginal rate tax system.

Canada is not the first country to have built an anti-inflation factor into its tax system. Denmark, the Netherlands, Israel, and several other western nations have introduced even more bold programs, mainly because their rate of inflation is very considerably higher than Canada's.

Several hundreds of thousands of Canadian taxpayers who probably still aren't aware of the Turner amendment, will find next April that the federal government's anti-inflation amendment to the tax law this year will be of some benefit to them.

However, while the attention of the nation is rivetted on the subject of rising costs, it is worthwhile to press governments at all levels for further anti-inflation safeguards within the tax system.

Wescorp

Wescorp Industries Ltd. of Vancouver, a mini-conglomerate holding company, reported profit for the six months ended June 30 rose to $176,000 or $1.46 a share including extraordinary items and minority interest.

A year ago the company reported profit of $100,500 or 80 cents a share for the first six months.

President A. B. Cliff said major contributors to earnings were the auto insurance subsidiary, Pafco of Toronto; manufacturing operations of Western Pottery in Los Angeles and of Mariner Homes in Penticton.

Summit Resources

Summit Resources Ltd. of Calgary has reported net earnings of $102,488 or 10 cents per share for the first nine months of its amalgamated operation ended June 30, 1973.

Summit was formed in the fall of 1972 from Summit Oils Ltd. of Calgary and Western Homes Ltd. of Winnipeg.

B.C. Turf

British Columbia Turf Ltd. has reported net earnings of $25,308 for the six months ended June 30, 1973, a period that included 39 days of racing at Exhibition Park. Total income in the half-year was $1,216,898.

The company does not show comparative figures for the first half of 1972, because there were an unequal number of racing days in the two periods.

In the first half of 1972, however, the company earned $15,240 and went on to report total net earnings of $157,064 for the full yar.

A total of 100 racing days will be held this year, the same as in 1972.

Western

Western Realty Projects Ltd. reports net income increased to $1.65 million or 25.6 cents a share in the six months ending June 30 from $1.49 million or 23.2 cents a share in the same period last year.

The company said cash flow increased to 52 cents from 40.8 cents. This and substantial increases in rental income accounted for the improved profit.

Revenue from properties increased to $444,627 from $158,518 mainly from operations of the Londonderry regional shopping centre in Edmonton. Also contributing in the second quarter were the Richmond Inn in Richmond and the western centre building being leased in Calgary.

Melton

Melton Real Estate Ltd. in the six months ended June 30 had net income of $575,037 or 27.7 cents a share, compared with $443,240 or 21.7 cents a share for the same period last year.

Turbo

Torbo Resources Ltd. of Calgary has reported unaudited net earnings of $264,544 or 5.9 cents a share for the six-month period ended June 30, 1973, compared with $194,200 or 5 cents for the same period last year.

Gulf Oil

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., has announced a major construction program to increase the capacity of its Nevis gas plant and related sub plants will get under way in September.

The expansion of the Nevis plant system would permit higher production of crude oil from the Fenn-Big Valley, Stettler, Erskine and Clive-Alix fields. These now are limited by the capacity of the plant system to process solution gas produced with the oil.

Republic Resources

Republic Resources Limited of Calgary has reported net earnings of $135,000 or four cents per share for the year ended June 30, 1973, compared with a deficit of $9,000 and no earnings per share for the 12-month period ended June 30, 1972.

B.C. Tel

British Columbia Telephone Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of 80 cents a share on the ordinary stock.

The board of directors announced that the dividends will be payable Oct. 1, 1973 to shareholders of record on Sept. 14.

Hospital Objects

SURREY (CP) — Surrey Memorial Hospital has denied that a 10-month old boy was improperly cared for by nursing staff. William Inglis charged that he and his wife found their son, Dwight, covered with excrement and with red, raw marks on his cheeks when they visited the hospital Aug. 3.

Balance of Payments Behind Dollar Gain

By HOBART ROWEN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON—In early June, French President Georges Pompidou wryly observed to a group of visiting American bankers: "We are witnessing the third devaluation of the dollar."

Pompidou was not talking about a formal devaluation, like the 10 per cent cut in the dollar's foreign exchange value in February—a dramatic step that stunned the world because it came only 14 months after the first devaluation.

What he had in mind was the daily deterioration of the dollar in the world's exchange markets, with a comparable rise in gold. With almost sickening consistency, the financial pages told the story of the "dollar dropping", until, by the end of July, the worldwide average value had dropped more than 20 per cent compared to the period before the first devaluation.

For the stronger European currencies, the total depreciation of the dollar was more of the order of 40 per cent; in terms of Japanese goods, it was close to 30 per cent.

But there has been a significant turn-around in events since about the last week of July. In a little more than one month, the dollar has recovered about 60 per cent of the May-July deterioration. And in parallel, the price of gold, which had soared at one point to about $127 an ounce in London has dropped to about $100.

The basic reason for the strengthening of the dollar — and for a continuing optimistic outlook — is a great improvement in the U.S. balance of payments position, which in turn is traceable to the new competitive edge for American exports created by the big shift in relative exchange rates.

It is entirely possible that when the final figures are in for 1973, they will show that the $6.7 billion deficit in trade for 1972 has been virtually wiped out. A surplus in July in trade for 1972 has whittled the cumulative deficit for the first seven months to $704 million compared to red ink totaling $3.8 billion in the first seven months of 1972.

Farm exports have boomed, not only because of the advantage derived from the cheaper value of the dollar, but because of rising income in Western Europe, Japan, and Canada which have boosted the demand in those countries for meat and poultry — which in turn stimulate the need for U.S. feedstuffs and oilseeds.

Total agricultural exports ran at an annual rate of better than $15 billion in the first half of this year, compared to a total of only $9.4 billion for the whole of 1972. With the administration unlikely to propose more than token export controls, if any, farmfood exports will be even bigger in the last half of 1973.

Another reason for the improving trade balance is one that the administration doesn't talk too much about: we are in fact experiencing a contraction of the economy — it is actually a "growth recession" right now — while other industrial nations have yet to reach the peaks of their booms. Thus, the tendency will be for imports here to slow down while exports continue to run heavy.

There are other, and perhaps less well understood, reasons for restored confidence in the dollar, including a shift by the German government toward a policy of monetary ease.

A decline in short-term interest rates in the German D-mark, at a time of very high U.S. interest rates, lowered the value of the D-mark compared to the dollar. The German policy, according to some money experts probably averted a new revaluation of the very strong German currency.

There has been an upsurge, meanwhile, in long-term capital inflows as confidence in the dollar returns. Foreign investments have been high, stimulated by apparent bargains in the stock market. We are witnessing a period in which foreign interests will pursue mergers or takeovers of U.S. companies. The Japanese bid for half of American Metal Climax aluminum operation, and the Canadian government's offer for what could be a controlling interest in Texasgulf herald a new era.

But there are plenty of problems still ahead for the dollar, not the least of which is the "confidence" problem created by the Watergate uncertainties. Beyond that, and until it is settled, there will always be the concern created by the $90 billion "overhang" held by officials and individuals abroad.

It is clear, nevertheless, that Pompidou's "third devaluation," in the average reckoning, had lowered the value of the dollar too far. Its stronger tone in recent weeks is a response to the realities of the situation, and a hopeful sign that the big international monetary reform session in Nairobi next month can be held in a relatively calm atmosphere, in contrast to the usual atmospherics of crisis and catastrophe.

Wine Team Seeking A National Image

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Wine Institute wants to shed its Ontario-dominated image for a more national outlook, says institute president J. H. Beatty.

Beatty, also president of Chateau Cartier Wines Ltd. of Toronto, says the institute is studying plans to set up regional units. An executive body would be maintained to speak for the industry at the national level.

Members now account for about 85 per cent of Canadian wine sales, he says. However, the sitution is confused because some members have acquired non-member firms and the status of the latter is unclear, he adds.

In place of the present structure, he foresees three to five regional units to handle specific regional conditions.

At the top, the exeucutive body would work on behalf of all Canadian wineries to enhance their image nationally.

On the national level, the institute has recently lobbied the federal government to give all sparkling wine makers the same tax break Quebec producers of sparkling apple cider now enjoy.

The sparkling apple wines now qualify for a $2-a-gallon federal tax remission, reducing the tax paid to 55 cents. The Quebec government has also backed producers of apple cider wines by permitting sales in corner grocery stores.

In another matter, the institute is supporting Chateau Gai Wines Ltd. of Toronto in its appeal of a Quebec appeal court decision which prohibits the word "champange" on lables to describe the Canadian product.

The suit was brought by champagne producers in France against Chateau Gai in Quebec and the ruling was handed down in November, 1972.

Tiny Sask. Firm Sidesteps Gov't In Exports Bid

NIPAWIN, Sask. (CP) — A small rapeseed-oil manufacturer here is bypassing the maze of government export-assistance programs and trying to develop overseas markets on its own.

Agra Foods Ltd. used a broker as consultant when they negotiated their first overseas contract with Chile in February. But a second shipment to Chile in May and one to India this month were handled without outside assistance.

"This was the first time a Canadian Rapeseed crusher had consummated the sale, assembled the order and chartered the vessel without assistance," says Dave Redden, controller at the Nipawin plant.

He admitted that it is a "pretty frightening" experience for small industries to try to break into the export market.

"Some big brokers shook their heads when they heard about our plans to make arrangements ourselves. They thought we couldn't pull it off."

The company is part of a large Canadian-owned conglomerate, Agra Industries, which has other subsidiaries in the food, beverage, engineering and communication fields.

The Nipawin plant employs about 120 people and brings about $1 million in salaries into the area.

The plant now is operating at more than 80 per cent capacity even though Mr. Redden said Agra is still "getting some of the bugs out."

A large portion of the company's rapeseed-oil production goes into its margarine manufacturing and packaging plant, which began operations in February and now turns out 36,000 pounds in an eight-hour shift.

Mr. Redden says the varying erucic-acid content of rapeseed poses a problem for companies such as his. Rapeseed with low erucic-acid content has been developed, but is not in universal use.

"We would have much preferred to see a clean cut from high erucic to low erucic. This would have made it much more simple and less expensive for crushing plants."

Mr. Redden said the Western Canadian agriculture industry is doing itself a disservice when it sells abroad raw materials it could process in Canada.

Products like rapeseed should only be sold in meal or oil form. This has been recognized by an encouraging trend among government to place more emphasis on domestic processing.

With the cost of feed supplements rising, rapeseed meal has been bringing a return comparable to that of oil. It used to bring about one-quarter that amount.

Film Genius John Ford Dies

HOLLYWOOD — John Ford, one of the greatest movie directors, who set the standards for action films and polished the western into an art form for three generations, died Friday at 78.

Ford won six academy awards, and directed an estimated 200 films, including many that became classics, from "The Informer" in 1935 to "The Quiet Man."

Riverside County authorities said Ford died of cancer at 6:35 p.m. with his family at his side.

Ford had been a virtual invalid for the past three years. His last picture was "Seven Women" in the mid-60s.

"I'm John Ford, I make westerns," was the way the big, gruff, uncompromising director often introduced himself.

Ford, whose 50-year career included credits for more than 140 films, was most noted for his western epics, including My Darling Clementine, Fort Apache, She Wore a Yellow Ribbon, Rio Grande, The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance and Cheyenne Autumn.

However, his Stagecoach in 1939 was considered by most critics as Ford's greatest film. It restored respectability to westerns after a long period of neglect.

Ford was also known for his pictures on other themes. He won his first Academy Award in 1935 for The Informer. It was a moody tale of betrayal during the 1922 Sinn Fein rebellion in Dublin and reflected the director's Irish heritage.

Ford was born Sean Aloysius O'Feeney on Feb. 1, 1895, in Cape Elizabeth, Me. His name change followed the lead of an older brother, who had become a movie actor under the name Francis Ford.

With the new name of John Ford, he found work at Universal Pictures as an assistant director shortly after his arrival in Hollywood in 1913.

Dubious Talents Peddled

By BRYAN HAY
Times Staff

More than 2,000 Victorians were doubly-insulted Friday . . . and they shelled out up to four bucks each for the privilege.

Elsewhere in today's paper (see Page 38) I engage in a little sentimental nostalgia about the fabulous era of the Fifties.

The current wave of interest in those early days of rock has spawned not only mini-festivals of the type packaged and peddled by Los Angeleno Dick Nader starring original performers but a litter of groups specializing in the Golden Oldie sound — such as the one that played Memorial Arena Friday, Teen Angel and the Rocking Rebels.

Litter has a double meaning: as well as referring to a number of unspecified size, it also means trash.

In the latter sense it applies to the London, Ontario-based group that feisted their dubious talents here Friday in their second Victoria appearance in little more than four months.

Bad musicianship I can forgive them — almost — but when they start tampering with such classics as Good, Golly, Miss Molly and Blue Suede Shoes, that's coming mighty close to sacrilege!

The four-letter obscenities, belches and simulated urination on-stage I find intolerable . . . especially when done as coarsely as it was Friday.

Some groups — notably the Mothers of Invention and Alice Cooper are better obscene than heard, but they do it with class.

What is worse, is when it is done as part of the image of an era.

Because, in the Fifties, it just wasn't done that way, baby.

Tuneful Plea Accepted But Judge Says: Move On

PITTSBURGH — Thomas Hunter, 23, brought his guitar when he answered a traffic summons Friday for parking his car illegally on a downtown street.

Hunter told magistrate Louis Dadowski he would make his plea in song.

In a two-minute performance, Hunter lamented that he was unemployed, that his tools were in his car which police had confiscated and that he was going to work next week.

"But they keep on writing tickets and I keep on moving on," Hunter sang in his courtroom ballad.

Dadowski threw out the summons after Hunter's rendition but warned the Wilkinsburg resident that he should heed his own song and "keep on moving on."

David Johnson, 21, tried to club a rat with a .22 calibre rifle Friday. The rifle fired, Johnson was wounded in the thumb, and the rat got away.

KINGSTON, England — Henry Bramley scanned newspaper obituary columns for funerals. Then, while mourners were at gravesides, he burglared their homes.

The charge was made by prosecutor Caroline Wilson Friday at the trial of the 49-year-old Bramley. He was convicted of burglary and placed on probation for three years.

ANGLE LAKE, Wash. — It took more than two years of welding and hammering and searching for parts, but the community of Angle Lake now has a fire truck.

Fire Chief Lee Madsen, owner of a fender-and-body shop, worked with three other local firemen and turned a $12,000 heavily damaged fire truck into a rig valued at $100,000.

"I told the commissioners when we bought it in April, 1971 we didn't need it then, but we would need it in three years. Now we'll have it when we need it," Madsen said.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Vice President Spiro Agnew is President's Nixon's "best insurance policy" against impeachment, Rep. Paul (Pete) McCloskey, (R - Calif.) said Friday.

"The survival of Agnew is very important to the president right now," McCloskey said in an interview here. "The vice-president now is the best insurance policy the president has."

McCloskey, who ran against Nixon in 1972 GOP primaries, said that although Nixon "has committed impeachable offences" and "violated his oath of office" congress probably will not start impeachment proceedings unless the public mood shifts substantially against the president.

"I think public opinion will guide the congress on this," he said.

MOOSE JAW — One of the longest running programs on Canadian radio, Mrs. Hall's Kiddie Show, had its last broadcast Friday.

The program, designed to assist youngsters in musical endeavors, has run weekly since 1936 on CHAB.

Mrs. Ethel Hall is retiring.

NEW YORK — Comedian David Frye is having trouble advertising a new record album, a comedy routine on the Watergate affair.

A spokesman for WABC-TV said Watergate was "too serious" for a comedy routine and no advertising for such material would be accepted.

Charles Licameli, manager of broadcast standards for WNBC-TV, said the decision not to accept advertising for the Frye album was based on those parts of the recordings which were "cruel" to people other than the principals of the Watergate affair.

HOLLYWOOD — Mala Wilson still was not sure today the "Nancy," a girl killed in a traffic accident in Washington two weeks ago, was her daughter.

Law enforcement officials have been trying ever since to identify the dead girl. She was hitchhiking through the Northwest when she was killed in an auto wreck near Wenatchee, Wash. She carried no identification.

Survivors remembered that she said her name was Nancy. A Canadian woman recalled giving a ride to a girl who fit the description, who wrote down her name as Nancy Wilson, of Los Angeles.

The trail led to Mrs. Wilson, whose 18-year-old daughter, Nancy, left last month to tour the Northwest and British Columbia, and who has no been heard from in recent weeks.

NEW YORK — Dogs on New York's East Side now have their own restroom. Peter Grippi, a doorman of one of the expensive apartments in the neighborhood, said he was tired of the messy sidewalks and built a special convenience for dogs — a large sand box.

Dogs are lured into the box by a toy plastic "fire hydrant" in the middle of the box. On its side, Grippi painted "doggy box."

'Mismatch' Knockout Protested

TOKYO (AP) — George Foreman's battering punches took only two minutes today to reaffirm his hold on the world heavyweight boxing title, but controversy flared over whether the real knockout punch came with challenger Joe (King) Roman sitting on the floor.

"That did it. I was groggy when I got up," Roman said about a right-hand punch to the head he took after being floored at 1:10 of the first round of the scheduled 15-round fight.

He went down again 20 seconds later, took an eight-count, and then was knocked out by a vicious right uppercut to the jaw at the two-minute mark.

Describing the controversial action, referee Jay Edson said Foreman, who had backed Roman to the ropes and had thrown a flurry of punches, was following through on a punch when he hit Roman on the way down.

"It was not a foul," Edson said, adding "I am sure it was not intentional."

The referee called the fight a "100-per-cent mismatch."

Edson ruled that the knockdown was not official and waved Foreman to a neutral corner for about 10 seconds to let Roman get up.

Roman's camp planned to file a protest to world and Japanese boxing officials.

"It was a double foul," said trainer Al Braverman. "He pushed Joe down and hit him on the floor."

Roman's manager, Bill Daly, told reporters: "If we hadn't jumped up and yelled, he would still be hitting him on the floor."

As for Edson's explanation that Foreman was following through on a punch, Braverman replied: "No way."

Foreman said he was sure it was not a foul.

"It was one of those things," the champion said.

Foreman quickly overpowered Roman with looping body shots that slowed the challenger down. Roman was hurt when he arose from the second knockdown and dropped in a heap when hit with the final blow.

Shouts of protest were heard from many in the crowd of about 7,500 persons in the Budokan—Martial Arts Hall—over the quick end to the fight that cost $189 for a ringside seat.

Foreman, of Hayward, Calif., received $1 million for the first defence of the crown he won by knocking out Joe Frazier in two rounds in Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 22. He now has 12 first-round knockouts in a record of 39 victories, 36 by knockouts, and no defeats.

Roman, of Puerto Rico, received $100,000 for the bout. Outweighed 219¼ pounds to 196 ¾, he suffered his eighth loss against 44 victories and one draw.

CONTROVERSIAL PUNCH that resulted in protest is thrown by world heavyweight champion George Foreman while Joe (King) Roman is on canvas of Tokyo ring. Roman lost by knockout in first round and his manager will protest result to world boxing officials, claiming it was foul punch by Foreman that did most damage. (AP Wirephoto).

Bates Tumble

HULL, Que. — Bates Construction lost only one of 10 playoff games, but that single setback was all it took to end Victoria's hopes of the Canadian senior men's softball championship.

Unbeaten in the five-game, preliminary round-robin action after winning four straight in the British Columbia championships, Bates reached the end of the line Friday when they dropped a heart-breaking 2-0 decision to Richmond Hill Dynes.

Dynes, Ontario's champions and winners of the 1972 world championship, thus went into today's nationally-televised final against Dartmouth, N.S. The Nova Scotia champions trounced the host Hull Volanis 16-6 in Friday's other semi-final.

Bates and Hull each topped their respective divisions while Dynes and Darmouth both finished second to set up the semi-finals.

Victoria's run-producers, however, failed in the semi-final and two "gift" runs helped Dynes to eliminate Bates.

A one-out single by Bob Smith, a walk to Dave Russell and a hit batsman loaded the bases in the sixth inning. Victoria pitcher Stan Kern was charged with a wild pitch while striking out Bruce Staughton. That enabled Smith to score the winning run and Russell added the second on a passed ball before Kern was able to retire the Ontario side.

Bates threatened in their half of the sixth before Barry Timbers came in to choke off the rally. Glen Langsett, hitting for Kern, and Ken Dietcher, a pickup from Abbottsford, led off with successive singles. The rally fizzled when Carl Walker struck out, Ken Bate forced Langsett at third and Harvey Stevenson grounded out.

Junior Macs Face Tough Assignment

That's what they must accomplish if they hope to claim the Pacific Coast Junior "A" Lacrosse League title.

The inspired Richmond Roadrunners, defending champions but fourth-place finishers during the regular season this year, shunted Bakers to the brink of elimination Friday by defeating Victoria 12-10. Richmond now holds a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven series.

Winners will represent the West in the national final for the Minto Cup against Peterborough. Petes captured the eastern title Friday with an 11-9 victory over Bramlea, winning the best-of-seven series 4-2.

Hustle, the Tasker brothers, tenacious checking and a third-period penalty combined to dim Victoria's hopes before a standing-room only crowd Friday.

Macs held 6-3 and 8-7 leads after the first two periods but Runners tied the game on a ridiculous penalty and Richmond took charge. The penalty that shifted momentum to Richmond was assessed a Victoria player when he shot the ball down the floor after a 30-second, non-shooting violation.

League scoring champion Bob Tasker scored three goals and three assists, brother Brian scored once and set up three, and rookie Rico Bellusci came through with four goals and four assists.

As well, the three sparked Richmond's hustle brigade that pounced on loose balls and constantly disrupted Vic-checking.

Norm Baker, returning to action after missing a game because of flu, scored three goals and three assists for Macs while Glen Neuman and Jerry Kustaski each scored twice. Bob Cool, Mike Yager and Dan Green counted the singles.

Fifth game of the series will be played Sunday in Victoria's Memorial Arena, starting at 8 p.m.

For Reid, a Problem He Could Live With

A busy week on the hustings, and two people with problems. Monday and Tuesday, Llanelli, the visiting Welsh rugby tourists; Wednesday, Jack Morgan, Bob Reid and McDonalds; Thursday's host: Grant Burnett and Molson's hockey scholarship awards to Mel Bridgman and Tom McEvay. A good program. Friday — don't be silly!

Ah yes, rugby — and manager Glan Tucker of Llanelli wasn't enthralled with the refereeing in the first game of Llanelli's visit here. He called it inconsistent mainly because the official didn't allow the advantage rule as it should be permitted. It spoiled the game." As to some rugged moments, was it rough? "Not really." The players? Many were sorry it happened, but what else at the after party?

The Victoria team? Few kudos. "Not as good as some of the others we met in Canada. Biggest fault: Fundamentals: Failure to follow up after a pass, and poor passing, not as crisp as it should be. "They tended to lob the ball whereas it moved free with us. Maybe it is from the influence of Canadian football, but they had no second moves and didn't create loose rucks as they should do, to be successful.

Morgan's concerns: One to convince people the RCMP Centennial Revue isn't the musical ride over again. It's much more, "It's something special and makes you feel proud to be a Canadian," Jack explained. The other anxiety: dirt.

Yes, plain ordinary dirt — 60 truckloads or 340 cubic yards of it. That's what has to be brought into the arena for the RCMP show to cover the floor area about 5-6 inches deep, then to get rid of the stuff so the Minto Cup lacrosse final, hopefully, can get started on time Sunday.

"Busiest year we've had at the arena," said Jack. Because after Sunday comes Monday and the Ali-Norton battle on closed-circuit TV, then the other games (again hopefully) in the lacrosse final, to be followed by the arrival of the Los Angeles Kings and Cougars the next Monday.

Which brings up Reid, Bob that is, manager of McDonalds, a team deeply concerned with that Minto Cup series.

Bob was not happy — twice over. First his McDonalds weren't the best team on the floor in that game against Richmond on Wednesday; and earlier he was disenchanted with the Arena, the treatment his team had received, and as the long season isn't over yet, the crowning blow may yet fall.

What Bob was beefing about was the shortage of ticket sellers Wednesday; and even if Richmond was late in arriving, the game still had to be held up until the crowd got into the place. No provision had been made to sell tickets for Sunday's fifth game here either.

As to the game — the blistering defeat, the Roadrunners beating the Macs to the ball all night, forcing them into many errors, the horrendous passing — Reid offered another caustic comment.

"We didn't get to practice in the arena from May until Aug. 1; we had to practice in smaller arenas. Maybe that's why we never play well here, but play better in smaller places like Richmond."

So Bob was bitter, and after such a great start too. McDonalds were 20 and four on the regular season and 24 and six before Wednesday, and with the biggest crowd of the year, 1,500 plus, there on Wednesday, they had picked a great time to chuck it.

Especially as league commissioner Wally Donaldson had told earlier of the tremendous interest in Richmond. "People were lining up at 6:30 in the morning for tickets which went on sale at 9," he said. "By 12 noon there were only a few scattered seats left.

"They're even writing letters to the editor of the paper, and phoning me, complaining about pulling a block of seats for the Victoria team. One lady said she had the same seats for six years and what was I going to do about it?"

Now consider Reid's other problem, which could become major.

"If we get to the Minto Cup series, and it goes seven games, you know where we will play the final game?

"In New Westminster! We can't get the arena here."

If that was a snub, Reid didn't say what others were thinking. It's a problem that now he could learn to live with. Gladly.

'Miracle Shot' Helps

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Hometowner Sandra Haynie rode a miracle shot to a four-under-par 68 Friday and seized a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $30,000 Charity Women's golf tournament.

The veteran Fort Worth sharpshooter lashed a fairway driver 205 yards into the wind on the eighth hole, a treacherous par four, and the ball trickled in for a deuce.

Vikings Crack Dolphin String

By The Associated Press

The Vikings stunned the Super Bowl champions 20-17 on Fred Cox' 25-yard field goal at the final gun in their exhibition game.

It was Miami's first setback since their next-to-last exhibition game of 1972, a 27-24 loss to Washington Redskins.

After the defeat by Washington, the Dolphins beat Minnesota 19-17 in their final exhibition, then won 14 straight regular-season games, three in the playoffs, and were unbeaten in five previous preseason contests this year, including a tie with Chicago Bears.

In other NFL exhibitions Friday night, Denver Broncos edged Buffalo Bills 16-14 and Los Angeles Rams trimmed San Diego Chargers 30-17.

Cox' winning field goal was set up by a fumble recovery by linebacker Jeff Siemon. He picked up Marlin Briscoe's fumble at the Minnesota 37 and ran it to the Miami 28.

Hectic Racing Pace

Starting tonight, and regardless of how fast the cars may go, Victoria's car-racing enthusiasts can look forward to a hectic pace at Western Speedway during the next several days.

Four events in seven days is the scheduled pace.

Claimers, stock cars and super-stocks will supply the mixture for Monday's unique Labor Day Jamboree.

Time trials will get under way at 7 p.m. for all programs except Monday's jamboree, when Speedway officials will stage a twi-night meet starting at 4:30 p.m.

Third for Rose

KINGSTON, Ont. — United States entrants have been dominating the week-long Canadian Olympic Training Regatta, but Friday proved to be "Canada Day" on the course which may be the site of the 1976 Olympic yachting program.

Canadians took six of the top 10 races Friday. It was a measure of consolation from the fact that U.S. sailors have already clinched six class triumphs.

U.S. sailors have won the Flying Dutchman, 470, Finn, Tempest, Fireball and Lightning classs while New Zealand's Clive Roberts has wrapped up OK Dinghy honors.

Tony Rose of Victoria, who held second place all week in the Dinghy event, lost the position Friday when Rob Woodbury of Brockville nosed him out while Roberts was recording his fifth straight victory.

Donald Cote of Duvernay Laval, Que., took the Toronado 8 Catamaran class and Hans Fogh of Toronto won the Soling category. They were the only Canadian winners as 409 boats from 20 countries participated here.

Nastase's Defeat An Open Shocker

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Shorn of Ilie Nastase, its most flamboyant and perhaps its most skilful player, the United States Open tennis championships opened its fourth day of play today.

Nastase's stunning upset Friday by unheralded Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia in a match carried over from Thursday was the second of the tournament and by far the most spectacular.

Trailing 5-3 in the final set when play resumed Friday, Nastase, defending champion, held his service in the ninth game, only to lose the 10th after coming within one point of breaking Pattison's service and then fighting off one match point. The scores were 6-7, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

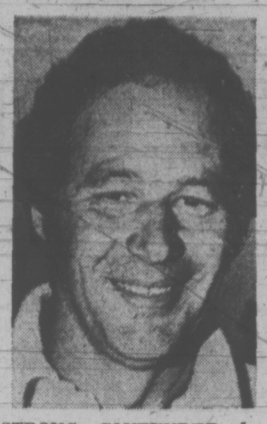
The only other upset Friday occurred when 12th-seeded Marty Riessen of the U.S. was eliminated by New Zealand's Onny Parun, 6-3, 7-6, 7-6.

On Thursday, 22-year-old John Alexander of Australia had recorded the tournament's first big upset when he rallied to defeat 11th-seeded Roger Taylor of Great Britain, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 7-5.

Stan Smith, the world's top-ranking player who was co-seeded first with Nastase, and 18-year-old Chris Evert led the advance into the third round in the men's and women's competition.

Smith, who defeated Nastase in a five-set final at Wimbledon last year and is now the favorite to win his second U.S. title, easily breezed past 16-year-old Billy Martin of the U.S., 6-3, 6-2, 6-1. He next meets 21-year-old Roscoe Tanner, who ousted Australia's Geoff Masters Friday.

Miss Evert, runner-up to Billie Jean King at Wimbledon and a semi-finalist in her first two appearances here in 1971 and 1972, had little trouble in putting out her 17-year-old teammate Marita Redondo, 6-2, 6-2.



STRONG CONTENDER for top honors in 36-hole golf tournament that started today at Cedar Hill course is Bob Cox (above), former Canadian Professsional Golfers' Association champion from Vancouver. With several pros, including current PGA champ Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, bidding for cash awards, tourney will conclude with second 18-hole round Sunday.

Burrards Nab West Crown

COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP) — Vancouver Burrards overwhelmed Coquitlam Adanacs 19-11 Friday to win the Western Lacrosse Association playoff final, four games to two.

Vancouver now goes to Brantford, Ont., to meet the eastern representative in the Mann Cup final on Sept. 7.

The sudden-death Mann Cup game is a departure from past procedure, which was usually for a best-of-seven national final. The Sept. 7 game is to be televised nationally by the CBC the following day, Saturday, Sept. 8.

A crowd of 2155 saw Burrards take period leads of 6-4 and 12-8 before running away with the game in the third period. Vancouver outshot Coquitlam, 70-52, and only some exceptional netminding by Dave Wedlock kept Adanacs from being out of it before the third period.

Al Tasker and Bob Salt each counted three goals and four assists to lead Vancouver. Dave Tasker got three goals and three assists while veteran Bob Babcock had two goals and three assists.

PREPARING for three-day test cricket match against United States is Toronto veteran Tony Clarke, captain of Canadian team who takes batting practice on Beacon Hill pitch Friday. First in 178-year history (53 matches) of International Series to be played in Western Canada, contest started today at Beacon Hill and continues until 6:30. On Sunday, play goes from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and on Monday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (John McKay photo.)

Martin Gets Rest After Spitter Spree

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tiger-manager Billy Martin was suspended Friday by the American League for instructing his pitchers to throw spitballs in Thursday night's loss to Cleveland Indians.

The action by league president Joe Cronin was disclosed in a telegram.

The text of the telegram read: "This is to inform you that you are suspended for three days, to take effect immediately, for directing your pitchers to throw illegal pitches and publicly stating that you have done so.

"Your blatant actions and your endorsement of such tactics cannot be tolerated. You will not be allowed in uniform or to participate in any game until the game of Monday, Sept. 3."

Martin, angered after the Tigers dropped a 4-1 decision to Indians pitcher Gaylord Perry, complained that Perry had used spitballs and that the umpiring crew let him get away with it.

Martin said he had told his own pitchers in that game, Joe Coleman and Fred Scherman, to throw spitballs in return.

"I am admitting it," the Tiger manager said after the game. "We threw spitters tonight — obvious spitters — on purpose."

The Tigers said third base coach Joe Schultz would direct the team for the rest of the weekend series with the Indians.

On the field Friday, the Tigers dropped a 6-3 decision to Cleveland Indians while Mel Stottlemyre won his first game in six weeks, pitching New York Yankees to a 5-2 triumph over Baltimore Orioles to end an eight-game Yankee losing streak, the club's longest since 1953.

In the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates clipped Chicago Cubs 7-0 and 5-2 to climb within one game of the East Division leaders, St. Louis Cardinals, who were tripped 6-4 by New York Mets.

Victoria Seniors In Good Position

A hole-in-one failed to halt a determined Glen Meadows' charge, but Victoria still holds the inside track on the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf League championship.

Oak Bay scored a 5-1 victory over visiting Uplands Friday to hold a 2½-point edge over second-place Glen Meadows, which defeated Cedar Hill 5½-½. Gorge Vale and Colwood tied 3-3 in Friday's other match.

Herb Stern scored the ace on the 143-yard, par-three 15th at Glen Meadows. The Cedar Hill player lost his singles match to Graham Moreland and the Meadows pairing of Moreland and Poli Howard won the best-ball.

CEDAR HILL ½, G. MEADOWS 5½

Herb Stern beaten by Graham Westmoreland, 5 and 4; Sy Spaven halved with Poli Howard; Glen Meadows won best-ball, 1 up.

Joe Watt beaten by Ted Martin, 2 and 1; Alex Coldwell beaten by Russell Ard, 5 and 4; Glen Meadows won best-ball, 3 up.

COLWOOD 3 at GORGE VALE 3

Ed Laubman beaten by Dave Fraser, 4 and 3; George Lewis beaten by George Mitchell, 2 and 1; Gorge Vale won best-ball, 3 and 1.

John Simpson defeated Wally Andrews, 1 up; Norm Reid defeated Harry Leinweber, 6 and 5; Royal Colwood won best-ball, 3 and 1.

UPLANDS 1 and VICTORIA 5

Fred Ball beaten by Bob Bonar, 2 up; Maurice Teskey beaten by George Lewis, 1 up; Uplands won best-ball, 1 up.

Stuart Bain beaten by Tom McMaster, 2 and 1; Doug Peden beaten by Jim Glassford, 3 and 2; Victoria won best-ball, 1 up.

Green Fires Torrid Round

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Hubert Green, who describes himself as "just another pretty face on the tour" sat there shaking his head in cheerful disbelief.

"My putting was just ridiculous; I almost don't believe it," the laconic, 26-year-old said after firing a career-best, eight-under-par 63 for a two-stroke lead in Friday's first round of the $200,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open Golf Tournament.

Green, now in his fourth year on the pro tour, got off to a birdie-eagle-birdie start, was five-under-par after only five holes and played the front nine in 29.

Scores were exceptionally low on the friendly little Wethersfield Country Club course, at 6,588 yards one of the shortest on the tour. And, with the players allowed to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairway, more than half the field broke par 71.

KNDSON FOUR BACK

Defending champion Lee Trevino, Billy Casper, Dave Hill and a dozen others were at 67.

Included in the group was George Knudson of Toronto who went out in 34 and came home in 33.

Arnold Palmer would have been there too, but for a three-putt bogey on the last hole that dropped him back to 68, five strokes behind.

CITY COLTS IN TITLE BID

BARRHEAD, Alta. — Victoria Evening Optimist colt baseball all-stars open play today in the preliminary round-robin portion of the Canadian midget championship.

Victoria is competing in the four-team, single round-robin "B" series while three teams will be battling in the double round-robin "A" series.

Preliminary play continues through Sunday with the "A" winner meeting the "B" runner-up and vice-versa in sudden-death semi-finals Monday. The final will be Monday afternoon.

Business Softening to Barrett

VANCOUVER (CP) — A year ago, British Columbians elected their first New Democratic Party government and the screams of big business echoed across Canada.

Today, business and financial leaders are cautiously warming to Premier Barrett and his NDP administration, particularly since he returned from a recent trip to New York and Europe.

"Since that trip, he seems to have moved more towards the middle from the extreme non-business attitude he may have held earlier," says a financial analyst.

"I think he has eliminated a lot of doubts and negative feelings by his stated policy of developing northwest B.C.," says another.

"He's made mistakes but he seems to have taken a more reasonable view on nationalization after his European trip, and is letting other companies return to normal," says a banker. "He gives the impression he can be pragmatic. He showed well at the western premiers' economic conference, on northern development, and in banking."

After the NDP was elected Aug. 30, 1972, Barrett's government presented, and approved, some 90 bills, about 24 of them having a direct bearing on business.

Latest figures from Ottawa appear to bolster businessmen's arguments that manufacturing expansion in the province has slumped since the NDP's election.

The mid-year outlook of Statistics Canada says total manufacturing investment in Canada is expected to run 19 per cent above the 1972 level. This is a nine-per-cent increase from the January tally of investment intentions.

In B.C., however, total manufacturing investment is expected to run nine per cent below last year. But this is a two-per-cent advance from the January tally of investment intentions.

On the basis of capital spending plans for all business groups, excluding housing but including utilities and transportation, Canada's mid-year spending estimate is 5 per cent higher than the January estimate and 19 per cent more than last year.

B.C.'s expansion also is 5 per cent higher than the January estimate and 11 per cent ahead of last year.

In the trade-finance-commercial area, bolstered by hotel, office and store construction projects, Canada shows a 32-per-cent gain over last year. B.C. spending plans are a healthy 24 per cent ahead of 1972.

"Nothing the government could do in one year could really stop the B.C. economy from being swept along in the international commodities boom," says Michael Ryan, chairman of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

"On the negative side, we're going to have a slower development of the mining industry. Mining companies with the choice are spending their capital outside the province rather than inside it."

On the other hand, Ryan says: "The mining and forest products industries are starting to get good communication with the government.

"We can even get opinions from deputy ministers. Communications are better than they were with the previous government."

Lately, the mining industry's top executives have had little to say about the future, but one middle executive comments that "there is no doubt about it, the industry has not learned to communicate with Victoria effectively although the opportunity is there."

On the credit side, businessmen say Barrett has:

- Improved appreciation of the complexities of business and finance;
- Shown indications of fairness, open-mindedness, intelligence and strong dedication to developing all the B.C. economy, not just favoring one side;
- Had much better communication recently between government and business, along with mutual consultation in some areas.

On the debit side, among the problems cited were:

- The land freeze and the Land Act which set up a commission to rezone all potential farm and agricultural land in the province;
- Tax increases such as the 0.1 per cent tax on capital used by corporations;
- The public works Fair Employment Act, in whch the government will deal with no one in public construction except those with union contracts;
- The Insurance Act, which lets the government take over primarily automobile insurance;
- Barrett's tendency to react and speak, then ask questions.

Businessmen worry that the proposed corporation will be tempted to take unjustified risks, Some are excited about the prospects of northern development while others worry about high costs and labor turnover.

SOCIAL DRINKING BEATS AA CURE?

MONTREAL (CP) — Abstinence from liquor may not be the answer for some alcoholics, a psychologist from Rutgers University told a convention of the American Psychological Association Friday.

Dr. Peter Nathan said research shows that one way to help an alcoholic is to turn him into a social drinker because some cannot stop drinking altogether.

Controlled drinking programs are still in an experimental stage, he said, but the success rate is "consideably higher" than that of Alcoholics Anonymous.

An alcoholic should be taught his drinking limits and he should know how to drink in moderation so the alcohol level in his blood never goes past a certain point, he said.

The target of each patient in the experimental group is about four drinks an hour, he said.

While this would make an ordinary person quite drunk, Dr. Nathan said that to alcoholics with a 15-year problem this target is very controlled.

JURY CURB RULED OUT

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A special three-judge federal court has ruled invalid a clause of Louisiana's constitution that bans women from jury duty unless they volunteer for it.

The decision came Friday in a suit filed by four women and three men who said Louisiana's jury selection system denied men and women equal protection of the laws.

FARMERS SLAM LAND FREEZE

CLOVERDALE (CP) — More than 200 farmers from the farmlands bordering Vancouver gathered at the community centre Thursday to voice their opposition to having their land designated as an agricultural reserve under the Provincial Land Commission Act.

Dalton Jones, a former Surrey alderman, drew the crowd's approval when he blasted the provincial government for singling out farmers to "bear the brunt" of land preservation.

MLA Carl Liden (NDP—Delta) told the meeting that the government must save the farmland "before it's too late." He said many farms in built-up areas are not in fact owned by farmers but by land developers who intend to use them for purposes other than for agriculture.

He said Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich is preparing legislation for the fall session which will benefit the agricultural industry.

The meeting was sponsored by the newly-formed farmers for action committee which endorsed four motions to forward to the Greater Vancouver regional district, the land commission, Premier Barrett and the provincial cabinet.

The motions called for all highlands located above the flood plain levels in the Fraser Valley to be exempted from the freeze and permanent agriculture reserve; purchase price for land put in reserve to be no less than the value at the time of the application of the orders-in-council plus any additional natural appreciation in value; a practical economic feasibility study to be made for marginal farmland in the area, and a voice for property owners in planning.

RESOURCES SKY SWEEP SET TODAY

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab 2 astronauts point powerful cameras at a swarm of locusts in northeast Africa today to try to learn whether pictuers taken from spaceships would be helpful in controlling such pests.

Passing the 14-million-mile mark in their orbital voyage, Alan Bean, Owen Garriott and Jack Lousma, were making their first earth resources picture-taking sweep in three weeks. They used hand-held cameras to look at the locusts and study tropical storm Christine.

The 32-minute, 9,000-mile resources pass starts in South America, with data collection on agriculture and forestry, and sweeps northeastward across the Atlantic and into West Africa, where photos will be made to help map remote areas.

Student Flexes Muscles

VANCOUVER (CP) — School principals should be afraid of a proposed province-wide organization of students, a member of a student task force said Friday.

"Our policy is to shake up the education system," said Doug Coupar. "We are obviously opposing the power structure and they are at the top of the structure.

"We are after a totally democratic school system, and a lot of principals don't believe in a democratic school system."

He is one of seven members of a task force set up by education commissioner John Bremer to study the feasibility of a provincial student union and newspaper.

The task force told a news conference Friday a province-wide conference of students will likely be held at the end of October to discuss forming an independent organization of B.C. secondary school students.

The group emphasized that it will up to the conference to decide the structure, policies and fianances of a student union.

But some members of the task force said they feel one goal of the student's union should be to negotiate with the provincial government, the B.C. Teacher's Federation and local school administrators.

Coupar said the union should "definitely" seek changes in the public schools act to dilute the power of principals over the student body.

"A lot of things in the Public Schools Act are so general and so vague, they give the principal power to manipulate students," he said.

"The act leaves it up to the principal to define what he thinks is just, and in a lot of cases what the principal thinks is just is just outright fascism."

B.C. Fishermen Probing Code

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twelve B.C. fishing companies are challenging the Canada Labor Code as it relates to the province's fishing industry.

In a federal court action, the companies are asking for declarations that Parliament does not have jurisdiction to make the code applicable to fishermen or to the companies which purchase their fish.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union has applied for certification as bargaining agent for all new fishermen in B.C., including native fishermen now represented by the Native Brotherhood of B.C., Martin Levey, counsel for the companies, said Friday. The Canada labor relations board is considering the application.

He said the code provides for a certification of unions and direction for collective bargaining concerning the purchase of fish and makes other orders binding on the companies.

The companies have filed a notice of motion in the federal court asking for a writ prohibiting the labor relations board from considering the UFAWU application for certification pending a court decision on the claim that the legislation is beyond parliamentary powers.

Levy said the Canada Labor Code provides for compulsory collective bargaining, but "there has been for many years free and voluntary negotiations between fishermen and packing companies with regard to the price of fish."

He also said the federal government does not have the power to make the union a trade union for fishermen because the fishermen are independent businessmen.

The companies claim the terms of agreements covering the sale and purchase of fish by the companies are local contractual matters occurring entirely within the province of B.C. and they are not a federal undertaking within the meaning of the labor code.

The writ also says the code, which gives the Canada labor relations board the jurisdiction to certify bargaining agents and require compulsory collective bargaining, is not applicable to the companies.

Socreds Meet in Winnipeg To Gear for Ottawa Vote

WINNIPEG (CP) — The national council of the Social Credit Party is meeting here this weekend to lay plans for the next federal election which Party Leader Real Caouette says could come as early as November.

More than 100 delegates from eight of the 10 provinces were expected to attend council sessions today and Sunday and elect a new national president and two vice-presidents.

Caouette said Friday he expects no changes in party policy as a result of the meeting, and said some of the sessions would certainly centre on the next election.

Last fall, only 15 of the party's 164 candidates won seats in Parliament, but Caouette said he is hopeful voters will be ready to try something different when they go to cast their votes next time.

"Now if they are happy with what is taking place today, they only have to stick with it," he said. "If they want something new, I think that it's about timee to try Social Credit at the national level."

The party's national council includes members of the national executive, vice-presidents from each of the provinces, Social Credit MPs, and representatives from federal ridings.

This weekend's meeting is the first of its kind since Quebec Creditistes re-united with the western branch of the Social Credit Party two years ago. Retiring party president Gilbert Rondeau, MP for the Quebec riding of Shefford, said Friday that the party has high hopes of re-establishing itself in Western Canada.

"We are working hand-in-hand with the Social Crediters from Western Canada, and this is why I say when we do work together instead of working against one another this is the first good sign that we are going to have success in the very near future," he said.

Delegations were expected from all provinces except Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

Achievement Expert Hired

British Columbia's education department has hired an expert in developing and evaluating programs that measure learning achievement.

Dr. Jerry Mussio, a native of Trail, has been appointed assistant director, learning assistance programs. He joins the staff of the existing directorate of research and standards.

PAPER PACT SET

TORONTO (UPI) — Only "loose ends" were left to settle today between Abitibi Pulp and Paper Co. and the union representing 6,000 employees in negotiations which could set a pattern for the Eastern Canada paper industry.

The contract settlement seemed complete on essential issues when talks were temporarily adjourned Friday to allow Abitibi officials time to study a union reply to the company offer.

Once minor technical details are agreed upon, a tentative agreement would be submitted to ratification by the 6,000 Abitibi employees, members of the United paperworkers International Union. Union spokesman Jim Buchanan referred to the points yet to be settled as "many loose ends."

The current round of negotiations began last Tuesday. The original bargaining began last May 26, lasted 10 days, and the broke down. A five-day mediation session was held later, but this also failed.

The third session was to be the last, as far as the union was concerned. In a press release, it said the workers would strike Abitibi if the current talks broke down.

What Mincome Means to You

Carver Okalik with wife

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Mincome — what is it, and what can it do for me?

That is the question facing a significant number of British Columbians these days, now that the provincial government has lowered the age of eligibility of the provincial minimum income plan from 65 years to 60.

Mincome is basically nothing more than the provision of provincial government money on top of old age security benefits provided to over-65s by the federal government.

But the B.C. government, in the move announced last week by Human Resources Minister Norman Levi and Premier Dave Barrett, has established itself as a pioneer in North America by making available to persons aged 60 and over a guaranteed income of $209.02 per month.

Guarantee

The term "guaranteed income" is nothing more than that. If an individual is not able to raise a total of $209.02 per month through his or her various sources of income, the provincial government undertakes to bring the individual's income up to $209.02.

When the government first brought Mincome into existence late last year, the minimum income guaranteed was $200 per month. But when the federal government recently announced increases in the old age security level, B.C. passed along the increase to its recipients of Mincome, raising the guarantee by $9.02.

The only eligibility requirement of the new Mincome program, which takes effect Oct. 1, is that a person be 60 years of age or over, a resident of the province, and have an income of less than $209.02 per month.

In the case of a married couple, the combined income allowable for recipients of mincome is $418.04 per month.

Means Test

In order for the government to determine whether an individual has a personal income of $209.02 per month or not, applicants for the new Mincome plan will be required to fill out forms stating their incomes, their level of assets held in such sources as stocks, bonds and bank accounts, and their shelter costs.

From this, the government will determine what amount of money it must provide to bring the individual's income up to $209.02. Any level of assets is allowable; it is the income which counts.

In the case of a person of 65 years or over, much of the $209.02 is provided by the federal government either through old age security payments or what is known as a "guranteed income supplement."

This supplement, which runs to a maximum of $73.86 per month, is provided to old age pensioners in converse proportion to their other sources of income. The larger the individual's personal income, the smaller his supplement.

Supplement

The supplement is added to the basic federal old age security payment of $105.30 per month, for a maximum federal government payment to old age pensioners of $179.16.

Mincome, which was introduced by the provincial government during the special fall session of the legislature last year, is another supplement added on top of this federal package.

To bring an individual's monthly income up to the new level of $209.02, the provincial government comes up with its own payment of $29.86 per month, or whatever part of that the individual is not able to raise himself.

As of this month, there were about 97,000 persons aged 65 and over in the province who were collecting provincial government payments in the form of Mincome.

It is anticipated that 20,000 people between 60 and 64 will be eligible for the $209.02 guaranteed income when the new aspect of the scheme takes effect Oct. 1. There will also be several people who will become eligible who were not before because of the federal government's old age security residency requirement of 10 years in Canada.

The lowering of the age of eligibility of Mincome from 65 to 60 raises the question of how willing the provincial government is to give people in that age bracket the option of retiring and living off Mincome payments when they would normally have continued working until age 65.

A spokesman for the human resources department said the government is not worried about this eventuality.

He said it has been the government's position in negotiations with the federal government that Ottawa gradually lower the age of eligibility of the Canada Pension Plan from its present 65 to an eventual 60 years of age.

The extension of Mincome to the 60-64 age group accomplishes this aim, he said.

At the same time, it will likely open up positions in the provincial job market being vacated by people opoting for Mincome, and making them available for younger persons.

The spokesman also said there is no fear on the part of the government that B.C. will become a haven for retired people. Since Mincome was brought into effect last fall, there has been absolutley no evidence of that kind of a trend, he said.

Publicity

Another spokesman in the department said a publicity campaign will start about the middle of September to acquaint the public with the details of the new Mincome scheme.

The principal difference between the new scheme and the old is persons between the ages of 60 and 64 who wish to receive Mincome benefits are going to have to apply for them.

When Mincome was first brought in, the provincial government was able to use the records compiled by the federal government's old age security division for those aged 65 and over. But no such records exist for those between 60 and 64.

'TOY TREATMENT' IRKS ESKIMO

In a telephone interview with the aid of a territorial government interpreter, Prime Okalik said he feels left out and won't return to the exhibition next year.

Okalik's words differed greatly from those broadcast from Vancouver to Frobisher Bay on a television program last Thursday.

On that program, another translator said Okalik was happy in the city.

In the recent interview Peter Ernerk, 26, a government information officer, said that after the telephone conversation Okalik appeared about to weep.

The Eskimo said he had been carving in Vancouver for two weeks, his hands were sore and he was tired.

Enough Watchdogs

OTTAWA (CP) — The food prices review board has adequate staff, Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray reiterated Friday.

Contradicting statements by board chairman Beryl Plumptre, the minister told the Commons that he understands the board has adequate staff to "carry out its mandate."

Mrs. Plumptre said recently the board has been slow receiving staff from government departments and has too few of the right people.

The minister was replying to New Democratic leader David Lewis who described Gray as the "vital, invigorating and dynamic minister of consumer affairs." There was loud laughter from opposition MPs and applause from Liberals.

Peter Reilly (PC — Ottawa West) asked if the chairman "of the so-called food prices review board" will be fired in light of "the gratuitously effronting advice to eat cake if you can't get bread."

Gray said the government plans no such action and that Reilly should not take out his "personal pique" at the board.

Reilly was refused entry to a closed meeting of the food prices review board earlier in the summer. He said he had a right to attend as a representative of his constituents.

WIDER POWER FOR WORLD COURT

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (UPI) — The sixth conference on world peace through law ended here Friday with a call for a sharp broadening of the powers of the International Court of Justice.

An estimated 1,800 delegates representing 135 nations passed a motion demanding that the world court be allowed to handle cases involving private persons and corporations affected by treaties.

A similar demand for expanded powers for the world court as issued by a world assembly of judges meeting held simultaneously with the world law conference.

Saturday Movies

Operation Petticoat (xxx), on 13 at 8. A well-made and entertaining 1959 comedy about a submarine, its mad, mad crew and their unbelievable exploits in the South Pacific. A good cast with Cary Grant and Tony Curtis.

My Geisha (xx), on 5 at 9. Some beautifully photographed scenes of Japan and a good cast (Shirley MacLaine, Yves Montand, Edward G. Robinson and Bob Cummings) are the only attributes of this over-long 1962 comedy about a movie star who follows her director-husband to Tokyo and pretends to be a geisha.

A Man For All Seasons (xxxx), on 8 at 9 and 6 at 11:15. Not to be missed is this Oscar-winning 1966 historical drama, shown on television for the very first time. The film's essence is a clash of wills that rocked 16th-century England, when Sir Thomas More — Lord Chancellor and a devout Catholic — refused to condone the divorce or remarriage of Henry VIII. A flawless cast includes Paul Scofield, Wendy Hiller and Leo McKern.

Secrets of Women, on 9 at 9. Another in the series of Ingmar Bergman films, this one made in 1952 consisting of stories of love as related by three sisters-in-law waiting for their husbands at a summer resort.

The Second Time Around (xx), on 11 at 9. A sprightly 1961 western comedy about a young widow and her children who find themselves stranded

The Moon is Blue (xxx), on 7 at 11. Maggie McNamara, William Holden and David Niven star in this 1953 Otto Preminger-directed comedy about an architect who becomes involved with an outspoken and vivacious young woman.

Period of Adjustment (xxx), on 12 at 11. A refreshing 1962 comedy, written by Tennessee Williams, about the problems of a young married couple in adjusting to the rigors of domestic life. Jane Fonda, Tony Franciosa and Jim Hutton star.

Nine Hours to Rama (xxx), on 5 at 11:15. Horst Buchholz, Jose Ferrer and Diane Baker star in this 1963 drama that re-creates the events leading up to the assassination of Mahatma Gandhi.

A Man for All Seasons (xxxx), on 6 at 11:15. (See earlier for details of this excellent film).

Tower of London (xx), on 13 at 11:30. History and horror are mixed in this 1939 drama set during the reign of Edward IV, when the king's brother connived to take over the throne. Starring are Boris Karloff and Basil Rathbone.

How Green Was My Valley (xxxx), on 4 at 11:45. An excellent cast (Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'hara, Donald Crisp and Roddy McDowall) highlights this beautifully moving 1941 story of a coal mining family in Wales. Directed by John Ford — recommended!

Saturday Specials

Tigers, on 9 at 7. A one-act allegorical play that explores the problem of communication between a lion tamer and his wife. Point of conflict — the accidental death of their son due to the negligence of the father. (60 mins.)

Hooray for Hollywood, on 5 at 8. Don Adams, Don Rickles and Edie Adams in a comedy salute to Hollywood, narrated by Charlton Heston. (60 mins.)

Sunday Movies

The Fastest Guitar Alive (xx), on 5 at 1:30. A 1967 comedy about the misadventures of a couple of Confederate operators out to rob a mint starring Roy Orbison and Sammy Jackson.

A Cold Night's Death (x), on 6 and 8 at 2:30. Two good actors (Eli Wallach and Robert Culp) waste their time and talent in this 1972 made-for-TV sci-fi drama about two scientists trapped in a snowbound research station.

Man from the Alamo (xx), on 13 at 2:30. Glenn Ford and Julia Adams star in this interesting western adventure about the only man to survive the Alamo massacre.

Gunfight at Abilene (x), on 7 at 3:30. A feud develops between cattlemen and farmers after the Civil War in this 1967 western starring Bobby Darin and Leslie Nielsen.

A Man Betrayed (xx), on 11 at 4. John Wayne, Frances Dee and Wallace Ford star in this 1941 drama about a young lawyer who learns that a friend's strange death was murder, not suicide.

The Two Mrs. Carrolls (xx), on 13 at 4. An artist methodically works out a plan to murder his wife in this predictable 1947 melodrama starring Humphrey Bogart, Barbara Stanwyck and Alexis Smith.

The Delicate Delinquent (xxx), on 11 at 5:30. A better-than-average Jerry Lewis comedy that has him joining the police force as a rookie cop. Filmed in 1957 and co-starring Darren McGavin and Martha Hyer.

Deception (xxx), on 13 at 6. A well-acted (Bette Davis, Claude Rains and Paul Henreid) but slow-moving 1946 melodrama about a concert pianist who tries to keep her husband from knowing about her pre-marital affair.

My Son John (xx), on 4 at 9. Helen Hayes plays a mother who suspects her eldest son of Communist affiliations in this 1952 drama that co-stars Robert Walker, Van Heflin and Dean Jagger.

Breaking the Sound Barrier (xxxx), on 12 at 9. A truly marvelous British-made 1952 aerial drama highlighted by superb performances and breathtaking photography. It's about an aircraft manufacturer and his quest to produce a plane that can travel faster than the speed of sound and stars Ralph Richardson, Ann Todd and Nigel Patrick.

Jigsaw (xx), on 6 at 11:15. (See Saturday 12 midnight on Channel 8 for details.)

The Day They Robbed the Bank of England (xxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A 1960 English-made crime-drama about a 1901 plot by Irish dissidents to steal a fortune in gold starring Aldo Ray, Elizabeth Sellars and Hugh Griffith. Watch for Peter O'Toole in a small role, showing the acting promise fulfilled later.

Smoky (xxx), on 4 at midnight. It's unfortunate that this sentimental outdoor drama for children is shown so late. Made in 1946, it tells the story of the caputre and training of a beautiful wild horse and stars Fred MacMurray, Anne Baxter and Burl Ives.

Sunday Specials

People Power, on 5 at 4. "A Matter of Life" focuses on a variety of human life issues including birth control, abortion, suicide and euthanasia. (2 hours.)

CBS News Retrospective, on 7 and 12 at 6. "The Great American Novel," a 1968 Emmy winning documentary that explores the bonds between literature and life. (60 mins.)

Jerry Lewis Telethon, on 11 at 7:30. Help fight muscular dystrophy — that's the appeal of celebrities on Jerry Lewis's 11th fund-raising telethon, telecast live and on tape from Las Vegas's Hotel Sahara, New York, Hollywood and Nashville. (20 hours.)

The Waltons, on 2 and 6 at 8. "The Crisis," a drama of family strength centering on Olivia Walton, who is stricken with polio and confined to her bed. (2 hours.)

Time of My Life, on 2 and 6 at 10. True Canadian adventure stories are recalled by the old-timers who experienced them with snapshots and archival film accompanying most of the tales of turn-of-the-century life in Canada. (60 mins.)

In Search of the Real Che Guevera, on 8 at 10. A documentary study of the Cuban revolutionary. (60 mins.)

Host: Lamont Tilden.

One Small Step Between Virus; Cancer Studied

LONDON (FWF) — Is it possible that a virus, known for years as a cause of skin sores, may also cause several different sorts of human cancer?

For several years, scientists have been trying to establish a definite link between certain human cancers and virus infections. In the past few months, there has been considerable excitement in the field as new evidence has appeared and, at the Joint European Assembly on Cytology and Cancer Prevention held in Salzburg in July, Dr. Bernard Roizman of the University of Chicago presented what was described as "the last critical bit of circumstantial evidence" linking a herpes virus with cervical cancer.

Although the evidence implicating this virus as a cancer-causing agent is now long and impressive, it does not mean that doctors know the full story of how cancer is caused; what it does mean is that it may be possible, within a few years, to develop vaccines against certain forms of cancer, and to detect at an early stage whether people are developing these cancers.

However, the essential riddle still remains: of the people who are infected by herpes virus, why do some develop a mild, although unpleasant, skin condition, while others, possibly years later, develop cancer?

Cancer occurs when the delicate control mechanism of a living cell goes wrong. Cancerous cells multiply when they should not do so; they are also able to break away from their original site in the body, and move to other sites to establish secondary cancers, despite the elaborate defence mechanisms of the body against invasion.

Each cell in the body is controlled by the genetic material, deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA). We all start life as a single cell, with a unique complement of DNA, derived in equal parts from the DNAs of our parents.

In essence an elaborate chemical code, this DNA causes us to develop into human beings, and every cell contains the coded instructions for the whole body. Once we start to grow, and cells differentiate to become brain cells, or the cells of our big toes, biochemical control mechanisms switch off most of the DNA in any cell, so that it henceforth carries out only a specific function.

When a cell becomes cancerous, something goes wrong with this switching off mechanism, allowing the cell to multiply far beyond the needs of the part of the body in which it occurs.

Another way in which the cell's machinery can go wrong is when it is infected by a virus — which is why scientists have suspected for so long a link between cancers and viruses.

Viruses are strange structures, so peculiar that it is impossible to tell whether they are living or not. In general, a virus consists of only two parts — a long strand of DNA, or a related material called RNA, and a protective coating of protein.

By itself, a virus cannot reproduce. But, when it infects a living cell, it can take command of that cell's biochemical apparatus, so that instructions from the cell's DNA are ignored, and the cell becomes devoted to reproducing virus particles.

In a full-blooded infection, the cell eventually breaks apart, releasing a host of fresh virus particles to continue the infection until either the body's defence mechanisms destroy the particles, or the infection destroys the body.

It now seems that this is not the only possibility. Instead of infecting a cell, and reproducing, the viral DNA, or a part of it, may join onto the cellular DNA and stay there in a switched-off state. If this happens, each time the cell divides to produce another cell it will pass on the whole complement of DNA — its own, and the "foreign" part that came from the virus.

For some reason, scientists believe, the viral fragment of DNA may, years later, become activated in such a way that the cell becomes cancerous. What is still not known is what type of event causes this disastrous activation.

The evidence presented by Roizman in Salzburg concerned a herpes virus, of which there are a number. Herpes type one, for example, is responsible for cold sores on the face.

The type two herpes virus, with which Dr. Roizman has been concerned, is transmitted by sexual contact, and causes genital sores. Roizman has found traces of the DNA of this virus in a human cervical cancer; further, these viral snippets were linked to the genetic material of the cervical cells.

Another scientist active in this field is Albert Sabin — the man who produced the first satisfactory live polio vaccine. A live vaccine is a modified form of infective material which causes the body's defence mechanisms to operate, without actually producing a harmful infection.

What the body does is to produce specific substances called antibodies, which inactivate the infective material. The actual part of the infective material against which the body reacts is called an antigen.

Sabin has produced antigens for the nucleic acid material of herpes types one and two, and used these to test for the presence of antibodies in sera from cancer patients.

In nine types of cancer, such antibodies were present, and the cancers, which includes those of lip, mouth, cervix, and bladder, were all associated with parts of the body susceptible to sores in a normal herpes virus infection.

If all this evidence is believed, it still does not mean an end to cancer research. We still need to know what suddenly triggers off the latent viral material to make the cell cancerous.

On the other hand, there are two possible practical applications of the knowledge. Checking sera for the presence of specific antibodies could open the way to a simpler method of cancer diagnosis. Secondly, if someone could modify herpes virus to produce a live vaccine, it might provide a means of preventing both the infective sores and a number of types of cancer.

Calgary Services Must Stay: Mayor

CALGARY (CP) — Mayor Rod Sykes proposed Thursday that if the province refused to increase the 1973 budget for Calgary's preventive social services, the city should pay it in order to maintain the present level of services.

The province had earlier approved a budget of $1,193,416—$229,000 less than the city asked for.

Costs for municipal preventive social services are shared 20 per cent by the municipalities and 80 per cent by the province. The province's share is in turn shared 50 per cent by the federal government, so the province's net share is 40 per cent of the total.

WANNA BUY A FREEZER?

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — As people look for ways to save money on food bills, a lot of them are buying freezers, or considering it.

Phyllis McDermott says using a home freezer isn't economical for everyone, and suggests a few things to think about before buying.

Miss McDermott is head of the University of Windsor home economics department.

She says people with small families may be as well off with the freezer space offered by a refrigerator. To get the best value from a large freezer, she says, one must keep the unit full. It costs as much to run it empty as it does full.

Add to the basic cost the freezer wrap and an increased electricity or gas bill.

"People who aren't going to make use of it will not necessarily cut down on food costs. Large families will get more use from it than small ones.

She estimates one cubic foot stores about 35 pounds of food, and a buyer should figure about six cubic feet of freezer space per person for efficient use.

She says there are other factors to consider.

If you buy beef in bulk, you may get some cuts your family doesn't like, such as heart, liver, tongue.

You can buy special "packages" put up for freezer owners, that will include 20 to 50 pounds of a variety of cuts.

The space outside the freezer should be considered, as well as the space inside.

"A freezer is no space saver. And don't count on keeping it in the garage unless you have a heated, insulated garage and are prepared to raise it from the floor. Extreme temperatures affect the motor."

RATS! — Despite the strained expression on 17-year-old Florence Bentley's face, there was no cause for alarm at Edmonton's Boyle Street Playground. The place was not over-run with rats. It was merely a case of Pepper, a lively laboratory rat, needing a place to take a breather from the attention which surrounded Florence and fellow-members of the Victoria Composite High School Biology Club when they brought their pets to the playground.

Swapping's the Name

Shades of a gypsy caravan of wares at Swap and Shop

. . . For Bargaining Game

The sales counter is anywhere you find it at Swap and Shop — the car hood, an unused drive-in speaker post or the gravel at your feet.

Bargaining's the game and countless thrifty consumers and salesmen alike throng around the Tillicum Outdoor Theatre Sundays to "get the best price."

Items for sale can range from clothes — of all eras — china, a lamp shade that can effectively double as next year's Easter bonnet or a more economical purchase — a kitchen sink.

More and more regulars are showing up at the gates to browse among the stalls raised within minutes after doors open Sunday at 9 a.m.

And as far as the consumer's concerned, bargains get better and better as the afternoon wears on and sellers face the possibility of having to lug home their wares — especially the large objects.

Although the market got off to a slow start more than two years ago, its following now is a healthy one and sellers, in anticipation of next week's event can be seen unearthing odds and ends at auctions and bazaars.

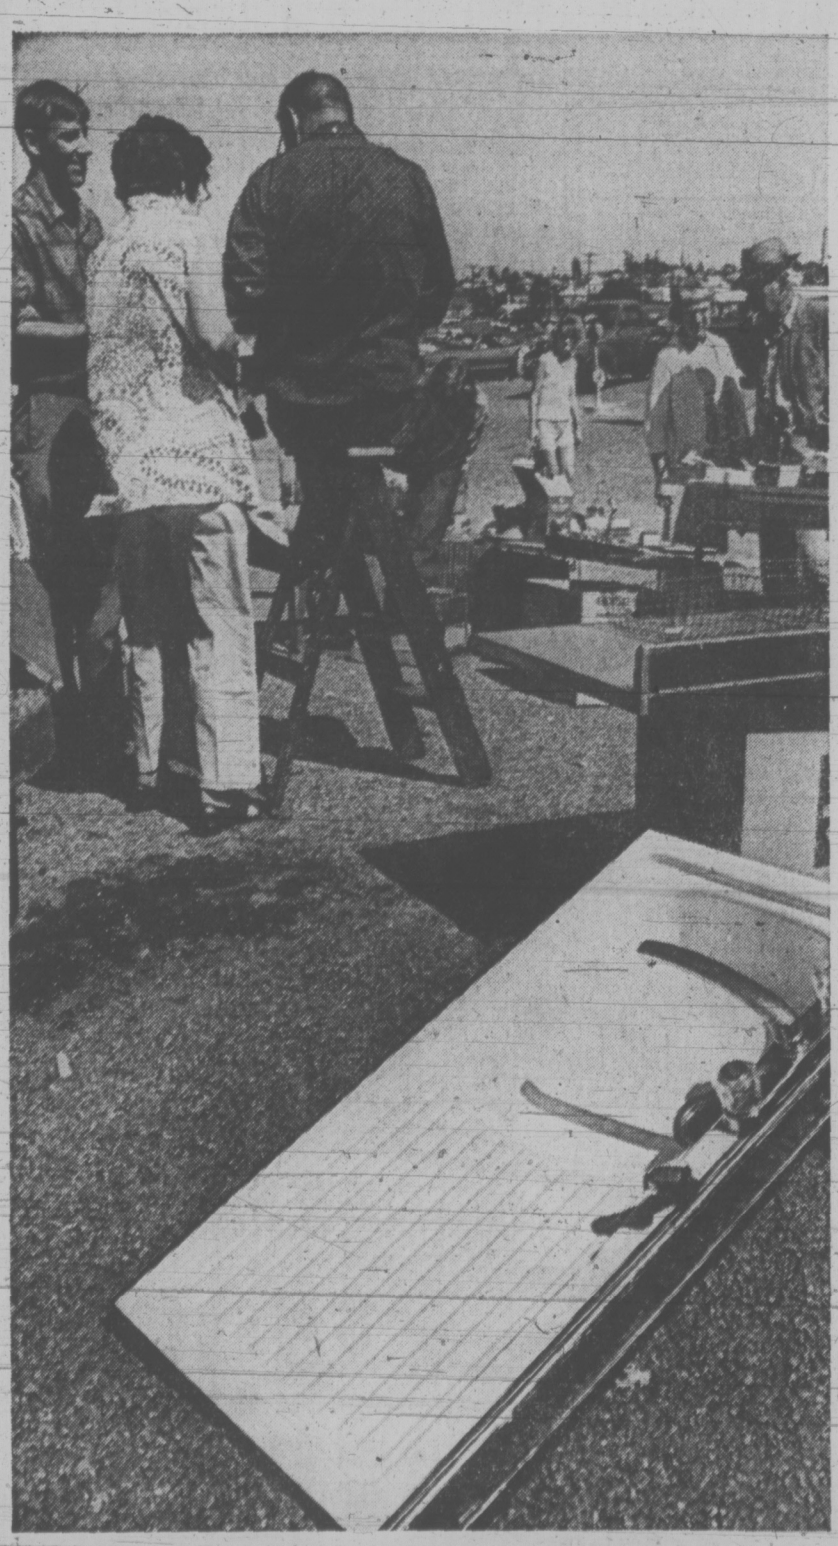
The space between two speaker posts is considered one man's store all day for the seller's fee of $2 and customers are permitted a full day's bargain hunting for 25 cents admission.

Although not the most economical — any child's idea of the best buy could be the plastic pumpkin, "just two months ahead of time" grinning from the top of someone's salescounter.



. . . Even the kitchen sink is available

Destroyer Shells Minelayer

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — A destroyer crew misfired a shell Friday and hit a mine-laying vessel that was towing a target ship, killing one sailor and wounding three others, a navy spokesman said.

The 2,700-ton minelaying vessel Aelvsborg was participating in a navy manoeuvre in the Stockholm archipelago when it was hit by a shell from the destroyer Oestergoetland.

This Russian Walter Mitty Made It All Happen for Him

MOSCOW (UPI) — Vasily Gorbatenko's life was a succession of heroic and brilliant deeds — at least that's the way he told the story.

As a boy, he was a partisan fighting in the forests against the Germans. He was a warrior so valiant his name struck terror in the hearts of the enemy. He was even wounded once but managed to escape.

Gorbatenko's job dossier said he went to eight institutes of higher education after the war, graduating for some of them twice.

But none of it really happened.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Friday Gorbatenko was an imposter whose heroic flights of fancy could have rivalled Walter Mitty.

Gorbatenko was wounded as a boy, but not while fighting Germans, Pravda said. He accidentally shot himself while playing with an old hunting rifle.

And Gorbatenko's diplomas were typed and signed by himself.

The newspaper accused Gorbatenko of taking correspondence courses from two schools and passing his examinations by cheating and bribery.

He eventually got a degree and became a professor at Yakutsk. With the permission of higher authorities, he organized a joint scientific council which had the authority to judge the qualifications of candidates for doctoral degrees.

"It was later discovered that half the persons on that council were non-existent and that he forged their signatures," Pravda said.

It said Gorbatenko stole doctoral dissertations and peddled them to candidates. The newspaper did not say how Gorbatenko was unmasked or what became of him.

China Back On Cruises

HONG KONG (UPI) — Visits to China by foreign cruise ships will resume next months for the first time since 1949, travel industry sources said Friday.

The 10,000-ton British liner Coral Princess will make the first trip, with scheduled stops at Tientsin and Shanghai.

The Coral Princess is to leave Kobe, Japan, Sept. 10 on a 27-day cruise, the sources reported. Aboard will be 406 Japanese students, 74 professors and officials on an educational trip.

The ship will be at Tientsin three days and then make a two-day visit to Shanghai. Other stops will include Manila, Singapore and Okinawa.

They're Back on Bikini

By JON ANDERSON

American authorities removed the people of the remote atoll in the Marshall Islands before the nuclear tests carried out at Bikini and nearby Eniwetok between 1946 and 1958.

Atomic explosions were set off in the air, on the surface and under the water. Entire islands simply disintegrated.

The vegetation of Bikini was stripped away by the fireballs and for many years the atoll was contaminated by nuclear fallout, unfit for human living.

Now one of the world's most remote housing developments is going up on this barren atoll. Workmen, toiling under the tropical sun, are putting the finishing touches to the homes in preparation for the islanders return—perhaps before the end of this year.

The people of Bikini, who numbered about 150 when they were evacuated in 1946, were eventually resettled on the rocky isle of Killi in the southern Marshalls group.

Killi has no safe lagoon for fishing, a major source of sustenance for the islanders, and their 27-year exile has been a time of extreme difficulty for them.

Since 1968, when the level of radiation on Bikini was declared low enough to make return possible, the United States has been preparing the atoll by planting coconuts and other tropical food plants, and constructing a new village.

The number of islanders was estimated last year at about 300.

The people were required to give their approval at each stage, although objections now are being raised on some aspects of the design. Each family will have a typhoon-resistant home with adjacent cooking, laundry and toilet areas.

The houses will be ready for occupancy towards the end of this year. But whether the people will accept them and other arrangements for their return now is a matter of some concern to trust territory officials.

There are, for instance, objections being raised to the housing design, though this was originally approved by the islanders.

Officials in the Marshall Islands district centre of Majuro, however, are confident that through negotiations, the path of return can be smoothed out.

Whether the people of Bikini go home this year or next, the homecoming is bound to be an emotional occasion.

Many will not remember the traditional home the islanders were forced to leave 27 years ago, and probably no one will recognize the islands today after the changes wrought by nuclear blasts.

But the coconuts and breadfruit are growing and the lagoon is again teeming with fish, so life may once again resume much of its old pattern.

$7 MILLION BID FROM JAMES BAY

OTTAWA (FP) — The James Bay Development Corporation wants a $7-million deep harbor built at Fort George, at the mouth of the La Grande River so that 30,000-ton tankers can deliver huge quantities of fuel more cheaply for the James Bay hydroelectric development projects.

And the corporation plans to ask Ottawa to foot all, or at least part, of the bill.

Andre Langlois, director of planning and development for the JBDC, said that plans for the proposed deep harbor will be submitted to Ottawa for approval and financing "within a few weeks."

He estimated that the harbor would cost $7 million. Plans call for construction to start next year.

The corporation, Langlois said, has already done its own internal studies on the design of the harbor facility and on the possibilities and problems of oil spills into James Bay.

But the project would not be specifically covered under the already-planned $10-million-worth of federal-provincial James Bay environmental studies. Nor is there any special impact study on the harbor being planned at the moment.

The harbor would handle an estimated one million tons or more of petroleum products during the first 10 years of its operation.

Langlois said in the peak year of 1978, the corporation plans to ship in as much as 200,000 tons of fuel. This would require, he said, about seven visits by 30,000-ton tankers in the peak year.

AT FIRST GLANCE it appears Ed Williams is taking on a big job, cutting his wheat with a lawn mower on his farm east of Tisdale, Sask. Actually, he is trimming his yard grass, which borders the healthy stand of wheat. The grain will probably be cut next week — and not with the lawn mower.

The Cushy Life Has Vanished

PRAGUE (Reuter) — Five years after Warsaw Pact troops invaded Czechoslovakia, hundreds of the prominent men and women purged from power following Alexander Dubcek's downfall still are eking out livings in menial jobs.

In the heady days of the liberal "Prague spring" of 1968, they helped guide Czechoslovakia's destiny as high Communist officials, diplomats, civil servants, newspaper editors and broadcasters.

This was the period when Czechoslovaks under Dubcek, then Communist party chief, were pressing forward with a policy of reforms they called "socialism with a human face"—the policy that resulted in the invasion on the night of Aug. 20, 1968, by hundreds of thousands of Soviet-led troops.

Today these once-prominent people stoke boilers, drive bulldozers, sell tobacco, clean windows, wash cars, dig Prague's new underground railway and work as cloakroom attendants.

Purged from their positions of influence and mostly refusing to recant their views, the fallen liberals of 1968 are reduced to earning their keep in jobs which are obscure, unsuitable, insecure and often ill-paid.

Unwilling to repeat Czechoslovakia's reign of terror of the 1950s, party leader Gustav Husak has allowed most of them to remain at liberty.

Yet the passage of time has done nothing to ease the severity of their disgrace and they have not been permitted to return to the important posts for which they are qualified and experienced.

The Communist party keeps a close eye on their present careers, and intervenes to prevent promotion and to keep salaries at a low level.

Fresh purges, which have slowed but never ceased, continue to add to their numbers. Some liberals face the threat of being purged a second or third time into ever lower employment.

This was the fate of a former Czechoslovak diplomat posted in Moscow who took a job as a lift-boy in a Prague hotel after having to leave the foreign ministry. When a group of visiting Russian officials recognized him and unknowingly greeted him with bear-hugs, he was promptly banished to work in the cellars out of the public eye.

A former television announcer was relieved of his job as gas station attendant because customers flocked to him in a demonstration of solidarity.

Roman London Has But 15 Years Left

By JOHN ROBERTS

LONDON (Reuter) — Roman London has only 15 years more to live and the medieval city of Lincoln only five, leading British archeologists warn.

The enemy is massive property development resting on two-storey basements, enough to destroy almost every trace of a city's historic past.

Archeologists fear that unless there is urgent legislation to safeguard what is left and to survey what still is thought to exist, it will prove impossible to answer some of the major unsolved questions of Britain's past.

The problem is mainly an urban one, for no legislation exists to protect the historic centres of some of the country's oldest cities.

But even in the rural southern England county of Wiltshire, where just 18 years ago there were 640 ancient monuments scheduled for preservation, more than 250 have been completely destroyed while probably only 100 are totally untouched.

In London, where archeologists would dearly love to reveal such hidden treasures as the site of the first London bridge, the prospect, they say, is frightening.

Within 15 years almost 90 per cent of the old Roman and medieval city—still known as "the City"—will be covered by buildings whose foundations effectively ensure that never again will archeologists be able to uncover coherent traces of earlier habitation.

And in Lincoln, where the council has threatened to demolish a number of buildings listed as being of historic interest, archeologist Peter Addyman has warned that "an historic city is being gutted in five years flat".

Another Lincoln archeologist is annoyed that all her unit's $50,000 annual budget has to be spent on rushed research into sites suddenly threatened by developers. She would like further funds to ensure there could be some hope of excavating a site before it was ripe for development.

London is the major problem and before it becomes too late archeologists would like to try to answer these problems:

—How was the city founded? Did it grow up around a Roman fort at the north end of the first London bridge or were its origins more strictly civilian?

—What was the life style of the Romans in this, their most northerly province?

—How did the city develop throughout four centuries of Roman rule, and did the city's Roman-British inhabitants abandon the capital after the Roman military withdrawal in the early fifth century or did they—as now is thought possible—live peacefully side by side with Saxon immigrants in separate communities within the old city walls?

—What happened to London under the Saxons and are there still remains of the old Saxon and early Norman palaces by the Houses of Parliament at Westminster?

These problems are still capable of solution. But a shock report by an archeological organization called Rescue says that: "Over one-quarter of the city, the archeological deposits have already been totally destroyed; over a further three-fifths they have at least been partially damaged, usually with loss of the later deposits."

Rescue, a trust for defending the interests of British archeology, argues in the report that proposed redevelopment means that within 15 years only a few acres of churchyards, cemeteries and other open spaces still will be left worthy of study.

ESKIMO CARVING A MAORI HONOR

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — An Eskimo carving is to have a place of honor in a new Maori meeting house.

The two-foot carving of an Eskimo woman, mounted on a rare piece of mottled New Zealand kauri believed to be at least 2,000 years old has been presented to the people of the Ngati Poneke tribe.

The presentation was made by the Canadian high commissioner to New Zealand, John Dougan. At the same time Mr. Dougan handed over a cheque for $1,270 to go to the Ngati Poneke's marae (meeting house) building fund.

The two gifts were the result of a successful show for the first time in New Zealand of a group of Eskimo carvings and prints.

In making the presentation, Mr. Dougan said it marked the growing awareness of the ties that bound Canada and New Zealand in the artistic field.

"We profit through the artistry of our native peoples," he said. "It is really the only culture we have."

Later this year there is also to be a presentation of Eskimo carvings to the New Zealand National Art Gallery.

Horsemeat Only Policy

PANORAMA CITY, Calif. (UPI) — The meat department at Bob's Market here has been converted into what the owners say is the first gourmet horsemeat shoppe in southern California featuring USDA-inspected cuts for human consumption.

"We pulled out all the beef and other meats last night," meat manager Bill Winovich said Friday. "We're handling only horsemeat now."

Store owner Marvin Snyder said management bought 40,000 pounds of horsemeat from Texas as a starter.

CASANOVAS COVETED COVERED BRIDGES

SAINT JOHN, N.B. — About 130 covered bridges dot the New Brunswick landscape giving the motorist, used to paved highways and modern steel and concrete bridges, a glimpse of other-era charm.

New Brunswick has the world's longest covered bridge. It is at Hartland, 50 miles west of Fredericton. The 1,282-foot structure, built in 1920, is preserved as a provincial historical building.

Covered bridges were designed to protect the flooring and heavy timbers from the rotting effects of sun and rain.

But, contrary to popular belief, the bridges were not designed to keep snow off the floor. During winter months, snow was actually spread over the floor to facilitate sleigh travel.

The late 19th and early 20th centuries were the heyday of the covered bridges. In those quiet days of horse and buggy, local merchants often used the entrances to the bridges to advertise horse linament, harness oil, horse blankets and buggy whips.

Covered bridges were often called Kissing Bridges and in their friendly gloom, many shy young couples summoned enough courage to steal a hug and kiss while the horse slowly plodded across.

But young ladies were warned to be aware of the covered-bridge Casanovas whose horse would stop inside the bridge without command.

If You Want to Get Away Don't Bother in Tuscany

By CLAIRE STERLING
Special to the Times

TUSCANY — Here are my answers to everything you always wanted to know but were afraid to ask about buying a little place in Tuscany.

I would simply say, "don't do it," if not for the fact that the Tuscan countryside is as beautiful as it is dangerous.

When my husband and I bought a deserted farm and woodland near the Val di Chiana four years ago, it was going for a song.

It had been abandoned some 10 years before, mostly because the only way to get there was to climb a vertical mule-track high into the hills.

Even then, long before the flat lowlands were as mechanized as they are now, farm labor had practically disappeared, and trying to grow anything for a profit higher up was out of the question.

Still, we went ahead and built a road (which turns into the bed of a merry little stream with the winter rains) and set about assessing the beaties and dangers of our new property — a property that nobody else seemed to want.

The beauties are obvious: Riots of wildflowers and gold-flaming broom in the spring, a miraculous fabric of greens and reds and yellows clothing the hills in autumn, brilliant skies with occasional storm clouds scudding across in pagan abandon.

There are comforts as well: Good country wine (in good wine years, that is), cornucopias of fresh fruit and vegetables (organic) in early summer, the cosy tang of woodburning fires in winter (if you can get your fingers out of your mittens long enough to light the match).

A rough-cut, hearty heaven.

Pragmatic, hard-headed, decent, upright people, too.

Some of the dangers are obvious also: Vipers, scorpions and rats (one family of which ate up the insulation in our refrigerator last winter), overheated car radiators and broken shock absorbers, forest fires, three kilometer walks through drenching downpours or blizzards to reach a telephone, vanishing plumbers, carpenters a year late with the windows, a sudden lack of money, mosquitoes, stinging horseflies and killer-wasps, springs inexplicably drying up or sending their water someplace else, still more forest fires, a further lack of money, hunters shooting at anything that moves, professional woodcutters giving us to understand that if we don't let them cut our trees down for a pitiful sum we will lose the trees anyway — in yet another forest fire.

Yet the most subtle and enduring of all perils in Tuscany is social. This is not just a matter of effete city people treking to the country in covered Land Rovers, but of their finding themselves alone once they get there because the country people have migrated to the cities.

Though the city people may have spent thousands to buy this loneliness, they rarely seem able to stand it. Inevitably they gravitate toward each other.

collect, intimate dinner parcollect, initimate dinner parties are given (with Tuscan dishes that Tuscan peasants have long since ceased to cook, and anti-mosquito coils throughtfully lit at guests' ankles).

Names of carpenters, auto mechanics, butchers and notaries are exchanged, as is informattion about where to get the extraordinarily various items indispensable to country living.

There is no better meeting place in our nearest market town than the local hardware store where, in search of gardening hose, towing rope, skid chains, caustic soda, machetes, wheelbarrows, rat poison or chicken wire, almost any new local is bound to run into half a dozen others he had met casually at somebody or other's house in Rome, Paris or London.

Very soon the situation begins to grow awfully familiar, however exotic: A wry cross between candle-lit suburban dinners in Surrey or Scarsdale and cocktail parties in Bangui or Katmandu.

Gradually, the city recreates itself in the country. It is an intrepid loner indeed who can hold out for long against the peanuts and potato chips, gin-and-tonics, tales of the tacky bathroom built by the latest newcomer in the next valley, and racy 'hated him, loved her' conversations.

We ourselves have been rather lucky in that our sole neighbor, on an all but inaccessible hill, is an Australian woman of ruthless intellectual vigor.

Almost instinctively, we have adopted standards of deep-city dwelling with each other.

Talk about mending the road, yes.

But we do not drop in to borrow cups of sugar. Though we sometimes nod in passing, as acquaintances might in Kensington or New York's Upper East Side, we are scrupulously careful about staying on our own sides of a fence that neither of us would dream of ruining the landscape by actually building.

Curiously, it is just this growing urban flavor in the once inviolate countryside that is making the Tuscan hills increasingly popular.

More and more Italians are coming, along with beautiful people and writers (failed or otherwise) from all over the continent.

Loneliness can hardly be bought any more, for any amount of money. And prices for rustic stone farmhouses like ours are shooting out of sight.

Soon, we keep telling oursleves, we might even escape this new rural hothouse society and sell out at a whacking profit. But where would we go?

Sudan Closes Universities

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The Sudanese government Friday ordered the closure of all institutes of higher education following two days of rioting by Khartoum University students, the official Omdurman radio said. Khartoum university was closed Thursday.

The government also ordered the suspension of studies for one day, today, at other schools, the Sudanese radio said.

CHAMPION goldfish-gulper is Tom Groves, aged 22, of Toronto who gulletted 227 live goldfish in nine-and-one-half hours this week to beat the previous world record set three years ago by two fish. Only difficult part was when the fish wriggled as they went down his throat, he said.

A TRIGGER-HAPPY FAMILY

The 37-year-old father can draw and fire a pistol almost as fast as you can blink your eyes.

Reese won the 1973 world fast-gun title in competition at Milwaukie, Ore., earlier this month.

The fastest he's ever drawn and fired in competition is .24 of a second. It takes .15 of a second to blink your eyes.

The fastest time his wife, Virginia, 37, has chalked up is .42 of a second. A school bus driver, she won the woman's world title at Milwaukie.

Son George Jr., 18, has won a state title and can draw in .28 of a second. The other two children, 16-year-old Gene and 11-year-old Theresa, also compete, although young Gene prefers trapshooting.

Reese says his family has won about 500 trophies. "I don't really know how many there are; they're stacked away in boxes."

School Bus Information and Schedules for the School Year, 1973/74

School Board Policy – Pupil Transportation

School bus transportation, subject to available seating space, may be provided for:

KINDERGARTEN—Pupils living 2 miles or more from the nearest elementary school in which a Kindergarten class has been established.

A.M.—Such pupils enrolled in the morning sessions will be transported to school on the regular bus runs. However, as the numbers do not warrant a special run at noon, the parents of such pupils may apply for a transportation allowance in lieu.

P.M.—The parents of such pupils enrolled in the afternoon sessions may apply for a transportation allowance in lieu of transportation to the afternoon sessions.

—Pupils will be transported home on regular after school bus runs. The parents of a pupil living in an isolated area 2 miles or more from the elementary school and for whom bus transportation cannot be provided, may apply for a transportation allowance.

GRADE 1-3 —Pupils who live 2 miles or more from the nearest elementary school.

GRADE 4-7 —Pupils who live 2½ miles or more from the nearest elementary school.

GRADE 8-12—students who live 3 or more miles from the nearest secondary school.

Mileage distances are calculated by the most direct route on established roads or walk areas. The distance is computed from the home property acess at the road to the entry at the school site.

SPECIAL CLASSES have been established at Brentwood Elementary School. All pupils who will attend these classes have been advised.

The bus schedules for the morning runs only are as indicated. The afternoon runs in general will be the reverse of the morning runs. The schedules are subject to change if circumstances require. All times given are approximate and subject to adjustment as needed.

BUS PASSES:

School bus service is provided at the discretion of the Board of School Trustees. Those students who are eligible for school bus transportation will be issued bus passes. The passes must be available for inspection by the School Bus Driver at any time. School bus passes may be withdrawn by the Principal of the School attended by the student for conduct or behaviour which is considered by the School Bus Driver as unnecessary, distracting or intentionally annoying.

PARKLAND SCHOOL OPENING

The School Board is pleased to announce that through special contracting procedures the Parkland School has been constructed in the record time of 8 months.

Transportation strikes have held up the delivery of some vital equipment and furniture. The school district is making every effort to locate these and expedite delivery.

Consequently Parkland School will not be in FULL operation on the first day but the following arrangements will give the students the best start possible:

Grade 12—Register 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, September 4
Grade 11—Register 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, September 5
Grade 10—Register 8:30 a.m. Thursday, September 6
Grade 9—Register 8:30 a.m. Friday, September 7

All students will be able to pick up books and assignments. Regular classes will commence in about a week's time, depending on arrival and installation of furniture and equipment. Staff will be on hand each day to assist students when necessary.

If the scheduled delivery time of the sewer pumping station continues to be delayed the above arrangements may have to be postponed. Last minute notice of this will be given by radio and local TV. Parents and students are requested to listen for this announcement.

Daily Grind Put Him Right

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION family

By LON WOOD
Times Staff

Thirty years ago Dean Landie stood three hours in line at a fairground, waiting to buy a hot dog.

"Once I'd eaten it, I got indigestion so bad I haven't eaten one since," he says. "It was the same 10 years later when my wife and I were on a bus to San Diego for a holiday — the food along the way was so poor, I thought to myself something is wrong."

Perhaps it was the mountain air, robust meals and spring water of their logging camp near fernie that left the Landies disenchanted with short-order meals — but whatever, it was only a complete change of eating habits that got him around a doctor's verdict in 1956, he says.

That year the couple came to Victoria and Landie developed nephritis — a disease of the kidneys.

"I had about three months to live," he said in an interview Friday.

Now a tanned and youthful looking 51, he operated a health food bakery on Carey Road while his wife Lavone works their Government Street health food store.

Landie credits his recovery to a diet of natural foods. And he blames much of all sickness on the absence of good nutrition.

"There is not enough energy in de-natured food to combat illness today," he says. "And kids today — they have to take what's dished out — those chips and hamburgers . . ."

Unlike most bakers, Landie stone grinds his own flour, from wheat grown by Cliff Jones of Netherhill, Saskatchewan.

"He has about three or four sections of land — just outside Kindersley," he says. "Grows barley — things like that — oats, I imagine — some of the most beautiful flax. Doesn't use any chamicals.

"Once a year he has a field day — farmers come from all over the country. I was there three or four years ago. Around his farm the wheat was 18 inches high — and his was four or five feet.

"How they (the other farmers) can't see it is beyond me — and you know, he has a standing bet of $500 that anyone can't find a weed on his place."

Landie says Jones is motivated by pride, and dedication to his fellow man. He expresses similar ideals:

"Don't you think the quality of everything is getting worse? You buy shoes that cost three times as much and are half as good. I've got only two hands and I can do only so much. I don't want any junk — I want the best. My reason is to serve my fellow man. A man afraid to die realizes he hasn't lived until he has served."

At the bakery there are three stone mills. A small one for muffin meal and one for soy beans, oats and rye, and a big one for wheat.

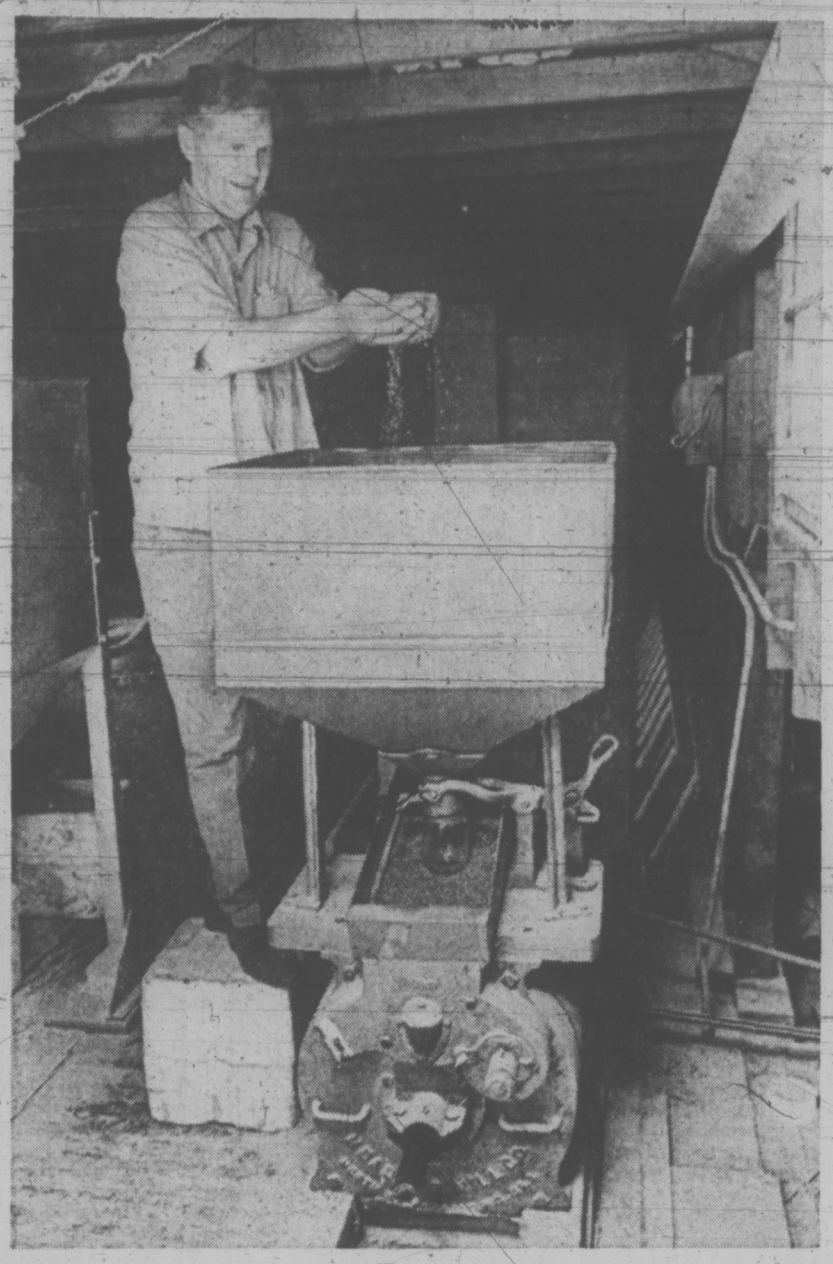
"You can bake with this flour almost immediately after its milled. Steel ground flour from the big mills is pasteurized by the heat and this kills the natural yeasts. They have to store their flour eight or nine months to restore the natural enzymes — the goodness."

Landie said some mills speed up the enzyme-restoration synthetically by adding bromides.

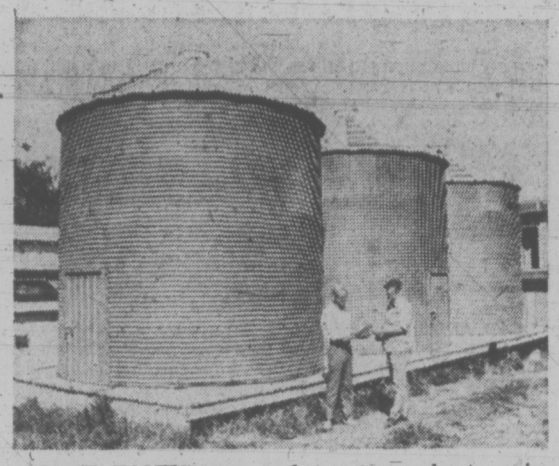
"Then you read a bakers' magazine — they put in lots of benzoate of soda (to preserve the bread). This kills all the enzymes — and embalms your insides," he said. Some say there's enough poison in a sack of flour to kill two men."

Landie said his firm will never be as big as larger local bakeries which may put out 10,000 loaves of bread in a shift, compared to his seven or eight thousand a week.

"Whenever you're dealing in quality you can't be as big — you're not talking about something blown up with air and water," he said. "We're not in it for that — what's the use? As a matter of fact, if every homemaker in North America got back to putting good stuff into their own bread — good grade ingredients, milled properly and worked properly — the whole continent would be better off."



STONE MILL for Dean Landie's stoneground wheat flour sits in top of shed at his Carey Road bakery. Flour falls through a chute in the floor into a sifting machine. Bakery produces breads containing such items as soy flour, carob powder, sunflower seeds and oats. (Photos by John McKay.)



GIANT TANKS are used to store wheat grain brought in from Netherhill, Sask. Here Landie, right, speaks with bakery worker Clayne Coning. Says the baker of his wares: "I don't want any junk — I want the best."

Seeds Sown in Early Life Reap a Happy Retirement

By R. E. B. DUFF

LONDON (FWF) — At this moment, numbers of hard-working men and women all over the world are facing retirement. Now aged 65, or maybe only 60, they find themselves suddenly rated as senior citizens who have toiled long enough and should be allowed to loiter their remaining years away in placid sloth.

They are not, as a general rule, generously sugsidised for idleness. Few workers today can give up their jobs in the certainty that they will never again have to worry about where the next pound or dollar or dinar is coming from. Still, firms provide pensions, insurance policies mature, and the aged in many countries receive state allowances calculated at least to keep them alive.

Thus, while the average recipient of a gold watch presented amid a torrent of platitudes by a management he has faithfully helped to enrich for many years past can count on doing damn all for the rest of his life, if he so chooses, he cannot count on doing it in luxury liners or in the amiable company of exotic dollybirds. Retirement does not mean winning a football pool — it simply means losing a job.

For this reason, the most foolish thing a retired man can do is to retire. No conscientious worker who has held down a job for 40 or 45 years can turn into a drone on his 60th or 65th birthday without losing his self-respect. Dozing in an armchair, helping with the washing-up and watching television are pretty thin substitutes for earning a living.

Most men accept work as a habit to which they become increasingly addicted over the years, and the withdrawal symptoms experienced by senior citizens dramatically confronted with a future of creaking idleness can prove fatal. We have all read obituary notices recording that the debeased died within a year or 18 months of leaving his job.

It is the knowledge that full-time retirement often causes pensioners to die like flies which persuades many of them to mount mettlesome but incongrous hobby-horses. One who has always been too busy to read books will reach the conclusion that he is uncultured. Retirement presents a golden opportunity of becoming an intellectual, with a ready quotation to grace every occasion.

So he rushes out and buys the complete works of Shakespeare. He settles down after supper with a pipe and, say, The Merchant of Venice, and almost instantly falls asleep. Try as he will, he cannot fathom what the characters are talking about. To him, England's greatest poet is England's supreme bore. How, indeed, could it be otherwise when his reading during his working lifetime has been confined to the more sensational newspapers and scandalous paperbacks? Culture, like golf, needs to be wooed fairly early in life if it is to bring any real happiness to the individual.

"If a thing is worth doing it is worth doing badly," G. D. Chesterton said. We can all, no doubt, find consolation in the thought, but it may be doubted whether a retired man finds any real satisfaction in making a botch of a part-time occupation or a hobby for which he is congenitally ill-equipped. The retired cobbler, if he is wise, will stick to his last, the retired journalist to his typewriter and the retired accountant to his cashbook.

The most contented of all retired people, in fact, are those who continue to exercise, though in a part-time capacity, the crafts and skills they have mastered during their working lives. They need no longer endure the turmoil of the rush-hour on public transport: for them the rat-race turns into an amble that stimulates rather than tires. The happiest among them find light jobs with charities or organisations devoted to social service.

In a nutshell, retired workers who flop into idleness are asking to be bored to death. And those who wrongly imagine that they become new men on retirement, dramatically equipped to enjoy interests quite foreign to their natures, succeed only in raising their blood-pressure through repeated frustration. Those, on th other hand, who go on being themselvees and using the talents they have made their own, though rather less strenuously than before, often live to ages that flabbergast their doctors.

WITHDRAWAL SYMPTOMS experienced by senior citizens dramatically confronted with a future of creaking idleness can prove fatal. Some part-time serious work is a good antidote.

'Hearing Aid Salesmen Need Training'

HALIFAX (CP) — A Halifax audiologist says untrained hearing-aid salesmen are victimizing the public and should be required by law to take training courses.

Paul Kuttner said the unqualified salesmen are like the travelling medicine men of years ago because they travel door-to-door claiming their products will provide instant hearing and will work miracles.

"No hearing aid can do that," he said. "They can only improve hearing.

"Hearing aids are the only prostheic devices that can be peddled from door-to-door by anyone with no qualifications."

He said that a study on hearing-aid sales practices conducted by the federal department of consumer affairs in 1970 found that hearing-aid advertisements usually mention only the smallest models — the ones that fit inside the ear — and use phrases like "an invisible hearing aid."

He said the emphasis is primarily on the cosmetic advantage of the models they are selling with little emphasis on the performance.

All hearing problems aren't the same, Kuttner said, so all hearing aids can't be the same. They must be matched to each person's problem, and this required a trained technologist.

People should know better than to buy from the door-to-door salesmen, he said. "No one would think of buying eyeglasses from a man who comes to the door."

Kuttner said that there are properly qualified hearing-aid salesmen who can be found by calling local Better Business Bureaus.

GIBSON'S GIBSON'S GIBSON'S
Gibson's Fashion Horoscope

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)—Cycle is high — get going — start anything — take initiative! Emerge in a glorious bronze satin coachman coat collared and cuffed in black fur; OR a pure white satin officer's coat — both sweep the floor. Now for great evenings. You've reached for the moon, you're going in the right direction!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)—Good lunar aspect now coincides with all responses. Social activity is emphasized —you are flattered, complimented, invited out. In your black, sexy, floor-length skirt by Bilboquet, $25. Put on a black French cuffed silk shirt — a De Passille belt. Throw on a black fur sweater — black is beautiful!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)—Past obligations could surface — don't run — face situation — accept responsibilities. Money picture very bright, so just add this silk shirtwaist, sheltered by a dazzling Lurex sweater, to your wardrobe. It's the prettiest short silk dress this year and you'll be going toward the new trend of getting really dressed up! Brown and navy. LUXURY.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)—Everything clicks — all short circuits become complete. Pisces figures prominently — you've always liked the best things in life — and here it is — Pure Wool — pour it on like country cream; wrap up closely, tie softly, nothing in the world more self-assured than a pure wool Gibson coat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)—Great month to dance to your own tune. Really show your individuality by playing the Grey Way. Play it smart in banker's grey knits — sweater — pants — cap — covered by a luxurious muskrat swagger coat smothered in grey fox. What a game to play!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)—Reach beyond what appears to be a limitation. Don't let others tell you what is possible or impossible. Be independent — stick to your style and come and indulge in Gibson's wind-fall of sweaters. Lean and lovely pullovers, ribbed and plain. $8.95 to $25. It's sweater weather and you're the girl to wear them!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)—There's a tendency for the eye or mind to wander vagrantly. Avoid indiscretion that might distress an intimate. A passing attraction provides a brief thrill, but a short visit to Gibson's provides everlasting returns with even the smallest investment, like a scarf from five to thirty-five dollars — to enhance you and your wardrobe for many years to come.

ARIES (Feb. 19-March 20—There are ways to enhance the attractiveness of whatever routine you may have to dispose of. Beware of dubious speculative values except for a duffle coat of undeniable reputation at Gibson's from $45.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)—You can uncross your fingers: things seem to be moving favorably regarding work. Activities involving young people offer a chance to display your talents. Compliment these attributes with the young look of a halter dress, sizzling, cognac, black, white, striped —just $85.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)—The new moon provides an opportunity for you to adjust life factors on the 27th, more in line with the way you want them. Push for a better job, and take an upbeat in stride with a cool black pant suit, knitted to move, collared to prove you have the best taste in town and priced at $119.95 to keep your heavens together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)—An opportunity to provide a unique service or salvage operation may turn up on Monday. We're talking about you, baby! Don't be quick to reject a suggestion from Gibson's — study a new therapy with us, you'll be haltered, then Lurexed to your heart and purse's delight — from $130.

LEO (July 22 - Aug. 22) — Saturday a.m. provides a risk potential. Stay out of danger by accepting an invitation to enjoy yourself across the street in Gibson's leather den and you will never again have an excuse for being isolated when you're in calf skin from $36.99.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Wilson's are opening in Oak Bay ....

You may have heard whispers of this around . . . but now we can tell you out loud . . . and we think you'll agree with us that it's terrific news . . . There's to be a W & J Wilson store in Oak Bay . . . which, hopefully, will open this coming week! . . . And the reason for this new Wilson store? . . . Simply to bring convenient shopping to those people in Oak Bay who are loathe to fight the downtown traffic, and cope with often difficult parking . . . The Oak Bay store . . . located in what was formerly the Newport Pharmacy . . . will carry quality clothing and accessories for ladies, men and children . . . at the fairest possible prices . . . It will be their plan . . . if they haven't got what the customer wants . . . to phone the main store and have it delivered the next day . . . This new Oak Bay Wilson's will be using the contacts made through the acquisition of Roy Imports in getting excellent quality at lower prices . . . so as to be of some assistance to people on fixed incomes who don't have the opportunity to shop the markets like Wilson's buyers can and do . . . These buyers, by the way, are leaving for Europe next week to comb the markets of the United Kingdom . . . to try to get the qualiy of merchandise Wilson's store has been noted for for the past 111 years . . . They're making a real attempt to find the sort of things their customers want! . . . So to you people who live in Oak Bay . . . happy shopping at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1210 Newport Ave. at Windsor Park.

Junior fashions rate full credits ...

Clothes don't make the scholar . . . but the right ones certainly help give a gal poise and self-confidence . . . contribute to her popularity while hitting up the books . . . So to you mothers whose young people may not yet be completely outfitted for high school or college, we'll say this: Miss Frith Junior has it all hanging out! . . . Skirts . . . pants . . . sweaters . . . tops . . . jackets . . . "Gassy Jack" buckskin jackets . . . Accessories to pull them all together and put the gilding on the lily . . . Breezing through the store the other day, we pounced upon all sorts of things we'd like for our own daughter, if we had one . . . Cute skirts . . . the freshest little things you ever saw . . . in nice blends, many with the tweedy look . . . washable . . . not expensive . . . Twin sweater sets are big fashion news with the young crowd . . . Sleeveless pullovers and V-necked cardigans . . . Miss Frith's have some honeys . . . We noticed that sweaters are getting longer . . . There's a great variety of knits with interesting effects . . . patterned and plain sweaters which can be combined . . . One very popular style is sleeveless with a tweedy look . . . wide ribbing starting just under the bust and extending to the hips . . . Real sharp pants in everything from brushed denim to cord . . . Coats, pantsuits and coordinates . . . And those "Gassy Jack" buckskin jackets will really send 'em! . . . Stylish, durable, and priced as low as $79! . . . Miss Frith Junior, 1623 Douglas St., 383-7181.

On some coats and suits, Valentino added a fringed scarf in a tablecloth check, worn under the collar.

Every customer's a VIP! . . .

When is a flower shop not just a flower shop? . . . When it's Island Florist, of course! . . . Because Island Florist also has the most intriguing gifts . . . of an ornamental nature . . . which can contain, or be teamed up in some way with flowers . . . And as for these later . . . well, we can't begin to tell you how fresh and how beautiful they invariably are! . . . Another thing that makes Island Florist unique is their philosophy . . . As far as they're concerned, every customer is a Very Important Person . . . and they dispense a very individual type of service . . . helping the customer select the completely "right" floral gift . . . whether it's a single perfect rose in a bud vase . . . or a big, gorgeous arrangement put together with consummate skill and artistry! . . . Maybe the customer's a young man who wants a corsage for his best girl . . . the Island Florist people will advise . . . with all due respect for his pocket book . . . And that's another thing . . . it's not how much you can afford to spend that makes you a VIP with Island Florist! . . . The way we've got it figured out . . . they love flowers and they love people . . . and are devoted to bringing the two and flowers together! . . . So next time you want to say it with flowers . . . go to Island Florist . . . Pick up a plant or a few posies for yourself too . . . There are always "cash and carry" bargains on the cart outside the store . . . Island Florist Ltd., 745 Fort St., 385-3113.

Molding is the big news in fall undergarments.

The way we see it, there's absolutely nothing that can replace knits in a women's wardrobe . . . and no matter how much you pay for a beautiful knit, you're getting full value for your clothes dollar . . . because it won't date quickly . . . can be worn all year round . . . won't spend half its time at the cleaners . . . is a "natural" for travel . . . plus having many other qualities you can probably figure out for yourself . . . But what got us off on this subject was seeing some beautiful Italian knits in Eaton's Import Room on Monday . . . By Avagolf, of Florence . . . the texture and design of these Avagolf knits is something to get excited about . . . For instance, we saw one dress of wool so fine that when we ran it through our fingers it felt like silk! . . . A delightful dress with bright flowers on a black background . . . black sleeves, and turtle neck with narrow bands of color . . . Another short dress has a wide ribbed waistline . . . narrow stripes on the turtle neck, sleeves and waist . . . fullish skirt with a lattice pattern . . . Colors in this are red and green . . . And for evening wear . . . an elegant two-piece long dress, sinuously soft and shimmering with lurex . . . the skirt flowered in shades of green, blue and fuchsia . . . the top narrowly striped with the same colors . . . Eaton's Import Room, 382-7141, loc. 242.

Clocks for at home and abroad . . .

Boat owners ahoy! . . . Go have a look at the two ships' clocks at de Goutiere jewellers . . . One is brass, the other chrome . . . and both strike the watches in a most nautical way . . . There's also a barometer to match the brass clock . . . For any kind of a fine clock or timepiece, de Goutiere is definitely the place to go! . . . There's a handsome desk clock with a calendar you never have to touch . . . it even looks after the leap years! . . . Comes in a leather presentation case . . . wonderful gift for an executive . . . $295 . . . We were entranced with the miniature 8-day clocks wih little leather carrying cases . . . One is engraved brass, shaped like an old-time pocket watch . . . priced at $56.50 . . . another is more contemporary in chrome and black enamel . . . And there are some really small travelling alarm clocks which you only have to wind once a week . . . they have jewelled lever movements, and are in fold-over cases which lie almost flat . . . One which shows the date as well as the time is $79.50, while another without date is priced at $68.50 . . . There are larger travelling clocks too whose prices start at $29.50 . . . But even the least expensive ones are good time keepers and will last for years . . . We admired several nice mantel clocks . . . some of the Victorian era, French, and a reproduction of a Dutch bracket clock in walnut . . . de Goutiere Jeweller Ltd., 2524 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

The short jacket goes a long way when it comes to keeping out winter chill, especially when it's teamed with a pair of pants.

Sex Education Compulsory In French School System

PARIS (CP) — Nicole Mercier shocked Belfort, a town of 60,000 near the German border, when she read to her all-girl high school class from a manual called Let's Learn to Make Love. That was the spark which led to the recent French government announcement that sex education for adolescents will become compulsory starting next week.

The government will institute instruction, limited to procreation, during biology and natural science classes.

More informative sessions may be organized outside of school hours, but parents will have to consent before their children will be allowed to attend.

After lengthy consideration of what Mrs. Mercier did last December, the French government felt its legislation would offend neither those for, nor those against sex education.

Liberals in the conflict say that many high schools are already teaching what is soon to be required.

Joseph Fontanet, France's education minister, says the subject should be taught preferably by parent and educational groups who are willing, and with "tact and care."

But in a report of an inquiry into the Sexuality of the French People, Dr. Pierre Simon says most parents don't involve themselves. Of French youth interviewed, 82 per cent never spoke of their sexual problems to their mothers or fathers.

In their push for more elaborate sex education, some parents point to the decision of the court at Belfort. A judge found no grounds on which to convict Nicole Mercier, charged with defying good morals, for reading from Let's Learn to Make Love.

A mother, whose daughter was in the class which asked Mrs. Mercier to read from the manual, prompted the charge.

Some weeks after the decision was handed down, Education Minister Fontanet said Mrs. Mercier's actions should not have taken place during school hours.

No newspaper could reproduce Let's Learn to Make Love in its entirety, he said, and many do not consider it decent enough to read on radio.

When Dr. Jean Carpentier wrote it, he was given a one-year suspension by the national council of the Order of Physicians.

Four days after Fontanet's statement, the Paris daily Le Monde published the tract. Editors said they wanted the public to be fully aware of its contents to understand the controversy better.

Carpentier describes male and female sex organs in the manual. He also tells the reader how to get satisfaction and pleasure out of sexual relations.

There is nothing wrong with sex, he says, as long as it is pleasurable.

In mid-January, Carpentier, with a group of doctors, sociologists, and young married couples put together an amended 50-page version of Let's Learn to Make Love. The 10,000 copies printed were quickly depleted.

Three other publishers, Francois Maspero, Bayard Presse, and Hachette, decided to take advantage of the moment and released similar booklets.

Daughter Nose Best

DEAR ABBY: For my high school graduation, my parents gave me a new nose. I had it done last week, and even though it's still swollen, I just love it!

I am going east to college in the fall. I will be meeting lots of new kids, and my mother told me that I shouldn't tell anybody I had my nose done. I told her I hadn't planned on wearing a sign saying: "I had my nose done," but if it comes up in a conversation, I am not going to lie about it.

She said it would be foolish for me to admit it, and she asked me to promise her I wouldn't tell anybody.

I respect my mother's opinion, and I know she means the best for me, but I just can't make her that kind of promise. This is the first really serious conflict we have ever had. Am I wrong? Or is she? — Nose Job

DEAR NOSE JOB: Mother usually nose best, but not this time.

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with Steve and he is very much in love with me. We plan to be married in September. There is only one problem: I am also very much in love with my job.

I'm a secretary and have been with the same company for five years. I intend to keep on working after we are married. I guess you could say I am career-minded.

Steve says before we get married I must promise that I will not work over eight hours a day, and I'll not work at all on Saturdays. Right now I work more than eight hours Saturdays, too.

Steve doesn't think a woman can be married and have a career, too. I disagree. Abby, do you think it's fair for a man to ask a woman to give up something that means as much to her as my job means to me? I love Steve and don't want to lose him, but I also love this job. Please settle this. — Steve's Girl

DEAR GIRL: It's all right for a girl to like her job, but if she is "in love" with her job, her love life with a real live man is in trouble. I don't think Steve's requests are unreasonable, but if you do, hold off those wedding bells. I hear a clinker in the belfry.

DEAR ABBY: Since you are a professional woman, will you please give me your opinion on something that has caused a great deal of friction in our marriage.

I have been a private investigator for nearly 30 years and never have I discussed — nor will I ever discuss any case I am working on. I have never told my wife the names of the people involved. My work is strictly confidential: Tailing someone, surveillance, whatever. Even the occasional humorous things that come up in my work I keep to myself. All the information I have concerning people and their private affairs is locked up in my file and my mind, and the same goes for my secretary and the other agents in my organization. If any employe of mine leaks so much as the name of a person who has hired me, that employee is out on his ear.

My wife feels that I would trust her enough to share my cases with her. I feel she has no business knowing any of the facts concerning my cases, even tough the chances of her violating a confidence are small.

She insists that husbands and wives should have complete trust in each other and that my attitude shows I don't trust her. What do you think? —Too Ethical(?)

DEAR TOO: No one can be too ethical. You sound like a first-class professional and your wife should be proud of you.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JACK CLARK, REALTOR: Please send me your complete address. I owe you $5.

Hot dog loaf can be heated on barbecue or in oven

No Labor on Labor Day

By MARY MOORE

Maureen wanted something different for a crowd who were coming in for supper on Labor Day. I realized how heartily they eat, so suggested Hot Dog Loaf. She made it and served it and said the whole gang raved and wanted more.

HOT DOG LOAF

2 tbsp. butter or margarine
¼ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup red hamburger relish
½ cup chili sauce
1 tbs. Worcestershire sauce
1 tbsp. brown sugar
Two 12" loaves Italian or French bread (or one large loaf)
One 8-oz. pkg. process cheese, shredded (or mild Cheddar)
10 wieners cut in half crosswise

Melt butter in a small saucepan and saute onion in it until onion is tender, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and add hamburger relish, chili sauce, Worcestershire sauce and brown sugar.

Cut a 1-inch slice of bread from both ends of each loaf. Cut each loaf into 5 pieces, each piece being approximately 2 inches thick. (If one large loaf is used cut it into 10 pieces.) Now slice each piece through the centre, almost to the bottom. (You will have 10 individual sandwich-like portions.) Spread a heaping teaspoonful of the relish mixture between each "sandwich." Sprinkle a heaping teaspoonful of grated cheese on top of relish mixture. Push 2 wiener halves into the cheese letting the uncut ends of weiners poke out. Spoon remaining relish evenly over and top with remaining cheese.

Use two large sheets of foil and assemble the sandwiches on the foil to resemble the original loaves. Wrap tightly in foil. Heat high on grill over charcoal until hot or in a 400 deg. Fahr. oven for 25 minutes.

NOTE: This Hot Dog Loaf would be excellent as a midnight snack for a crowd of young people.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, September 2

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Concern with the hidden, the occult, the inexplicable, is activated. Your power to analyze is magnified. You find reasons, motives. You perceive and make necessary, significant decisions. Don't be afraid of change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent is on co-operative efforts, partnership or marriage. Family and home are emphasized. Your feeling of security — or lack of it — dominates actions. Libra person could play key role. Be receptive, diplomatic. Avoid extremes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Protect yourself in clinches. Those who depend on you may make unreasonable demands. It is fine to be sympathetic, but don't give everything without receiving a fair trade. Guard health. Moderate pace. You have a life of your own to live.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Create, interpret and synthesize. Means put puzzle pieces together and view project, picture as a whole. Aries, Libra persons could be featured in prominent roles. Young persons, romantic interests also are present.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You complete, finalize and decide. You put a halt to "putting off." You come to terms with older individual, possibly a family member. Aries, Libra persons could be in picture. Check property values.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Short trips, visits, creative efforts — these are featured now as you come alive. Leo, Aquarius and Scorpio persons play important roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent is on what you collect, conserve. You now are capable of rising above the petty, the details and minor distractions. Be grand, big in sense that you are not "put out" by minor discrepancies. Aquarian might help show the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lunar cycle is high — take the lead. Be confident — take initiative. Make new starts in new directions. Strive to imprint your own style. Highlight individuality. Elevate self-esteem. There is no need to take back seat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What happens is probably going to occur out of sight. You will be tearing down for the purpose of rebuilding. Scorpio, Leo and Aquarius figure prominently. Visit one confined to home, hospital.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Desires are fulfilled now to extent that you are willing to accept change. Relationship can become more meaningful. But if you merely expect to play games, the cost could be considerable — emotionally and otherwise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Persons who pull strings come into your sphere. You can deal with those in positions of authority. You are given added compensation. Recognition is gained and you assume greater responsibility.

PICES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good lunar aspect now coincides with special studies, long-distance journey, ability to comprehend philosophical concepts. You grow. Learning process is activated. Virgo individual could play key role.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have innate fondness for home. You are sensitive, loyal. You draw to you persons born under Cancer and Capricorn. You possibly will make major domestic adjustment in November. You are perceptive, fond of children. You are happiest when you feel others need you. This is likely to apply more so to you than to the average person.

Forecast for Monday, September 3

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on the long ago and far away. Key is to assess future potential. Don't become mired in sledgehammer words of might have been or could be. Instead, outline specific goals. You have chance now to achieve definite gain, including profit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obtain valid hint from Aries message. Money involves mate, partner. Review tax schedule. Take inventory. Check apparent minor points. You may have more coming to you than previously estimated. Pisces, Virgo persons could be involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasize co-operative efforts. Get together with one who is bright despite fact you do not always agree. Legal transaction could be featured. If single, you may be considering possibility of marriage. Capricorn might be involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You finish rather than begin — you also get rid of burden. Find ways of getting message across to more persons. Improve distribution. Publish and advertise. Aries, Libra persons could figure in key roles. Attend to essentials.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spotlight is on creativity. Begin fresh. Imprint your style. Be independent. Strive for originality. Love is in picture. You deal with young persons. There is change, possibility of travel and plenty of variety. You vibrate with life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Build for security. Refuse to give up something for nothing. Be discerning trader. Genuine bargain is available. Family member deserves more comfort. Give now and odds are that you also will receive. Aquarian plays role.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You find yourself in demand. Forces tend to be scattered. See picture as a whole. Leave details to others — or for another time. Sagittarius, Gemini individuals are involved. Short trip could achieve significant results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Steady approach could result in profit. Don't skip essentials. One who talks a great game may lack facts, figures. Know it and probe for information. Aquarius, Leo persons could figure prominently. Money situation will be brighter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find reasons for recent events. Your ability to analyze is honed to razor sharpness. Gemini person might play key role. Accent is on personality, individuality. Your judgment, intuition are on target. Move in new direction — with confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis is on illusion, clandestine meeting, getting in touch with yourself. Wavelength coincides with Taurus, Libra persons. You gain through co-operation with club, hospital or special charity. Dig in and help those who cannot aid themselves.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spotlight is on fulfillment of desires. You get what you want but you may not want what is best for you. Strive for realistic approach. Avoid self-deception. See situations, individuals as they actually exist.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You climb toward goal. You achieve greater recognition. Capricorn, Cancer individuals may be involved. You succeed now by investing in your own talents. Accept assignment which aids in displaying ability to handle responsibility.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have superb sense of fitness, humor. Your curiosity is insatiable. You learn and test and experiment. You should be writing, reporting. You attract persons to you who are social, vital, doing things which affect their communities. You are the opposite of staid.

Forecast for Tuesday, Sept. 4

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look beyond the immediate. What was closed in is now open — you can be beneficiary. Chance exists for gain through expression of hidden part of personality. Pisces, Virgo individuals could figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could be fooled by estimates, accountings and appraisals. Wishful thinking can cause delay, embarrassment and possible loss. Money is question. How much is question. Co-operation to be received is question. Take time because much now is a question mark.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20). Study Taurus message. Be a keen observer. Hold off on direct action. One close to you could express disagreement. Legal affairs might be spotlighted. Your judgment, intuition may not be on target. Know it and wait.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New deal may be in offing where employment is concerned. You get chance to be more independent. Strive to express original ideas, concepts. Leo, Aquarius persons could figure prominently. Check diet.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Legal agreement could reveal secret property. Look ahead. Protect self by promoting security. Mere promises will not suffice. Get intent in writing. You will be happier as result. Purchase of home, luxury item could be on agenda.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): One who depends on you could call for special favor. Do what you can without becoming inextricably involved. There are fine points which should not be overlooked. Check messages, directions. Relative feels inclined to take you for granted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Deception in money area should not be ruled out of the question. Important now to get hard facts, not speculation, possibility or rumor. Gemini, Virgo persons could figure prominently. Collect what you need. Discard nonessentials. Streamline operation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Reconciliation is likely to be on agenda. You settle difference with older family member. Be diplomatic. Cycle is high — and circumstances turn in your favor. You need not be afraid to assert views. But do so in reasonable, calm manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Activity indicated in connection with hospitals, charitable organizations, groups which promote subjects of concern to you. Pisces, Virgo individuals could be featured. Compile facts. Work quietly in behind-scenes capacity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Some friends may be misinformed. Know it and respond accordingly. You could receive solid offer which spells profit. It also entails the handling of additional responsibility. Capricorn, Cancer persons might be involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent is on achievement, responsibility, dealings with professional superiors. You are given chance to display special abilities. Now is time to look ahead, to plan for future, to demonstrate product or theory.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are usually specific, frank and basically truthful. You attract persons born under Leo, Aquarius and Scorpio. You have, of late, been concerned with domestic situation. This should be resolved by October. You are going to clear emotional debris and money picture will be brighter.

Cartoons Banned for Children's Ads

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec advertisers will no longer be able to use cartoon characters or animation techniques in selling to children after today when additional regulations on advertising aimed at children go into effect.

Last year, the financial institutions department created a series of regulations covering advertising aimed at children under the Consumer Protection Act.

The regulations forbid such things as exaggerating the performance of a product or using superlatives to describe its characteristics.

In a recent statement, William Tetley, financial institutions minister, said the province had to act "because there were so many abuses in the field of children's advertising — and the federal jurisdiction had not taken a position sanctioned by law."

He said the province is still willing to co-operate in this matter with the federal government, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission CRTC and industry and consumer groups.

But "because Quebec can no longer delay in stating its position for the coming children's advertising season, we announce that we will continue to enforce our regulations as they presently are."

Tetley said the province's rules are superior to the advertising industry's own code which has received some support from Ottawa.

Unlike the industry code, the Quebec rules cover all media, not just broadcasting, and also sanctions fines up to $25,000 as well as one year in jail for infractions.

The industry code merely denies advertiser access to the media in the event of an infraction.

Tetley said the province can legislate in advertising because civil rights and civil contracts fall under provincial jurisdiction. When a consumer is misled by an ad, his civil rights are violated and the contract between advertiser and the media brings the whole matter under provincial jurisdiction.

He said he had no objection to the establishment of uniform rules on publicity to children across the country but "I can't wait for them to act."

The federal government has been considering the question of publicity directed towards children and a recent Commons committee report recommended the CRTC act to toughen and enforce the industry's own code.

But "no federal action or legislation is apparently contemplated in the immediate future or at least before Parliament reconvenes in the fall," he said.

"It is therefore important that Quebec, which has acted in this field and which has been awaiting a decision of the federal government and the CRTC for a considerable period of time, should set out its position without delay."

Oldtimers Lonely At School

Joe Graves, 25, (left) and Gary Dumas, 21, were the oldest students attending a course at the Tam O'Shanter hockey school in Belleville, Ont. this summer. More than 1,100 students were enrolled in the course, but both men say it was a little lonely being so much older than the rest of the students, who ranged from 14 to 17 years old.

Bank Contest Recipes Still Paying Dividends

NEW YORK (UPI) — A bank that sponsored a money-saving recipe contest here learned as much about logic as it did about economiziing. Many contestants whose recipes called for leftovers did not include the cost of leftovers in their planning.

But some recipes submitted to the National Bank of North America in that contest nearly three and a half years ago still represent good value — especially for meatless meals planned in anticipation of rising prices when the U.S. beef price freeze ends Sept. 12.

Fish Loaf

Mrs. Gladys Weston submitted this fish loaf:

Mix together one and one half pounds of ground raw haddock or cod, 1 large onion, grated, 1 teaspoon of salt, three-fourths teaspoon of pepper, cup cracker meal, 3 eggs, beaten, 2 cups of milk and 1 heaping teaspoon of margerine, melted. Place mixture in a greased ring mold and bake, uncovered, in a pan of hot water in a 350-degree oven for 45 minutes, or until a knife blade inserted in the deepest part of the mold comes out clean. Makes about 6-8 servings.

Bean Casserole

With one minor change, Lebanese bean casserole from Mary Connors makes a really low-cost meatless main dish. To supplement the incomplete protein in the beans, serve cheese wedges with apples or pears for dessert. For the casserole, soak 1 pound of dried beans overnight in water to cover well. The next day, bring to boil and simmer, covered, 30 to 40 minutes, or until tender. Add more water if necessary. Drain the cooked beans and mix them with one and one-half cans off condensed tomato soup, 1 medium to large onion, minced, one and one-half teaspoons of dry mustard, one half cup of maple syrup, one-half teaspoon of salt and three-fourths teaspoon of freshly ground pepper. Pour into a 2-quart bean pot or casserole or an eight by twelve by one and one-half inch baking dish. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven 45 minutes. Serves 8.

Turkey Soup

Turkey is a good buy for regular family meals. Buy a bird large enough for four meals. Serve it stuffed for the first dinner. Use leftovers for a casserole and hot or cold sandwiches for two more. When the carcass is almost all that's left, make a main dish soup with dumplings. Recipes for the soup and a casserole follow.

Break up the carcass and place it in a large saucepan with any leftover stuffing. Cover with cold water; bring slowly to boil, reduce heat and simmer about 2 hours, or until a rich broth forms. Add water from time to time, as necessary. Strain. Strip any meat from the carcass and return it to the broth. Add any leftover vegetables or a package of frozen mixed vegetables or both. Taste and add salt and pepper as necessary. Simmer 30 minutes more.

Make dumplings from biscuit mix, following package directions, but adding one-fourth to one-third cup of wheat germ to the mix before adding liquid. Bring soup to boil, drop in dumplings and cook as mix label directs. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Turkey Casserole

Cook one-third cup of chopped onion until golden in 2 tablespoons of preheated salad oil in a 4-quart pot. add three and one-half cups of water and bring to boil; add 2 beef bouillon cubes, 1 teaspoon of dry mustard and 6 cups (an 8-ounce package) of medium egg noodles. Cover and simmer 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in 3 cups of cubed leftover turkey, 1 cup of sliced celery and 1 medium green pepper, stemmed, seeded and diced. Cover and simmer 6 to 8 minutes more, or until noodles and vegetables are tender. Stir occasionally. Stir in one-fourth cup of chopped fresh parsley or 1 tablespoon of dried parsley flakes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 4 servings.

Cheese Loaf

Cheese loaf is an unusual variation on the popular macaroni and cheese casserole. Lightly mix 1 pound of sharp cheddar cheese, shredded, with 1 (4-ounce) jar of drained pimentos, chopped and 1 cup of soft bread crumbs. Sprinkle mix with juice of 1 lemon. Beat 3 eggs with 1 cup of milk and 1 teaspoon of salt and add to the cheese mixture. Pour in a well-buttered two and one-half to three-quart flameproof casserole. Bake in a preheated, 350-degree oven about 30 minutes until firm but not too firm. While loaf bakes, cook about half of an 8-ounce package of spaghetti in boiling salted water. Drain spaghetti well and spoon it over the hot cheese loaf. Dot generously with margarine and sprinkle generously with paprika. Run casserole under broiler until bubbling hot and lightly browned. Makes about six servings.

Pickled Tuna

Tuna en Escabeche, or pickled tuna, is plain canned tuna served with a quick and easy tomato-based cocktail sauce. In a medium saucepan heat two tablespoons of salad oil, one-half cup of chopped sweet onion, two tablespoons of chopped red bell pepper or pimiento and one clove of garlic minced. Cook over medium heat five minutes, or until onion is tender. Add one (8-ounce) can of tomato sauce, one cup of orange juice, one tablespoon of lemon juice, three tablespoons of white wine or vermouth, one-fourth teaspoon each of salt and dry mustard and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper; simmer, uncovered, 15 minutes. Cool to room temperature before serving with chunks of tuna on shredded lettuce. Makes enough for two (six and one-half or seven-ounce) cans of tuna, or six servings. If you omit the wine, add a little extra lemon and orange juice to taste.

Rice Salad

Rice salad is a good way to use up poultry leftovers. Or you can make the salad with two (six and one-half or seven-ounce) cans of tuna. Boil enough plain raw rice to make four cups, cooked. Place the drained but still warm rice in a large mixing bowl. Add 1 or 2 large carrots, peeled and grated or chopped, one large bell pepper, stemmed seeded and chopped, and one-quarter cup each of coarsely broken walnuts and raisins or dried currants. Toss lightly with one-third cup of homemade or bottled oil and vinegar dressing, shaken with two teaspoons of curry powder or more to taste (optional). Let stand, uncovered, until mixture is room temperature. Add three cups of cold, cooked, cubed poultry or the tuna, drain and broken into chunks. Toss lightly. Serve on shredded lettuce with tomato slices or wedges for garnish. If you have only two cups of poultry, use two or three hard-boiled eggs, cut in wedges, as additional garnish.

Sculptor Devink sits in a reflective mood in front of one of his creations entitled Quirts which is erected on his land at Brentwood.

It's the Basic Life For a Sculptor

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Brentwood Bay sculptor Bert Devink likes to keep things basic — basic as a spider, a friendly greeting or a handshake.

His sculpting, to be shown at a one-man exhibit at Open Space Sept. 6 to 23 portrays fundamental emotion and his studio — a garage cluttered with welding and grinding materials and unformed steel blobs — smacks of earthy good nature.

In a heavy Dutch accent, he explains his philosophy, and in that, his work as an artist.

The wrongs of a modern world are depicted by subdivision living, shopping centre monoliths and the impersonality of life.

"I'm against building things and fitting people into them. It should be just the opposite, building things to fit the nature of people.

"We should get back to just enjoying what we have and really need, but people aren't even given the change to find out what they really want."

"It's hard to say where my interest in metal sculpting started, he says, adding it's equally difficult for anyone to pinpoint the start of an idea.

Devink explains his one-year career as an art student at Holland's Academy of Art, was quickly extinguished when he became an active participant in the peace movement and he ended up shotly thereafter in East Africa.

He's 40.

At first it was fetish for wood, later it became steel. "You get a tremendous capacity for the off-balance with steel. With wood, you're limited, you have to come down to the base.

"Steel can go wherever it wants — it can shoot right out." (Most of his works do just that — a concentration on uplifting lines reaching out, likely to people.)

Steel, though expensive to work with, is as solid as the welcome sign at a door, says Devink.

He sells most of his scupting to the tourists passerby. He moved to the Island about three years ago, he says, when Gas Town "as it was" in Vancouver disappeared into commercialism.

Then most of the artists disappeared to the Island, San Francisco, or into oblivion he says.

"I do work here because of the peace and quiet. Wherever you live is important to what you see.

"Victoria's peaceful to work in — but sadly enough you have to depend on big business," he says, adding the market for metal sculptures among the locals is sadly lacking.

Between tourists and friends however, his work has been circulated through the States, and Canada.

His work? He explains it simply.

"You get a recurring thought or feeling in the back of your mind and find yourself thinking for a couple of months about how to express it in steel."

The final product, however, doesn't always portray that first thought, though. The lack of communication between people, was once the idea.

The sculpture started as an interpretation of the Biblical Tower of Babel and finished as a human torso, now cornered in his living room.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of your hair loss," says Harrison trichologist to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. They are sending a specialist here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Mon. and Tues.

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and improving the appearance of thicker hair will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 3 and 4.

This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists. In their announcement, they named trichologist J. Arthur to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Arthur will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1:00 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the hotel Sussex Apts.

EXAMINE YOU FREE

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Arthur.

Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still creates hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. The important thing is: DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE!

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do. But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate — or baldish — by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything.' So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

FREE SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Arthur in person. Learn how baldness can be avoided and hair growth encouraged. The new Harrison method permits you to save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For an examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the hotel Sussex Apts., Monday or Tuesday between 1:00 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Arthur's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

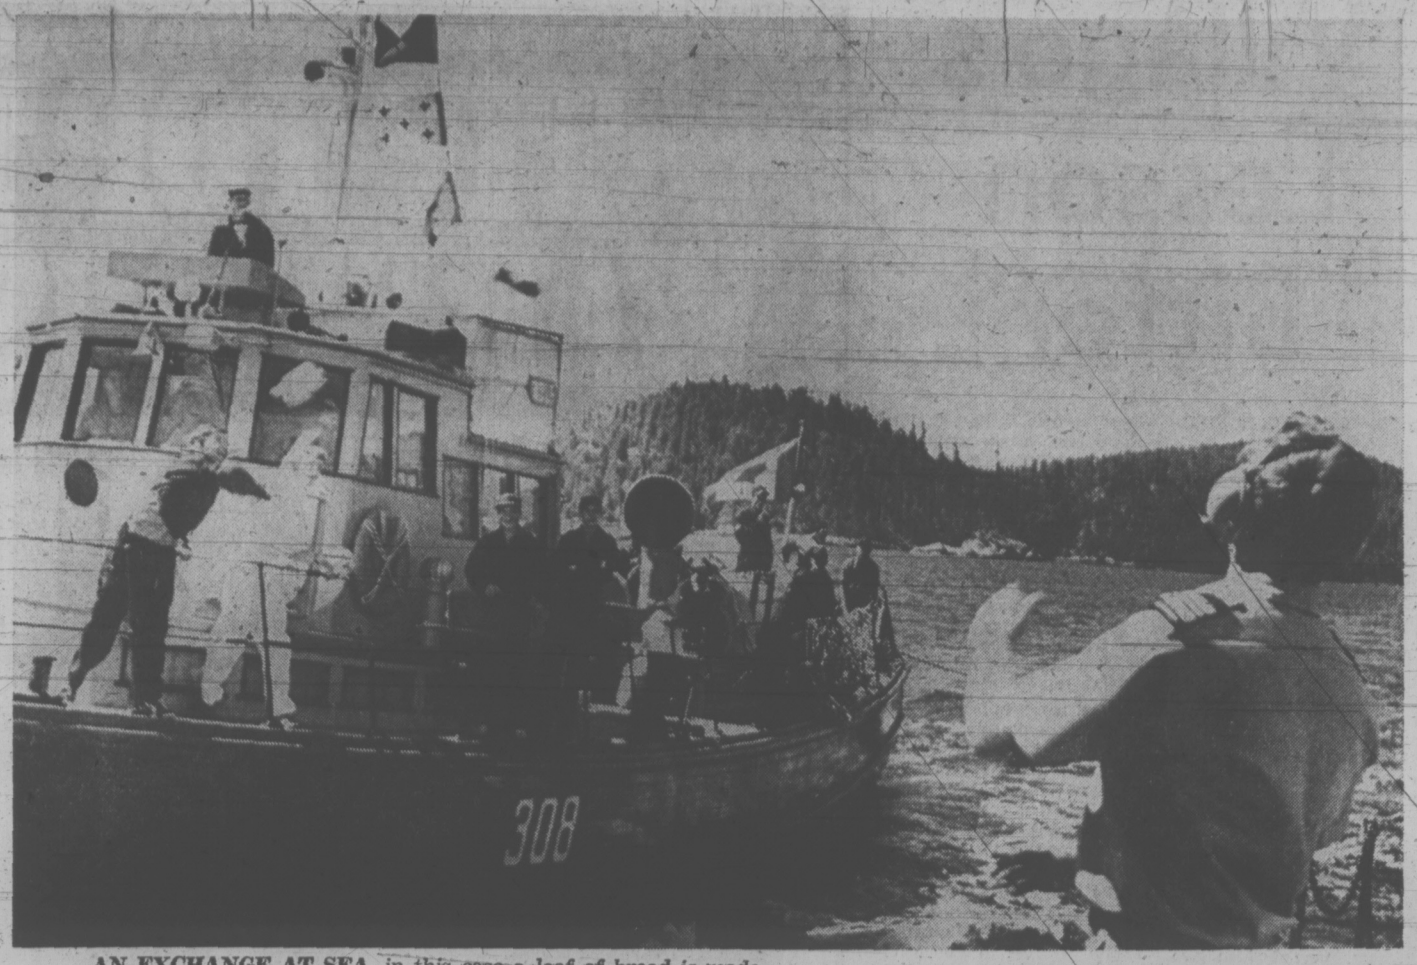
More than 1,500 Sea Cadets logged thousands of hours ashore and on the water getting...



AN EXCHANGE AT SEA, in this case a loaf of bread is made between two converted harbor craft used by Sea Cadets as part of a search and rescue patrol.

A Rounded View Of Military Life

By Pat Murphy

At conferences last week at the two Pacific Sea Cadet camps, one at Esquimalt and the other, HMCS Quadra, at Comox, groups of young officers from all over Canada sat down to knot together the fabric of a busy and productive summer season and make tentative plans for next year.

The overall picture showed that more than 1500 cadets from corps all the way from Cornerbrook to Kamloops passed through the camps and were trained for periods from two to 10 weeks.

For many of the inlanders it was their first exposure to mountains and the ocean.

On land they learned something about living in the woods. Satellite camps were set up in the rugged Chemainus River district and on Forbidden Plateau and cadets lived in the outdoors on expeditions ranging from overnight to a week or more.

However, a lot of emphasis was placed on sea training which included sailing and ship handling, small boat sailing, water satety, navigation and pilot techniques.

But there were many other courses. Communications, medical assistance and cooking, training, administration, physical education and marine engineering all had places in the curriculum which extended even to public speaking.

Cadet training is a total experience for a boy whether he attends camp for two weeks or two months.

From his arrival, usually by service flight, he is immersed in the atmosphere of discipline and activity. A judicious mixture of instruction and recreation is designed to keep the boy alert and interested.

He s requred to move quickly and smartly, dress properly and be respectful to his superiors and, in the case of first-time, two-week cadets, just about everything that walks is his superior.

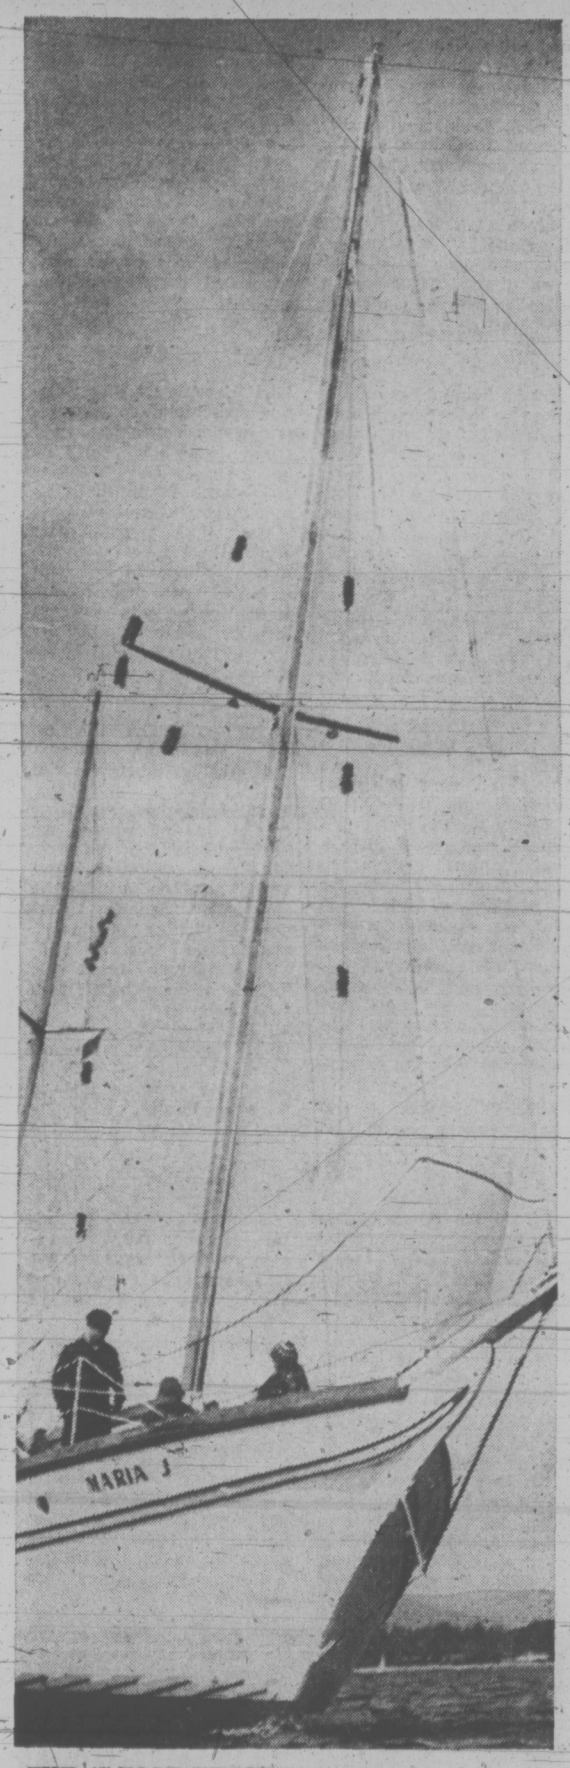
But the cadet summer program, financed by the Department of National Defence, is not entirely a one-way street and youngsters, who range in age from 13 to 17, contribute to the welfare of the people who pay their way.

The Quadra sea organization and flotilla, which is crewed throughout the summer by boys from both camps, is part of a tight, coastal protection service operated by the Pacific Rescue Centre of Victoria.

The Quadra flotilla which operates six power ships, including three 80-foot converted harbor craft, helps in the mother-hen watch kept on marine tourists.

This year the cadets responded to more than 30 calls for help.

Something of a triumph was scored this year by the Quadra band — an impressive organization of near-professional calibre — and a drill team which assisted in the ceremonies which opened the Canada Summer Games in Vancouver. The precision and smartness of the "Ceremony of the Flags" elicited compliments from many people including the admiral of Pacific Command.



THE 47-FOOT KETCH Maria J., part of the expanded sailing fleet used to train cadets in boat handling and seamanship at Esquimalt camp, booms out of Sidney Harbor.

Changes On The Way...

The theme most strongly advanced during the summer Sea Cadet programs on the Pacific Coast is one of responsibility — responsibility and leadership.

Both Lt. Col. Ralph Vipond and Major F. W. Conconi, commanding officers of HMCS Quadra and Esquimalt Sea Cadet Camp, stress that the whole thrust of the program is to develop young men into good citizens.

"Pride in themselves, enthusiasm for their work and love of country are all attributes of citizenship," says Major Conconi, "and this is what we are trying to foster."

Both officers are anxious to contradict the too-widely-held belief that the cadet movement acts as a recruiting base for the armed forces.

Two things which are likely to happen in the Sea Cadet movement in the next few years are the gradual introduction of the green tri-services uniform, replacing the traditional navy blues, and the admission of more girls into the action.

There were more young men in tailored green uniforms in camps this year and inside two years or so, it is estimated, all cadets will be wearing the green.

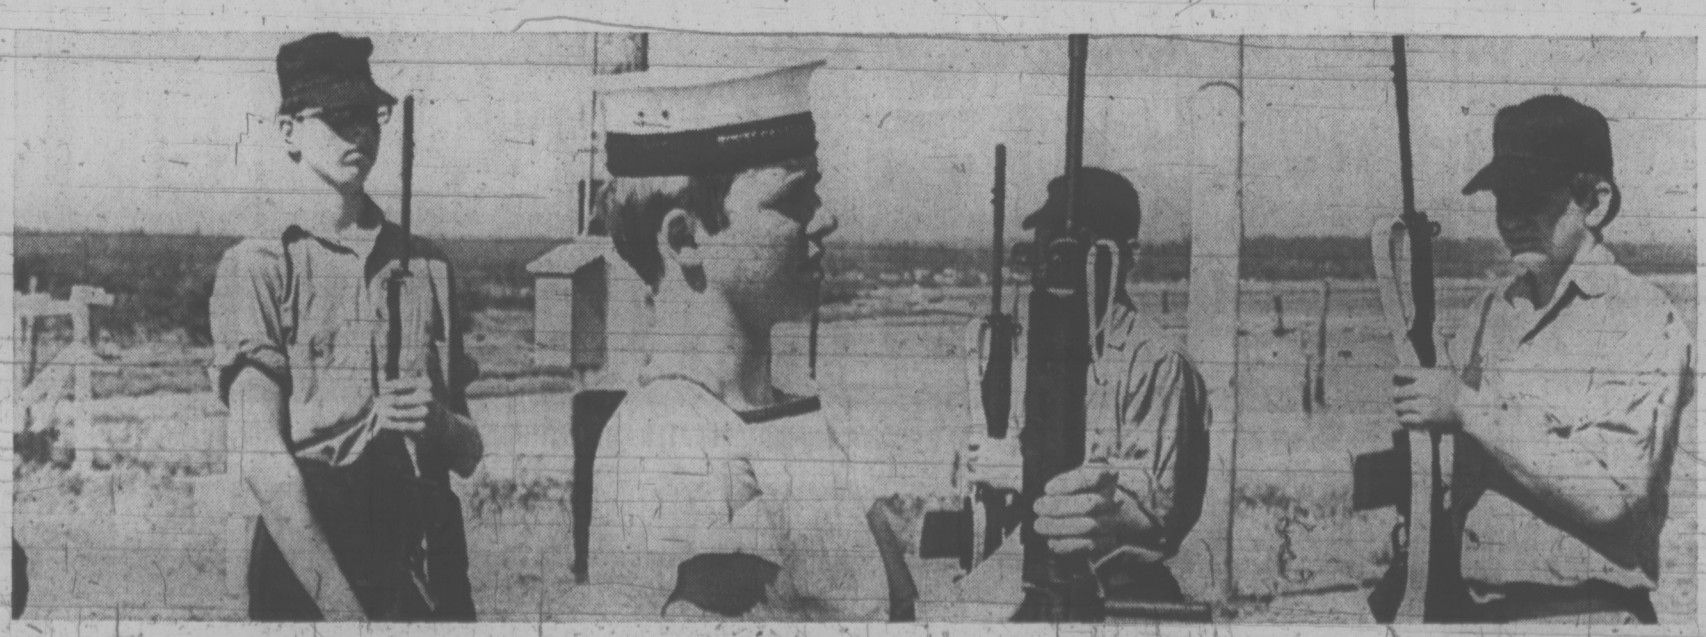
However, insignia and headgear will be distinctive, berets for the navy, peaked caps for the army and wedge caps for the air force.

Commissioned officers and many non-commissioned officers are already in green.

Five women helped make up the officer complement at HMCS Quadra this summer and there is a strong rumor that before long many more women and girls will be brought into the summer Department of National Defence summer cadet program.

Senior officers are non-committal at the moment but it is reported that after certain legislative formalities have been completed at Ottawa, changes will be made.

FIRE TRAINING and damage control are taught under regular force instructors under conditions which are controlled but nonetheless rugged at Comox's HMCS Quadra.



An integral part of Sea Cadet training is parade square bashing, much of it in preparation for a number of ceremonial drills held each summer for the benefit of the public.

Village's Lesson Bitter

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL

St. LAURENT DES-ARGBRES, France (WP) — When Algeria became independent 11 years ago, welcoming those Algerian Moslems who had fought for France — and lost — sounded like the patriotic thing to do and St Laurentdes-Arbres did it.

But as the years wore on this small, wine-growing village in the south of France discovered that the newcomers from North Africa not only were all but impossible to assimilate, but also were in the process of outnumbering their hosts.

Just a year ago a nasty fist fight between Moslem and French youngsters at the village fete brought home the problem to even the most idealistic of the original inhabitants, many of whom have taken unwittingly to expressign their thoughts in terms worthy of pre civil rights era American southerners.

Even Mayor Marcel Chevalier, who tried to make the experiment work, now admits: "They're not like us. Nothing can be done abut that, and some of them have just got to leave."

Somewhat defensively the mayor attacks "Paris intellectuals who don't have their feet on the ground and aren't obliged to live and work with these people." But in the same conversation he maintains that "all sociologists will tell you're bound to have friction and trouble when the minority is more than 15 per cent of the local population."

Put more crudely, it's a case of familiarity breeding contempt in this town near Avignon whose name means St. Laurent-of-The-Trees, but is often called St. Laurent-Of-The Arabs.

Some more radical racists have proposed, only half jokingly, that the town's streets be renamed to celebrate French victories over Moslems at Roncevaux in the middle ages or at Isly in Algeria during the 19th century French conquest.

That attitude is the probable result of the changes brought about in St. Laurent's habits by the presence of some 250 Algerians who live right in the village.

In the narrow streets leading down from the 11th century Romaneseque church, old men, their heads wrapped in turbans, dodge children playing outside rather than in the cramped quarters of their overcrowded red-tiled homes. The original St. Laurentais are not amused by the untanned sheepskins which serve as beds or by what one called "our series of little casbahs."

But St. Laurent has only itself or its former inhabitants to blame for the overcrowding. Decrepit houses were sold a decade ago by greedy and often absentee landlords for as much as five times their real value.

The new owners installed not only their only immediate familes, but often those of their children, nephews or cousins. That ended the calm and quiet that made up so much of St. Laurent's charm.

But St. Laurent's real problems involve money.

In concrete terms, the 1,130 "European" St. Laurentais are sick and tired of paying for the township's 1,120 "Arabs." And they are particularly angry about their financial responsibilities for the roughly 850 "Arabs" who live at St.-Maurice-L'ardoise in what the government euphemistically calls a "welcome centre." More prosaically it is a former internment camp which has housed Spanish republican refugees to Axis POWs, Algerian nationalists and French Algerian extremists.

Although the Paris government's ministry of social affairs' department of population and migrations pays for primary education inside the camp, the town has to foot the bill for secondary education and contribute toward its inmates' medical expenses.

Many of the camp inmates arrived in France rather the worse for wear in 1966, 1967 and 1968 upon their release from Algerian prisons where they had served terms for treason for having fought for France.

Over the years, the camp inmates have come to count on the central government to clothe, feed, and house them. The generous French social security system, which pays a healthy premium for large families to encourage the birth rate, has done the rest.

A French official employed at the camp concedes that the government "is trying to reduce the number" of inmates, "but it's hard because logically the ministry should give them something better than they have now."

"The state brought them here," the mayor maintains, "and it's up to the state to take care of them and do something instead of shillyshallying."

And if the mayor fumes there is little he can do about the camp's inmates — except refuse to foot the secondary school bills for its children — he has more drastic plans for St. Laurent village.

He is thinking of building some 20 inexpensive individual homes outside the village centre with state aid and destroying almost as many "unhealthy" homes inside its walls. Most of the houses slated for destruction happen to belong to "Algerians" whom the mayor would rehouse in the new quarters "but only for those who are willing to work."

Such an approach to welfare problems may be common in the United States, but it goes against the grain of almost two generations of French practice.

What seems so striking is the passivity of the Moslem community although passivity tends to be the rule in North Africa when individuals deal with any authority.

Not a single Moslem sits on the 17-member town council nor does either community appear to have considered that their relations might improve if the newcomers were represented.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Oh, the Effluence of Affluence

By Rev. J. A. DAVIDSON

Because nuclear devices have been extensively tested during the past quarter-of-a-century, today's young people now have bones that are enriched with Strontium 90 — which really isn't good for them.

They also have more lead in their bones than earlier generations had, and more carbon monoxide and mercury in their blood — all the result of what has been called "the effluence of affluence." And more DDT in their fat, although we are trying to do something about that for those more recently born.

A few years ago it was found that in some places in the highly developed regions of the world the milk of nursing mothers had two to six times the amount of DDT than was allowed by governments in cow's milk offered for sale in the stores.

Dr Rene Dubos, one of the great biologists of our time, has made this point: "From the age of two or three, children raised under conditions of high pollution begin to show evidence of permanent malfunction." Research reports from educators have indicated that children in regions of high air pollution seem to learn appreciably slower than those in other regions.

Our iniquity has been visited upon our children—and, if present trends continue, what will be the condition of their children?

Pollution is a growing horror for us. But, on the other hand, it is a sign of the great material affluence we enjoy and a token of our technological magnificence. The god of economic advance may provoke the devil of environmental pollution — but, well, what we lose on the swings we make up for on the roundabouts; and we've never had it so good, despite inflation and the other little devils of our affluence.

But how good do we have it, really? Not long before he retired as Secretary-General of the United Nations, U Thant called for the formation of a world authority, with strong policing powers, to deal with environmental problems.

He explained his concern in this way: "This is the first in its history that mankind faces not merely a threat, but an actual world crisis, involving all living creatures, all vegetable life, the entire system in which we live, and in all nations, large or small, advanced or developing."

Because he has learned to make nuclear weapons, man has power to annihilate himself — and man has to learn to live with that knowledge, for it can be unlearned only in annihilation itself. But now our nuclear anxiety is compounded by pollution anxiety, and some informed persons have come to think that we are in as great danger of destroying ourselves by polluting our environment as we are by our nuclear weaponry.

The biblical insight that the judgment of God works in and through the processes of history acquires new relevance in these days. Man can be his own judge — and his own executioner. But it is also a biblical insight that man has freedom to work his way through the terrible dilemmas he makes for himself, freedom to achieve new ways in life.

That insight, too, acquires new relevance in these days. The iniquity of the fathers need not necessarily be visited upon the children.

Social Workers Rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Anti-poverty groups here think professional social workers have too much control over social services and are too far removed from the problems of low-income people to be of substantial help.

The greater Vancouver Federated Anti-Poverty Groups and the People on Welfare Group claim this in briefs presented to the city-provincial committee studying integration of social agencies.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi announced last May that current city family and child services will be integrated.

The groups urged in their brief "the elimination of all professional social workers to be replaced by persons from our own ranks."

The anti-poverty groups criticized the government's "blue report" prepared by Levi's department as a starting point for integration.

They said they were disgusted with the report because welfare recipients were not invited to contribute to it.

The federated group and the people on welfare group said governments failed to meet the financial and social needs facing low-income groups and ignored preventative measures.

Bank Fraud Charged

CALGARY (CP) — An Edmonton couple charged with defrauding the Royal Bank of $29,590 appeared in court Thursday and was remanded until Oct. 10 for preliminary hearing.

Clifford Douglas Bristow, 34, and his wife, Sharon, 26, were charged with defrauding the Royal Bank in Calgary and Edmonton of $17,145 between May 31 and June 3, 1972.

Clifford Bristow was also charged with defrauding the Royal Bank at Three Hills, Alta., of $12,445 in June 1972.

On the Trail Of History

By JAMES McCOOK

When Prof. Morton's history of the Canadian West was first published in 1939 it caused a flattering stir. The reprint now issued has the addition of a preface and introduction by Prof. Thomas, professor of history at the University of Alberta. This makes even more useful a work extended to 994 pages, plus index and maps. It is prominent in the covey of four reprints reviewed here.

A HISTORY OF THE CANADIAN WEST TO 1870-71, by Arthur S. Morton. Second edition edited by Lewis G. Thomas. University of Toronto Press. $35.

HISTORY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA, by Alexander Begg. First published in 1894. Ryerson.

VANCOUVER ISLAND AND BRITISH COLUMBIA, Their History, Resources and Prospects, by Matthew Macfie, FRGS. First published in 1865. Coles Publishing. $6.95.

ALASKA AND THE KLONDIKE GOLD FIELDS, by A. C. Harris. First published 1897. Coles. $5.95.

Prof. Morton, who was head of the University of Saskatchewan department of history, devoted 20 years of his life to this project. He walked lonely miles to establish precisely the location of forgotten forts. He traced the lives of fur-trade personalities through the confusion of Grants, MacKays, Frasers, Stuarts and others of like names who wandered the plains and mountains before there were fences. He gave lectures, wrote letters to newspapers and arranged exhibitions — all to increase interest in the story of the West. When he died in 1945 he had replaced legends of the fur trade with documented facts no less interesting.

The last word in history can seldom be written. New material, extended research and fresh interpretations affect the value of what has been done. Prof. Lewis, with all his respect for Morton, feels that his history sometimes is tedious and occasionally unclear.

Morton had a special obligation to the Hudson's Bay Company which made source materials available to him. Lewis states that if Morton displayed less than complete objectivity in relation to the company it should be remembered that he worked so much with company documents that it was understandable he should come to adopt the viewpoint reflected in them.

Whatever might be found to criticize about Morton, Lewis emphasizes the basic point — that he "hacked a trail through the undergrowth of the history of the Canadian West." Morton described feats of exploration and endurance but also attempted to satisfy the curiosity of later residents of the fur-trade country.

Alexander Begg's "History of British Columbia," first published in 1894, preserved much information which might have been lost without the industry of this editor-schoolteacher, who died in 1904.

In undramatic style, Begg describes Roderick Finlayson's hand-to-hand fight with Indians at Fort Durham before he assumed his duties for the HBC at Victoria.

From Begg we learn that the Canadian chopping axe was the main tool employed when a new fort was built. Old mares were the main source of meat at Kamloops where the horse-breedingg station was maintained. Governor James Douglas, so revered by history, was considered tyrannical by settlers who sent the schoolteacher, Robert J. Staines, to London to complain but soon heard that their emissary had been drowned when his ship was thrown on her beam ends by a squall off Cape Flattery.

Matthew Macfie published his "Vancouver Island and British Columbia" in 1865 after five years' residence in Victoria and he, too, criticized Governor Douglas, whose "efforts to appear grand, and even august, were ludicrously out of proportion to the insignificant population he governed." Macfie snickered at the governor going on outings with an armed orderly in attendance.

Macfie observed the Leech River gold rush, 25 miles from Victoria, and gives a surprising atmosphere of good-fellowship to this event by his account of the miners singing in harmony in the evening.

Among Macfie's nuggets of information are his notes on horses imported from Hawaii, on Cariboo barkeepers sleeping on the bar at night to protect the liquor, on Oxford and Cambridge men working as laborers on the roads, on the seamy side of life in Victoria and — to give proper balance — on the matchless variety and beauty of walks and drives in this community.

A. C. Harris, in "Alaska and Klondike Gold Fields," assumed that numbers of those who sought his advice on efficient gold-rushing would be "real" men. He quoted a Colorado miner on the cold North:

"Of course, a man who would kick about a crumpled rose leaf on his couch would have a hard time in Alaska, but a man who is a man could get along all right up there."

Harris' book of instructions, first published in 1897, may have been helpful to scores of real men who still had time to get in on the gold rush.

Admiration for the real men extended to the real women, too. Harris noted the case of Mrs. Willis, who joined a party bound for the Yukon gold fields. She was about 45, "blonde, stout and rugged. She pulled her own sled weighing 250 pounds from Lake Linderman through to Lake Labarge, about 700 miles."

And she didn't write a book about it, either!

He Was a Snob All His Life

By JACK SCOTT

Writers who write about other writers almost always do them an injury. A reader who relied exclusively on his biographers would surely think of F. Scott Fitzgerald only as a playboy and an ill-starred drunk. Ernest Hemingway, in the 12-foot shelf of books about his life, appears as a posturing bully with a death wish. They are the classic modern examples of authors who are better read than read about.

O'HARA, by Finis Farr. McClelland and Stewart. $9.95.

Finis Farr's long account of the life of John O'Hara has somewhat the same denigrating effect on its subject. Certainly for those who were admirers of his short stories and his exact ear for dialogue, the O'Hara of real life—a snob all his days, absorbed in class and status, a blind patriot who venerated the institution of the American presidency, morbidly sensitive about his Irish background—is far less attractive than the writings he left.

Farr's problem, unlike the problems of Fitzgerald's or Hemingway's biographers, is two-fold.

O'Hara seems unlikely to be judged as a giant worthy of such a complete examination. While he was the most prolific of the writers of his era with 30 books and some 250 short stories published at the time of his death in 1970, only "Appointment in Samarra," his first novel published in 1934, seems likely to remain as any kind of literary monument. Already many critics—notably Alfred Kazin in his new volume of reflections on American novelists (Bright Book of Life, published by Little, Brown and Company) are dismissing O'Hara's later work as "overgrown" and "absurdly swollen histories."

Farr's second problem is that O'Hara lived a singularly undramatic life after his turbulent, heavy-drinking speakeasy existence in New York came to a close with a prosaic ulcer. Unlike Hemingway, O'Hara's life, like his writings, is more a study of manners than of flamboyant action. Kazin makes the cruel comment that "he wrote the same kind of story over and over" and his days, too, seem to have been in a fixed pattern. While he felt deeply the discrimination against "a Mick From Pottsville, Pa.", the solution O'Hara sought was in the riches and social position he attained.

The most interesting period of his life appears to have been his years in Hollywood where he toiled willingly and for large sums of money tightening up dialogue, perhaps his principal claim to genius. These chapters, documenting O'Hara's friendship with other Manhattan exiles in California, including Fitzgerald, Robert Benchley, and Dorothy Parker, are the liveliest in a book that otherwise may interest only O'Hara's most devoted readers.

THE DUKE COULD SMELL HIM

Gypsy Journalist

By TORCHY ANDERSON

GOD STAND UP FOR BASTARDS, by David Leitch. Collins. $7.95.

Bastardy is a subject seldom freely discussed, except in the time-mellowed history of royal families where the fact is recorded in the coat-of-arms.

British Journalist David Leitch does not await for the College of Heralds; he smacks his bar-sinister in large type on the title (adopted from "King Lear") and enlarges on the subject in discussing his mother. She, practical soul, advertised him as an infant for adoption in a London newspaper (The Daily Express) and invited interested adopters to view the goods at the Russell Hotel in Bloomsbury.

His book is acidly clever and ranges from the absurdities of Lord Thomson's visit to Khrushchev to the agonies he witnessed in Indochina.

The ex-Canadian lord's efforts to inject a funny story into a speech, via a Russian female interpreter, puts the noble newspaper magnate into a luncheon club hall of fame. The visit gave Leitch an eye-opening view of Khrushchev as a ruthless dictator with a remarkable liking and capacity for Scotch whisky.

Among newspaper people it is well known that Prince Philip is definitely NOT their favorite personality. But Leitch goes farther than anyone else, to say so in print. Assigned to an arranged interview with the King of Morocco in December 1966, in Rabat, Leitch was invited to a "do" in honor of Prince Philip, in the country to play polo.

LEITCH

According to Leitch the Duke spotted him in the crowd and advanced, champagne glass in hand.

"Knew you were a reporter the moment I clapped eyes on you," HRH began, "Can smell 'em a mile off."

As guests gathered around the Consort announced that he had made sure "the proprietors of three bloody Italian newspapers never get into society again." The Italian papers had carried "hinty" stories about Philip.

"My obsession has been with people." Leitch writes in a preface, "some famous, some obscure, nearly all funny in one way or another." They are people who have bobbed up in a gypsy-like life; the people I don't want to lose."

Leitch is obsessed with the identity and history of his mother, Truda, who "auctioned" him off at the age of seven days. This much, and only this much, he learned from his foster parents. She covered her tracks "as professionally as Howard Hughes."

Many of his priceless (to him) characters are unknown, others are public figures. There was Becky, the school girl who had a collection of uniforms from schools from which she had been expelled or "removed." Becky was the roving kind. There was Arthur, who "understood" cash registers well enough to add luxury to his way of living.

Leitch's copy out of Vietnam, as he recalls it here, is of the very best journalism. The same is said of his reportage when Russia was taking over Czecholovakia. During the Pope's visit to the Holy Land Leitch, generously supplied with cash by his paper, made an amusing and effective alliance with some Arabs to get his "copy" out ahead of less fortunate newspaper people.

One cannot but wonder if not too many years ago David Leitch could have got his frank memories into a published book. But his book has been seriously reviewed in Britain and well acclaimed.

Whether you rave in anger or roar in laughter you are not likely to yawn.

The Wilderness Belongs to Us

By PAT BARCLAY

We once spent an instructive but somewhat excruciating evening in the home of a young botany student in Berkeley, California. (We were young then, too.) The student was the keenest botanist any of us are ever likely to meet, and the colored slides he showed us — half of them taken while hanging by his heels from a precipice, it seemed — were superb.

But the evening was only just beginning. "Would you like to see my rock collection?" asked his father. We were conducted into a fair-sized room furnished with nothing but rocks and showcases containing more rocks. It was dazzling. Next came his mother's African violets, sixty of them, all blooming like crazy.

On the way out to the backyard we passed the cactus garden. (It was perfect, if a mite unfriendly.) The backyard was in Hawaii. Or might as well have been, what with waterfalls, colored lights, and every tropical plant you would ever wish to see, plus a few you probably wouldn't.

Back in the house again, the student wondered whether we would like him to play the piano. The certainty that his technique would be at least as good as Van Cliburn's, and the equal certainty that when it was, I would begin to laugh, made me decline with thanks. We settled for coffee, and a discussion of the beauties of Lake Tahoe.

"Do you have any lakes up in Canada?" asked his father politely.

My husband eyed him with remarkable calm. "Yes," he said, "Canada has more lakes than any other country in the world."

When we were safely outside I asked, still awed, "Is that really true?"

"I don't know," came the answer, "but I sure hope so."

What this windy anecdote goes to prove, I hope, is that for Canadians, the land is identity. Other nations have their superlatives: we have our wilderness.

It's a point made many times in Marked by the Wild, "an anthology of literature shaped by the Canadian wilderness" edited by Bruce Littlejohn and Jon Pearce, who teach at Upper Canada College. The book is badly overpriced — $5.50 in paperback — and a glance through it suggests that it is more a collection of raw material ready for processing into a Ph.D. thesis than a cohesive whole, but first impressions too often mislead.

A closer look reveals that the editors are sincere propagandists, out to convert us to the cause:

"Wilderness is not limitless . . . man is a part of nature and imperils his own kind, as well as other species, when he arbitrarily sets himself apart from and above nature. A new ethic is surely required to combat such ignorance . . . Lacking such an ethnic, we must anticipate a degraded existence, a spring bereft of bird songs, a declining quality of life."

They suggest that "those who would comprehend and comment on our culture would do well to immerse themselves at some point in wild nature," and warn that the wilderness has enemies: "Many Canadians have grown up in large cities where they have been almost totally insulated against the non-human world. They know little of it and consequently find it alien and fearful." It is not such a long step from this to the "compulsion to manipulate or dominate" . . . "everything that is free, wild, and unmanipulated."

As with any anthology, the ghost of what is left out hovers reproachfully over the pages of what is left in. ". . . Writers such as Grey Owl, Frederick Philip Grove, Ernest Thompson Seton, John Livingston, and Ralph Gustafson are not here. But this is an anthology, and anthologies are necessarily selective" . . . say the editors blithely. One's first thought, scanning the star-studded list of rejects, is apt to be, "Is there anybody left?"

Well yes, there is, seventy of them in all, not necessarily Canadians, but Canadians if necessary. One of the more moving selections is by Sigurd Olson, an American who lives "within easy paddling distance of the Canadian border," and who writes of his "search for a perfect wilderness lake" with dignity and devotion. Others, such as Bruce Hutchison and Hugh MacLennan, appear more than once.

The point is that Littlejohn and Pearce have their own ideas about wilderness and have selected pieces which demonstrate them. Thus their material is organized under chapter headings such as "The Wilderness as Adversary," "The Benign Wilderness," "Wilderness as Cultural Influence," etc., to show the many faces of man's relationship with nature.

It is a complex relationship, one well worth exploring. For many Canadians, who still live within easy reach of (in Blair Fraser's words) "an empty area of forest or plain in which a man can still enjoy the illusion of solitude," the exploration could be a voyage of self-discovery.

MARKED BY THE WILD, edited by Bruce Littlejohn and Jon Pearce. McClelland and Stewart. $5.50.

PETER MURRAY - EDITOR

STORIES FROM SAN JUANS

Recently two small books dealing with both sides of the Strait of Juan de Fuca have been published in Everett, Wash.

"The Cruise of the Calcite" describes a leisurly expedition up the waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland in 1908, replete with interesting photographs taken at that time. The other, Roche Harbor, a saga of the San Juans, is well illustrated.

In 1908 John S. McMillin, commodore of the Roche Harbor Yacht Club, and president of the big lime company on San Juan Island, crewed and stocked up his yacht "Calcite" and invaded the beautiful Canadian waters. One of his guests was R. P. Butchart of Victoria who originated Butchart Gardens in his old lime quarry.

They had a good chef, a well-stocked larder, and a competent crew on the comfy 50-foot Calcite. When they left the ship to fish or hunt they had beautifully built rowboats. No outboards.

The peak of their cruise was a row to the head of Powell Lake. Rowboats, their cook and a travelling larder were transported from Powell River to the foot of the lake by a logging train. Then they rowed, caught fish, shot game and delighted in the scenery. Their whole adventure is described with almost poetic enthusiasm by John A. McCormick, who had the eye of an artist with a camera in his hands.

"Roche Harbor" is the story of John S. McMillin and the development of the rich lime deposits on San Juan. Part of the McMillin holdings included the remains of the British "fort" erected in the bloodless war with United States forces at the other end of the island. The killing of a pig started the "war" at the time of the American Civil War. The Pig War was a nice, friendly, cosy war for both sides. — T.A.

Where Lawrence Found Peace

By JENNIFER PULLING

TAORMINA, Sicily — The inscription on the wall reads simply: "D. H. Lawrence — English author — lived here — 1920 - 1923."

"Here" is Fontana Vecchia at Taormina, the Sicilian villa where Lawrence produced some of his best work. He reanimated "The Lost Girl" which had lain morjbund since the war years; "Aaron's Rod" was begun and most of the poems for "Birds, Beasts, and Flowers" were written here; a trip to Sardinia resulted in "Sea and Sardinia."

There is another plaque on the villa's wall which reads, "Pace." At Taormina, the volatile Lawrence, rootless wanderer, seems to have found at least a temporary peace.

Fifty years later, such a plaque is a mockery. Bulldozers cleave through the soil, the air is filled with the infernal sounds of machines busy making yet another new road. Once the wintering place of the wealthy English, Taormina is experiencing a package tour boom.

Once, Fontana Vecchia, set among olive groves and lemon trees, stood alone; today, the Sicilian with his love of property has come out in a rash of new villas which mar the view from the villas' balconies. The house is being converted into apartments. Surprisingly, there is no local Lawrence Conservation Society.

You walk through the ruined rooms. Sunlight floods through the shutterless windows into the old kitchen. Lawrence used it as his bedroom. He liked to get out of bed and walk on to the balcony in his pajamas. In one of his letters, he wrote: "We've a nice big house set in a big garden, green with almond trees . . . it is beautiful and green, green and full of flowers."

Sicily was a celebration for him. His senses had been blanketed by the war years, the bullying he had suffered as a conscientious objector — the insensate industrial climate. To this clear southern air he responded with shrill ecstasy. The colors were returning.

As always, Lawrence immersed himself in the new sensations of place. The local people remember his delight in their simple foods — wild fruits ". . . delicious and we've got treefuls" — the Sicilian wine and the good dark bread, baked in an open oven. He ordered a loaf every day. If life with his wife, Frieda, continued its spectacular moments of violence — the breakfast time arrival of the local mayor coincided with a domestic quarrel when she hurled a plate of fried potatoes at her husband's head — it was also a time of contentment and release.

D. H. LAWRENCE . . . 'The House of Muses'

Lawrence had three such occasions of release in his life, each connected with a voyage to Italy and the start of a new phase of his writing. He brooded over the problem of why people in England should be so "life-starved." The Italian working class he loved for its warmth, industry, and simple love of life.

"I must say I like this place," he wrote. "It seems so peaceful and still and the earth is sappy." The sap was rising. This return to Italy meant new stimulus to his writing.

Villa Fontana Vecchia is filled with his restless but benign presence. "The House of Muses" it is called locally.

If ever a house could lend inspiration, it is this one. The salon is alcoved with gothic-shaped windows. Lawrence lost his temper at the sight of the curtains that had been hung here. "You contract beautifully shaped windows and then ruin them," he said. "Let the shape be seen. Let the sun come through."

Dustsheets now cover his writing desk. All the furniture is large, carved, made of dark wood. It is not difficult to imagine Lawrence and Frieda huddled over a fire of Sicilian pine: if the summers are hot, the winters can be surprisingly cold, and it rains.

Rains with such persistency and stupidity here," he wrote from Fontana Vecchia in such weather. "One remains cut off. Sicily at the moment seems like a land inside an aquarium. People like crabs and black-grey shrimps creeping on the bottom; don't like it."

Italy, for Lawrence, did not provide all the answers; sometimes it proved to be no more than another part of Europe.

He had not recovered from his mood of angry disillusionments and ambition gone sour. Two of his best novels, "The Rainbow" (1915), and "Women in Love" (1916), had been suppressed.

"Aaron's Rod," begun at Fontana Vecchia in 1920, is the first of his "leadership" books. He grasped, intuitively, the personal feeling of rootlessness, characteristic of the 1920's. His chief characters are self-exiled, fallen into social extremism from despair. Much the same could be said for Lawrence. His odyssey, which began with Italy, took him onward to Australia and Mexico.

Prince Rupert Planning Reunion

Former Prince Rupert residents are invited to attend a reunion in Prince Rupert on Oct. 5, 6, and 7.

Sponsored by the city's Visitors' Bureau, the reunion will feature a dance, carnival, golf tournament, an exhibition of figure skating, a marine smorgasbord and other attractions.

The Prince Rupert Historical Society also plans to have a large display of the city's progress since 1904.

Bluebell Girl Still Blooming

PARIS (Reuter) — Margaret Kelly has conquered the cutthroat world of show business and stayed on top for 15 years— but who has ever heard of her?

Perhaps the pseudonym "Miss Bluebell" will jog memories.

As manager of the world's finest and tallest line of precision dancers, she now has an international organization with permanent troupes in Paris, Las Vegas and Barcelona and another constantly globe-trotting from Istanbul to Tokyo.

Under her watchful eye are 150 Bluebell girls, who are among the highest-paid dancers in Europe.

"Miss Bluebell," as Irish-born Miss Kelly is known, reckons to have trained nearly 7,000 dancers.

"Over the years I have had colonies of families that have grown up around the show in Las Vegas," she recalls. "I really should have a statue there for the reproduction of the American race."

But home base for the dancers has always been the Lido nightclub on the Champs Elysees here, where every night of the year the bare-breasted girls high-kick their way through a routine that invariably keeps the club's 1,000 seats full.

Just as regularly, "Miss Bluebell" is there—crouched behind a pillar or circling round the auditorium to ensure that the girls are keeping time and maintaining the show's zest and speed.

"We have what I call a cleanup rehearsal every week to keep things fresh," she said.

In her search for strikingly tall dancers "Miss Bluebell" finds that English girls, who make up more than half of the troupe, fit the bill best.

"What I look for is a good, well-featured English face. But I prefer personality. Sometimes you see a girl who is really beautiful but when she gets on stage she has a deadpan face. I like people to be really alive when they are performing."

Brought up in Dublin, she moved to Liverpool to train at a ballet school. She then joined a dancing troupe that toured Germany before she ended up in Paris in the chorus line of the Folies Bergeres.

Later she moved on to set up her own Bluebell girls at the Lido, after marrying pianist Marcel Leibovici, who was killed in a road accident in 1961. Now her four children help out with the business side of the Bluebell production line.

Applications for the job of Bluebell girl are constantly pouring in, and "Miss Bluebell" prides herself on the fact that most of the dancers, on average, stay a minimum of three years in the strenuous job.

Film Not for Squeamish

PEKING (Reuter) — If the sight of death makes you feel queasy, or if the mere thought of a surgeon wielding his scalpel puts you off, then the latest box-office hit in Peking's cinemas is not the film for you.

Autopsy of a 2,100-year-old Mummy could well qualify as the most gruesome show on earth.

It is a documentary, filmed in color, showing in exhaustive detail the surgical dissection of a remarkably well preserved, but nonetheless very old, corpse.

For those whose stomachs can stand it, the film is worth seeing as evidence of the considerable research effort the Chinese are putting into the study of their past.

It is also a striking example of a new breed of Chinese films employing a straightforward documentary approach, eschewing the heavy ideological overtones found in most forms of Chinese mass entertainment.

The body in Autopsy is that of a middle-aged woman unearthed from a tomb dating back to the Han Dynasty—(206 BC to 220 AD) in Changsha, Central China.

The wrinkled, brownished-colored body, which is seen stretched out on an operating table, is in one piece and clearly identifiable as that of a human being, although some facial features are indistinct.

Then the top of the skull is cut off and the brain is removed.

The film then shows a long incision being made down the front of the body and the organs, which have also shrunk but have kept their basic shape, carefully lifted out.

Subsequent examination discloses that the woman was about 50 when she died, and was suffering from a long list of serious ailments.

It was most likely, the commentary states, that the woman died when biliary colic induced an attack of coronary heart disease.

TV ADS CURBED

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec advertisers will no longer be able to use cartoon characters or animation techniques in selling to children after today when additional regulations on advertising aimed at children go into effect.

Last year, the financial institutions department created a series of regulations covering advertising aimed at children under the Consumer Protection Act.

The regulations forbid such things as exaggerating the performance of a product or using superlatives to describe its characteristics.

In a recent statement, William Tetley, financial institutions minister, said the province had to act "because there were so many abuses in the field of children's advertising — and the federal jurisdiction had not taken a position sanctioned by law."

Bastion's School Tour Set for New Season

This fall will see Bastion Theatre's school tour company take to the road for the 11th season.

Groundwork for the tour was laid last spring when tour information sheets were sent to schools throughout Vancouver Island, the Okanagan and Kootenays and to sponsoring groups in northern Washington state.

Results were gratifying.

By the end of the school year 144 advance bookings had been received.

Responding to a special questionnaire seeking opinions from secondary teachers on type of presentations, replies varied greatly.

Some teachers opted for excerpts from plays. Others felt it was of more value to present a play in its entirety. Most agreed that music combined with the spoken word is exciting for the students.

MANNERING
. . . directing

Recognition of Canadian writers was suggested.

Some unsolicited comments included, from Nanaimo, "Last year's production was perfect, being of inestimable value for my acting classes yet having sufficient life and interest for all types of Grade 12 students."

From Cumberland, "Your company serves as valuable function in isolated communities." And from Trail, "The Bastion Theatre performance was enjoyed heartily by students who have little opportunity to experience live theatre."

Rehearsals will shortly begin for the fall segment of the tour which will take Marge Adelberg's adaptation of The Three Bears to elementary schools and a double bill, The Babies by Canadian playwright Anna Lippman, and Impromptu by Pulitzer prize-winning author Tad Mosel, to secondary schools.

Members of the company will be veterans Ian McIntyre, Terry McColgan and Sherry McLaughlin and newcomers Rebeccas Reeves, Elaine Schuler and Michael Woods.

Founding director Peter Mannering is directing the secondary program and Paul Liittich, Bastion Theatre School director, is staging the Bears.

DECADE MARKED IN CHILD SHOWS

Ten years ago, on Sept. 21, 1963, Bastion Theatre presented its first production for children, Alice in Wonderland.

This year the decade will be celebrated on Sept. 22 at 2 p.m. with the first of a series of five matinee presentations of The King of the Golden River at McPherson Playhouse.

SYMPHONY SEASON SALES SOAR

Advance season ticket sale by the Victoria Symphony is running 50 per cent ahead of any previous year at this date.

With the opening concert still four weeks away, Monday night is more than two-thirds sold and Sunday afternoon is only slightly behind.

The telephone rings all day, according to manager Mel Couvelier, and members of the Women's Committee are kept busy helping to deal with the rush of ticket orders.

If the pace keeps up those wishing to buy tickets for single events may find themselves on waiting lists this winter. The long-sought goal of a sold-out season is definitely in view.

First concert pair, starring the world's most famous woman violinist, Ida Haendel, takes place Sept. 30-Oct. 1.

Osborne Play Opens Season At Langham

Getting an early start on the season, Victoria Theatre Guild will ring up its curtain Sept. 14 at Langham Court Theatre.

The play is British playwright John Osborne's Look Back in Anger. Anthony Jenkins is director.

This is the play that altered the course of modern British Theatre when it opened in London in 1956.

A tragi-comedy of frustrated talent, it offers a searing study of a rebel-without-a cause, Jimmy Porter.

In this production David Parry plays Jimmy, and a newcomer from New Zealand, Judy Bradshaw, plays his wife, Alison.

The Theatre Guild box office opens at Eaton's on Sept. 12 at 10:15 a.m.

St. Luke's Show

Local playwright Joan Mason Hurley's full length comedy, Get Away Somewhere Quiet, is the fall production choice for St. Luke's Players.

Casting will take place Friday at 8 p.m. in the Fireside Room of St. Luke's Hall, Cedar Hill Cross Road. Peter Mannering is to direct.

Prospective new members may audition at this time.

BRYAN'S BEAT

Good Times Roll Again

By BRIAN HAY
Times Staff

Let me make one thing perfectly clear: I'm an unabashed, self-confessed Fifties Freak of the first water.

Because those days when Dief was ruling the country, WAC was ruling the province and Red Robinson was ruling the airwaves, were my days.

The days when rock and roll was rock and roll, before it got sick, took drugs and recovered in a completely different space.

The days of the Big Beat, of overnight heroes and soon-forgotten faces, the end of an era for such kings and queens of wax as Frankie Laine, Tony Bennett, Guy Mitchell, Rosemary Clooney, Patti Paige and Dinah Shore.

The first stirrings of youth power — backed with spending potential, a field as-then barely harrowed by the manipulators of the consumer society — and the demands, thought by many since to have been original with the Woodstock Generation, for "our music."

The time when civic officials could ban rock concerts on the grounds that they were the fathers of teenage daughters and "knew what youth needs and it's not rock 'n' roll."

And there wouldn't be a murmur of protest at such a high-handed action.

Also the days when black music first began to blend with white and an "overnight" sensation such as Antoine Domino, commonly knows as Fats, could tell an interviewer that even then he had already been playing his music for more than a decade in the honky-tonks and bars of New Orleans and as far as he was concerned rock 'n' roll was no threat to human decency — or anybody's daughters.

They were finally the days of innocence.

An era when the lyrics of performers like Chuck Berry and Little Richard could slide past ears that now would have them banned from the airwaves . . . and have the listeners who were lucky enough to hear them chortling with glee.

And, like any other days of turmoil, of cultural revolution, idols were quickly made and quickly felled as a generation struggled to establish its own hagiocracy.

Oh, what false prophets some of the short-lived turned out to be — especially a slew of them from the Philadelphia area who were linked to a certain TV dance show MC who is still going strong even though in his dotage he has fled to the more-mellow climate of Southern California.

. . . Frankie Avalon, the Fabulous Fabian, and from the midst of the Disney conglomerate, Annette Funicello . . .

Perpetrators of singles-only waxings and non-swinging movies based on beaches that should have been washed away with the rising tide but unfortunately have ebbed onto our TV screens.

Why this sudden flood of nostalgia?

Simply to get around to saying that if you didn't live through those days, you can experience them vicariously through a movie that will be playing the Haida around Thanksgiving — after JC finally closes and following an already slated run for Man in the Moon Marigolds — called Let the Good Times Roll: a 100-minute total immersion into a melange of images, impressions and interviews with the Music Men of the Fifties, interspersed with one of Dick Nader's Rock Revival concerts.

However, if one could have looked ahead in surprise from those delightful days and seen that 17 years after Dief and Ike we would be saddled with Trudeau and Nixon, then unfortunately, the real symbol of the Fifties rather than an upbeat guitar chord and a DA haircut should have been the sorrowful sour-lemon grille of the Edsel.

RCMP Offering Sample Taste Of Review

A glimpse of what is in store for audiences attending the RCMP Centennial Review next week will be offered Thursday and Friday at noon in Centennial Square.

If it rains, the mini-show will go indoors at McPherson Playhouse.

Following spectacular performances at the PNE, the RCMP Review — a two-hour show that includes band, chorus, a display by trained police dogs, gymnastics, horsemanship and as a conclusion the famous musical ride — comes to Memorial Arena Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Self-Expression OK But Talent Helps

There is a lot of talk these days about the right of people to express themselves through the arts in their own unpolished natural way.

Which is great. Wonderful, in fact.

For far too long creativity has been stifled, nipped in the bud, disparaged by our convention-riddled society.

Probably at least nine-tenths of the people on earth have more creative potential than is ever allowed to emerge.

But this does not mean that most of it would be of significant value to anyone other than themselves.

What it does suggest is that if all the potential were fully developed, many people would experience, in varying degrees, greater fulfillment or at the very least relief from pervading boredom.

Among the young people in revolt against all forms of established procedure, this basically sound consideration is being distorted by some into a giant size hang-up.

Amateurism has become a cult with this faction. Suddenly mediocrity is big.

We are told that it is wrong to continue to foster professional ballet companies, theatres and symphonies. Instead we should be spending the public miney on providing facilities for do-it-yourselfers to improvise in whatever medium takes their fancy.

It's an amusing and naive concept, especially to anyone who recalls the mid-30's depression years when there was also an abundant amount of leisure but for a totally opposite reason.

There was no OFY or LIP money available to provide high class facilities but hundreds of young people got involved in all sorts of arts and craft activities.

Necessity was never more the mother of invention than at that period.

The truth is that a few feet of space and the simplest of tools actually bring out the fullest powers of invention by challenging the imagination of persons with any disposition in that direction.

The only serious impediment to originality and artistic development is educational straitjacketing which occurs most frequently at the grade school level.

The child experimenting with mud pies and sand and woven grasses needs only a few yards of beach or field, and no one to pay him heed.

But if he grows up to be a talented scientist he needs and has a right to be endowed with a sophisticated laboratory and the respectful attention of his world.

The artist is no differrent if he develops from his exploratory years to become the cultivated master of his craft.

As for people in general, human nature hasn't changed in a thousand years.

By far the majority of people are content to accept their own limitations and more than content to sit back and be elevated and entertained by those more capable than they.

An intriguing item in the New York Times caught my eye this week.

It seems that Denver, the city which voted down a chance to host the winter Olympics, has approved a $6 million bond issue to build a new concert hall for its symphony orchestra.

There have been remarkable gains in recent years in the subscription audiences — 121 per cent — in numbers of concerts and support from the city of Denver.

"It is a healthy situation," says Brian Priestman, conductor of the orchestra. "It is ductor of the orchestra. "It is healthy that half our audience is under 30 . . ."

The concert hall is to seat 2,200 people and "nobody will be more than 80 feet from the orchestra." There will be chorus seats behind the orchestra which can be used by audience when no chorus is required.

Concertante Canada is the name of the young impresario group headed by Norman Abbott, which mounted the charming Vienna Fest concert on behalf of the Ethel James scholarship fund last Sunday.

Norman, son of an outstanding Victoria musical family, now lives and follows a professional musical career in Toronto.

He established the organization originally to sponsor engagements for the Beaverton Strings, a chamber orchestra which he formed mostly from former National Youth Orchestra personnel.

Former Victoria violinist Velma Ko is a member.

Concertante Canada now has its division in Victoria and there will definitely be more concerts of a similar kind in the future to follow up the resounding success of the Vienna presentation.

Prisoner Transfer Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is negotiating with the provinces to transfer women in federal prisons to provincial ones, a penitentiary service spokesman said Friday.

The aim is to relocate women prisoners in their home provinces close to families, a move expected to encourage rehabilitation.

The only federal women's institution is at Kingston, holding about 140 women.

Negotiations have been under way for three or four months and provincial reaction has been favorable, but "only one or two provinces" have agreed to the proposal so far.

"In practice it would boil down to a per diem federal payment for each female prisoner transferred to do time in a provincial institution," said the spokesman.

The spokesman said provincial programs are designed for prisoners with average sentences of four to six months while federal prisoners serve an average of four years.

He predicted negotiations might last a year because of the number of provinces involved. The idea of transferral had "been in the air for several years", but a decision to act was taken only recently.

MURDERER FREED

DETROIT (AP) — Margaret Britton, 70, walked out of the Detroit House of Corrections Friday morning as a free woman and murmured: "Forty years . . . forty years . . . and now I'm going home."

In 1933, Mrs. Britton was convicted and sentenced to life in prison for second-degree murder in the beating death of her eight-year-old daughter. A boarder in the Britton house, Cody Calloway, was convicted on the same charge. He died in prison in 1955.

She told reporters Friday her daughter was killed while she was at the store. She was released on parole.

The Color of Dad's Shirt Has Brutal Consequences

LONDON (CP) — One March week in 1958, some 17,000 children were born in Britain. Now, 15 years later, the height, health and intellectual ability of each individual child can be estimated with unhappy accuracy by the color of his father's shirt.

A recently-published study of the 17,000 children shows that, at age 11, the offspring of white-collar middle-class families scored on average twice as high in tests of reading ability than did their contemporaries from blue-collar middle-class backgrounds.

More than 90 per cent of the human crop was traced and evaluated at ages seven and 11 by the National Children's Bureau and it was learned that class differences go well beyond mere academic standards.

"Social class differences in the same direction were also found in relation to all other measured abilities as well as to social adjustments in school, speech difficulties, dental health, height, bowel and bladder control and also physical co-ordination," said the report.

Having divided the 17,000 young Britons into six distinct social classes according to their parent's income and occupation, the investigators found that more than half of the Class I and Class II children achieved better-than-average reading scores in a special test while only 12 per cent of those from the lowest social level did so.

The fact that, within the same middle-income group, the children of manual workers fared only half as well as those of non-manual employees shows that wealth is not the only key determinant.

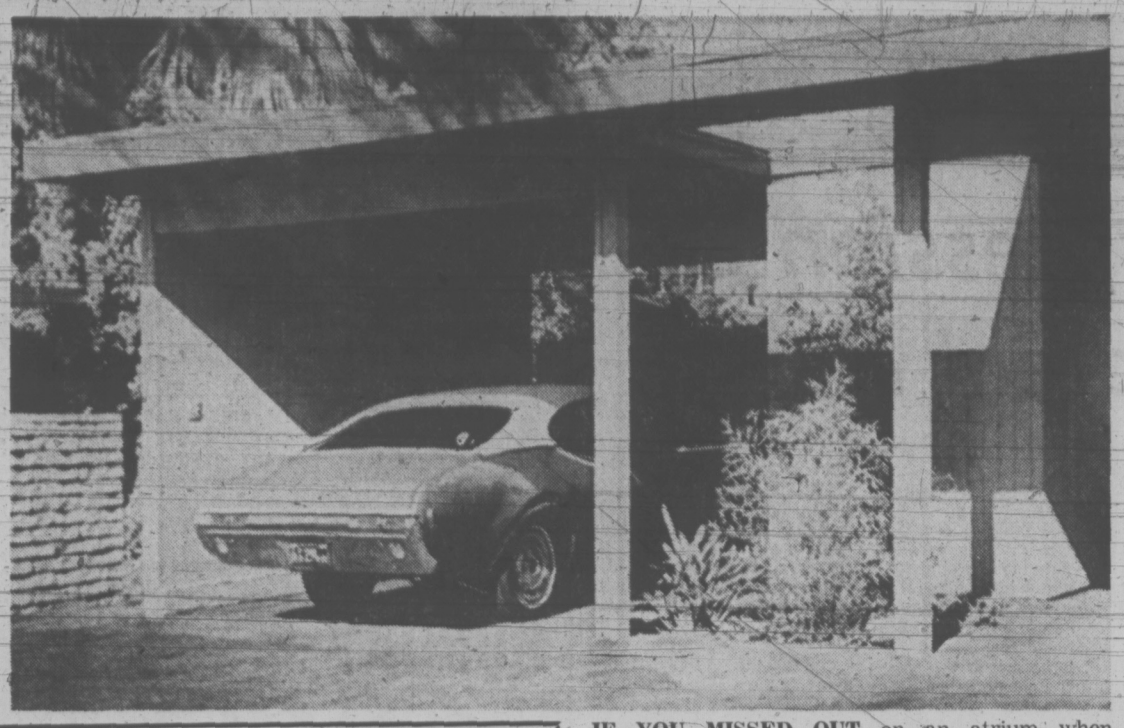
Perhaps the most disturbing revelation is that the differences among the children were, if anything, accentuated during the years intervening between seven and 11, the influence of mass education not having the levelling effect that might e expected.

Says the report:

"The situation as early as seven years looked bleak.

"The situation at 11 years looks no better and indeed may well be worse."

A possible explanation, it continues, is that teachers themselves tend to come from middle-class, white-collar backgrounds and communicate more easily with pupils sharing the same social attitudes.



IF YOU MISSED OUT on an atrium when your house was built, why not fit one into your carport? Actually, this planing area began as an effort to save a favorite tree. The big green open space makes the carport look very un-garage-like.

GARDENING

This Is Weekend to Sow The Grass Seed

Labor Day weekend is the acknowledged time for sowing grass seed in this part of Canada, providing the area has been properly prepared, weeds removed, levelled, and the soil has settled.

A lawn in the true sense of the word is something beyond the reach of home gardeners because of the expense of adequate preparation, cost of upkeep, and the time factor involved.

The best we can expect to achieve on an average income is a patch of grass, but there is no reason (excepting impatience) why that patch of grass should not be the best in the block.

Most of the grass troubles that keep gardeners in a constant state of worry are directly related to inadequate preparation of the site, which in turn relates to the budget and the unreasonable rush to "to make the place look presentable."

Every building we erect has an adverse effect on the soil. The weight of modern machinery compacts the soil to a considerable depth, ruins its texture, and changes the natural movement of water below the surface. When the water is forced down, or diverted, insufficient moisture rises to sustain plants.

Deep preparation is therefore essential before seed is sown in an endeavor to restore the vertical movement of soil moisture. Especially is this necessary to areas in front of buildings where the most damage is done by trucks and machines.

This is only the beginning of future lawn troubles. Trees may have been cut and stumps removed, leaving roots in the soil; or the location may have been covered with first and second growth conifers for hundreds of years and the soil laced with decaying and active roots. Until the roots have finally decomposed the grass above will be plagued with the fairy-ring fungus.

In an affluent society scraps of lumber from a construction job are not eagerly gathered for firewood. These scraps are buried, and each will start a fairy-ring as it gradually reverts to soil.

Some contractors burn a lot of the rubbish. The heat of the fires consumes the humus in the soil, destroys the beneficial micro-organisms, and the deposit of ashes contains higher levels of potash than grass will tolerate. Result; a problem spot where grass refuses to grow.

Wall plaster and stucco is usually mixed, and the equipment cleaned and washed down, in a spot that will eventually be included in the front grass area. Grass, and any other plants needing a slightly or definitely acid soil, will not thrive in these spots until the alkalinity has gone, but weeds will grow in profusion.

Chunks of brick and concrete, pieces of asphalt roofing, paper bags and sheets of plastic, are often buried in the final cleanup. Each is a potential block to the natural up and down movement of soil moisture, and the cause of troublesome brown patches.

If the place has to "look respectable" immediately, a crew of laborers is the only answer. Where money is lacking, the owner will have to invest his own spare time, in which case the grass area will not be ready for quite a while. But when it eventually materializes, it will be grass of which the owner can be justly proud.

Those home gardeners who followed the advice given last spring, working throughout the summer, watering, fertilizing, removing weeds and digging out perennial roots, can now go ahead with seeding.

The soil is warm and relatively dry. Cooler temperatures, light winds, increasing relative humidity, and the occasional shower, combine to provide ideal conditions for quick germination and strong growth of seedlings.

Grass seed must germinate within 12 days once it comes in contact with moisture, otherwise it will rot. As many home gardeners have learned, sowing after mid-September is risky, since the adverse weather conditions of late fall result in a poor stand of grass, and the work has to be repeated next year.

Reseeding over a poor stand of grass is not the answer. Each square foot of soil will support only so many plants. Three years after reseeding certain areas will begin to die out because crowding has limited air, light, food and root space.

To avoid future problems, never sow into freshly imported "top soil." The weed problem will be terrific, and there is always the possibility the soil may be too acid for grass plants. Better to add manure and compost to your present soil.

Buy a seed mixture compounded for west coast conditions, not a mixture suitable for anywhere in Canada. The latter will not contain sufficient seeds of the finer grasses that thrive so well here, but have a preponderance of coarse grasses for areas with cold winters, plus unneeded clover.

Specify whether the grass will be in sun or shade, whether it is to be restricted to viewing only, or required to take normal wear, or for rough play. There is a mixture suited to every soil and purpose.

Level the area carefully with frequent raking in every direction. Walking on the surface will compact the soil sufficiently. Never roll a soil containing clay.

Sow the seed broadcast by hand; no seeding machine has yet produced comparable results. Practice first with coarse sand in a corner of the vegetable garden. Then perfect the art of covering the seed (or sand) with a rake, leaving it evenly distributed and not gathered into heaps.

Keep sprinklers away from seeded areas. Dampen with a fine mist from the hose, held low but not directed at the soil. Mist the area frequently on sunny days, but don't saturate the soil enough to lower the soil temperature and delay germination.

Check frequently and remove all weed seedlings by hand as soon as they appear. No weed killers for at least two years because they inhibit the growth of the grass seedlings. A half-hour a day right from the start will take care of weeds before they become a serious problem.

Remember, it takes three years for the various nurse grasses to die out and the fine grasses to establish a turf. Three years from now you will be able to judge the results of your work.

Sowing the seed is the easiest part of the whole job, requiring the minimum of time and effort. It is the preparation that determines what the final results will be, and that is the part where invested time and effort really pays off.

★ WORK FOR WEEK

As early as possible get daffodil and all other narcissus bulbs into the ground. They do not flower earlier but blooms and bulbs are better for the early rooting

Clean out old growth from climbing roses, leaving bright new canes. Tie in those required to cover area.

Remember NO FERTILIZER now to any shrubs, trees or herbaceous perennials. Only exception is bonemeal (which does not become available to the plants until spring, and then slowly) at planting time for certain trees and shrubs tolerating lime.

Tuberous begonia flowering prolonged by removal of spent blooms and decaying leaves. No watering overhead.

Bush and runner beans must be picked every third day to keep crop in production for as long as frost remains absent.

Onions should have been lifted, but if any remain, lift now and spread to ripen. Those with thick necks will not keep. Use these in the next two or three weeks.

Lawn sowing this weekend. And have old car rug ready for covering tomatoes and squash if frost threatens on a clear night.

Contagious Cancers Now a Possibility

By PETER MOSLEY

LONDON (Reuter) — Recent revelations that cats can catch blood cancer from each other have raised again the nagging question: could some kinds of human cancer be contagious, too?

Over the years an overwhelming volume of evidence has tended to rule this out. There are, however, some isolated but well-documented cases of what appear to be limited epidemics of cancer. These include an outbreak of leukemia involving eight children in Illinois in the early 1960s, and a cluster of cases of Hodgkins disease in Albany, N.Y., a decade later.

Now a group of American scientists has produced evidence for the first time that mammals—in this case cats—can transmit leukemia (blood cancer) horizontally.

Hitherto it has been shown that certain viruses associated with leukemia could be transmitted vertically (genetically) from mother to child in animals and fowl and perhaps among humans.

FOUND IN FOWL

In fowl, there was also strong evidence for horizontal transmission of the virus by normal infection.

The real sticking-point for cancer researchers is that in humans, despite a shoal of red herrings, there is nothing that positively indicts viruses as the cause of cancer. Certainly, viruses can be found in association with cancer; but they may be incidental rather than causative.

The latest findings in cats have opened up new lines of investigation as far as human cancer is concerned: and they could, conceivably, lead toward a cancer vaccine.

A group of American veterinarians and cancer researchers led by Dr. William Hardy of the Sloan-Kettering cancer centre in New York, reported their findings in Nature magazine. Of almost 1,500 cats from disease-free houses that were tested, only two were found to be carrying feline leukemia virus.

HIGH INCIDENCE

But of almost 550 cats from infected areas, 177 had the virus and about 23 per cent developed leukemia and died within six months. This figure was about 900 times higher than normal.

"Thus," said Nature in commenting on the report, "leukemia in cats is an infectious disease."

But the magazine went on in much more alarming key. Noting that in test-tube experiments, the virus had been found to infect human cell cultures, the magazine said: "There is the possibility that the human population may be exposed to infection."

No scientists of repute think there is any serious danger of humans catching cancer from their cats. And Dr. Hardy and his colleagues state specifically that they have no evidence of this.

A PRIEST'S VIEW OF ARCTIC LIFE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rev. Raymond de Coccola says things are changing in the Arctic and laments that the book he wrote about how things used to be was censored.

"The publishers cut too much out of it," the 61-year-old priest said of his book Ayorama, written after he had spent 12 years among the Eskimos as an Oblate missionary. "They said it contained too much blood and sex—it was stupid because there was nothing in it which wasn't true."

The book, written in 1954, is being released soon in a paperback edition.

Father de Coccola said the Eskimos he knew lived as they had for thousands of years. He wrote about them and the way they lived before the military invaded their land and before big corporations began mineral exploration in the Arctic.

"There is a new breed of Eskimo these days that doesn't have to follow the ways of old," he said. "The things the old Eskimos did, they had to do to survive."

However, if the Oxford University Press censored Father de Coccola's book, the Roman Catholic Church approved it with hardly a murmur.

The book he wrote reflects that murder was common, cannibalism sometimes a necessity, killing of female infants a custom and the dumping of old people behind on the trail made sense.

Attacks of scurvy and a steady diet of fish and caribou meat finally affected his health so seriously that his superiors ordered him to leave the Arctic.

But he said one of the things he learned and will always remember from the years in the Arctic is "Ayorama", the Eskimo word meaning "that's life."

Weddings

Poole — Gilfillan

First United Church, Port Alberni, was the scene of the August 4, 1973, wedding of Cheryl Irene Gilfillan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alec Gilfillan, to Douglas G. Poole, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Poole, of Victoria. Reverend George A. Affleck performed the ceremony and music was provided by Mrs. Mueller.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long Empire gown of white silk, trimmed in white Italian lace. The long train was attached at the shoulders. She chose a white large brimmed hat and carried a bouquet of red roses with miniature white carnations. Matron of honour was Patricia Zanolli, sister of the bride. The bride's cousin, Susan Horlacher, was bridesmaid. The bride's attendants wore long yellow A-line, sleeveless crimplene gowns featuring large white collars with V-necklines. Complementing the ensembes were yellow picture hats and bouquets of yellow roses with white miniature carnations. Brother of the groom, Ernest A. Poole, was best man and serving as ushers were Milt Barnes, Jim and Bill Gilfillan. The bride's mother wore a short, mint-green dress of polyester crepe of sleeveless A-line style and chose a white carnation corsage. The mother of the groom chose a short A-line dress of turquoise crimplene and wore a white carnation corsage.

Out-of-town guests attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Percy Poole, Burlington, Ont.; Bob and Darlene Boyd, Miss Ellen Boyd, Parksville; Randy and Wendy Bowers, John and Sheila Forgie, Lorne and Dawn Falconer and family, Dick and Ruth Wilson and family, Ian and Carol Haynes, Milt and Audry Barnes and family, Mr. Rob Smith, Ross Bayles, Miss Louise Renwick, Erne and Barb Poole and family, Bill and Gay Miller and family, Norm and Dorothy Bennett, Chuck and Kathy Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Poole, Danny and Jackie Eddy, Jim and Michelle Fearn, of Victoria; Mrs. Adele Cordick and family, Kelowna, Byron and Lil Horlacher, Susan Horlacher, Richmond; Del and Dee Fossen, Powell River, and Harry and Hazel Shorter, Burnaby.

Ritz — Middleton

St. Andrew's Cathedral was the scene of a double-ring ceremony at 1:30 p.m. July 7, 1973, when Barbara Lynne, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Middleton, became the bride of Mr. Stanley Alan Ritz, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Ritz. The saying of the marriage vows was solemnized by Monsignor O'Connell.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her lagoda crepe gown, with empire waist, long slender sleeves with trim at neck and cuffs. The sleeveless coat flowed into a full train and was accented with the ruffle trim from neck to hemline. Her chapel veil was held in place with a cap in the same trim. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, blue carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath accented with pink ribbon. The bride was attended by Miss Sheila Rodger as maid of honor, Mrs. Aileen Holland was bridesmatron and Miss Kathy Ritz was bridesmaid. They were attired in identical floor-length gowns of turquoise blue flocked daisy chiffon over tri-acetate lining. They carried bouquets of white carnations and blue chrysanthemums accented with pink ribbon. The little flower-girl, Miss Laureen Middleton was captivating in a floor-length gown identical to the bridesmaids. Best man was Bruno Rocca and Messrs. Larry and Lorne Middleton ushered the guests. Peter Holland was ring-bearer.

Morrison—Creelman

A double ring ceremony was solemnized by Father W. J. O'Brien in Our Lady of the Rosary Church August 4, 1973, at 7 p.m., when Darlene, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Creelman became the bride of David Neil Morrison, youngest son of Mr. Angus Morrison of Montreal, and the late Mrs. Morrison.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in an empire style gown of polyester chiffon and lace. Her chapel-length veil was of silk illusion and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations. The bride was attended by her sister Mrs. Lynne Hunter and Mrs. Wendy Cullen, who wore matching gowns of pink polyester crepe. Junior bridesmaid Miss Tammy Hunter, niece of the bride wore a pink floral nylon gown. They all wore large brimmed hats and carried bouquets of pink and white carnations. Nephew of the bride Master David Hunter was the ring-bearer. The best man was Mr. Ronald Cullen and the usher was Mr. Bruce Ericson.

The groom's sister Miss Liz Morrison of Montreal and his aunt Mrs. F. Darche of London, Ont. were among the out of town guests.

Macdonald — Evans

The marriage is announced of Mrs. Louise Evans of Victoria, B.C., and Dr. D. Chisholm Macdonald of Saskatoon, formerly of North Battleford, Sask. The wedding took place on August 25, 1973, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Saskatoon.

A reception at the Bessborough Hotel followed. They will reside at 97 Carlton Towers, 325-5th Ave. North, Saskatoon, Sask.

Groth—Redford

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized August 25, 1973, at 4 p.m. in the garden setting at the home of the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Daniels, 88 Caton Place, Victoria, when Dianne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Chesworth, 1040 Tolmie, exchanged marriage vows with Ivan, son of Mrs. L. Metcalfe, Vancouver, and the late Mr. H. Groth. Reverend K. Ridgway officiated and soloist Mel Chesworth was accompanied at the organ by Gary Webb.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length colonial type gown of orange taffeta with overlay of chiffon. Her only jewellery was a white pearl drop, a gift from the groom. Her chapel veil of orange net was caught in the arrangement of tiny orange rosebuds which prettily framed her face. She carried a bridal bouquet of orange rosebuds with white stephanotis. The groom wore a white dinner jacket with matching boutonniere and black pants. The bride was attended by her sister-in-law Mrs. Mel Chesworth as Matron of Honour. She was attired in a floor length gown of royal blue velvet in a slim empire style. Her veil was caught with rosebuds of a matching color. She carried a bouquet of royal blue rosebuds with silver net and trim. The little flower girl Karen, daughter of the bride was captivating in a floor length gown of royal blue velvet. Her headpiece was adorably like the Matron of Honour's. She carried a beautifully made basket of velvet and silk which was filled with rose petals which were to be strewn in her mother's pathway. The bride's son David, dressed in a blue velvet suit, carried the rings on a dainty white satin pillow which was hand embroidered. All the clothes and accessories for this wedding were sewn by the bride. Mr. Ron Daniels in white dinner jacket with matching boutonniere and black pants attended the groom.

The reception followed. Tables were beautifully decorated with floral centre pieces on orange and blue crepe paper doilies. The bride's table was centered with a beautifully decorated three tier cake complement of the bride's mother. A cold plate dinner was served followed by many dainties which had been baked by the bride's mother and sister, Mr. Gil Commons gave a toast to the bride and a musical program followed. For her going away outfit, the bride wore a floral jersey two piece suit with white hat and gloves. The couple will reside in the Interior.

Ballard — Lace

Major and Mrs. John Lace of Sidney are pleased to announce the wedding of their eldest daughter Georgina Margaret to Ronald Alfred, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ballard of Vancouver. The ceremony took place on August 18, 1973, at Heather Road Bible Chapel, Vancouver. The Reverend Baker officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, in a beautiful white satin gown trimmed with lace and a long veil and carrying a bouquet of gold and white flowers, was given away by her father. Her sisters, Mrs. Johanna Feesey and Miss Virginia Lace, were matron of honor and bridesmaid. They wore matching primrose gowns and carried floral baskets. Mr. Kenneth Ballard of Prince George was best man. Julia Feesey and Coralie Ballard, small nieces of the bride and groom, were flower girls in primrose frocks.

The reception was held at International House, UBC. The happy couple will be living in Vancouver.

Mason — Pepper

Mr. and Mrs. John Pepper announce with pleasure the marriage of their daughter, Lois, to Peter Mason, son of Dr. and Mrs. Geoffrey P. Mason of Victoria. The wedding was celebrated on August 18, in Emmanuel Baptist Church, Reverend Norman Archer officiating.

The bride was attended by her sisters Connie Smith and Susan Pepper and friend Barb Ritch. David Mason was best man for his brother and ushers were Brent Gerrett and Avtar Bains. Robin Snicer and Gill Mothersill sang during the ceremony.

Rates for publication of Wedding or Engagement Notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department. (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available.) 8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deepest thanks to our many friends and relatives for their expressions of kindness and sympathy shown through cards, floral offerings and donations to the Cancer Fund in the recent loss of our husband, father and grandfather, Ivan John Markusich. Also to Drs. Hough, Higgs, Willev and Heimlich and staff of 3rd Central, Royal Jubilee Hospital, our heartfelt thanks.—Mrs. Magda Markusich and Family.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, cards and beautiful floral offerings during our recent sad bereavement in the sudden loss of our beloved wife and mother, Helen Elizabeth Sommer. Special thanks to Rev. Bob McLaren and McCall Brothers Funeral Chapel. — Ted, Val and Steve Sommer.

I hereby want to express my deep appreciation and thanks for the care I received during my stay in the Royal Jubilee Hospital. I will always remember the kindness that surrounded me and the dedication of Doctors and Nurses that helped me on my way to recovery. —Mrs. Anne M. Eterna.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BEGGS—In loving memory of "Mom" Nancy Marshall Beggs, who passed away Sept. 3, 1966.
Some day we hope to meet her,
Some day we know not when
To clasp her hand in a better land.
Never to part again.
—Dearly loved and missed by her son and daughter-in-law Bert and Rose.

HARRISON—In loving memory of William H. Harrison, who passed away September 2, 1970.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away from sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Elsie and children Mary, Judy, Bill, Ken and families.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Elsie and children Mary, Judy, Bill, Ken and families.

WOOD — In loving memory of our mother, Janet, who passed away September 1, 1971.
—Lovingly remembered by her daughter Mary and son-in-law Jim.

Movies

The Endless Summer (xxxx), on 12 at 7. Glorious, lyrical photography; a charming musical score and a disarming narrative blend into a stunning account of a three-month, 35,000-mile trip around the world with two young surfers in search of "the perfect wave."

The Falling Man (xx), on 13 at 8. A 1968 crime-drama about an ex-cop who sets out to get those who framed him and ruined his career starring Henry Silva and Keenan Wynn.

Sailor Beware (xx), on 4 at 9. A 1951 Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis comedy that finds them in the Navy and in trouble. Watch for the late James Dean in a small role as one of the sailors.

Two Years Before the Mast (xxx), on 11 at 11. A 1946 film adaptation of Richard Henry Dana Jr.'s classic novel about the son of a wealthy merchant who is shanghaied onto one of his father's ships for the trip around the Horn in the 1880s. An excellent cast includes Alan Ladd, Barry Fitzgerald and Brian Donlevy.

Children of the Damned (xxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. An English-made 1964 science-fiction thriller about six youngsters with super-natural powers who begin posing their will on others. Cast includes Ian Hendry, Alan Badel and Barbara Ferris.

Journey to the Far Side of the Sun (x), on 6 at midnight. Strange things begin to happen when astronauts return from a trip to a previously unknown planet in this 1969 sci-fi drama. Roy Thinnes and Patrick Wymark star.

The Counterfeit Traitor (xxx), on 8 at midnight. A suspenseful 1962 tale based on fact, about a businessman approached by the British to pose as sympathetic to the Nazis, while in reality spying for England. Excellent performances are turned in by William Holden, Lilli Palmer and Hugh Griffith.

The Golden Breed, on 13 at midnight. A 1968 documentary survey of surfing in California, Mexico and Hawaii. Produced and narrated by Dale and featuring surfers Jock Sutherland, Joey Cabell, Ricky Grigg, Felipe Pomar and Nat Young.

Specials

World Symphony Orchestra, on 9 at 8. Arthur Fiedler conducts 142 musicians from 58 countries at the opening of Walt Disney World in October 1971. (90 mins.)

First Edition: Tell It All, on 9 at 9:30. Backstage and on the road with the rock group First Edition, filmed in September 1971. (60 mins.)

National Geographic, on 8 at 10. Leslie Nielson narrates this special documentary, Wind Raiders of the Sahara, about a 1500-mile journey across the world largest desert — in sailboats. (60 mins.)

Early Tuesday Movies

Alexander Graham Bell (xxx), on 4 at 9:30. A 1939 biography of the man who invented the telephone starring Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda and Charles Coburn.

Ellery Queen: Don't Look Behind You (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Peter Lawford plays the famed amateur sleuth in this 1971 TV-movie about the hunt for a strangler.

The Enemy General (xx), on 13 at 1:30. Good performances by Van Johnson and Jean Pierre Aumont highlight this Second World War drama about an OSS agent who works with the French underground — filmed in 1960.

Young Man with a Horn (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. The life of jazz cornetist Bix Beiderbecke was the basis for this 1950 drama about a dedicated trumpet player who lived exclusively for his music until it was almost too late. Kirk Douglas gives an excellent performance as the musician and the remainder of the cast includes Lauren Bacall and Doris Day.

Any Second Now (xx), on 7 at 3:30. A 1969 crime-drama about a man who decides to kill his wife after she catches him in a compromising situation. Stewart Granger, Lois Nettleton, Joseph Campanella and Dana Wynter star.

THE HOTCAKE

Our $54,500 Beach Drive Apartment that's selling like there's no tomorrow

Sure this apartment would sell like a "hotcake" anywhere but put it on Beach Drive in Oak Bay where the high cost of land doesn't usually allow for so much space and value at such a moderate price — and you can really see what the excitement is all about.

The ROYAL ALEXANDRA has three other one and two bedroom models from just $31,000-$57,500

Come see them quick, because we won't have them long. They're selling like the Hotcake.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
Tree Planting Project 92H13-18
Situated: on Scuzzy and Uzilius Creeks.

Contractors are advised that the British Columbia Forest Service intends to let a planting contract in the Fall of 1973 for the planting of 120,000 trees on 170 acres, more or less, situated on Scuzzy and Uzilius Creeks, West and East respectively of Boston Bar.

In order that prospective bidders may have an opportunity to view the planting site and acquaint themselves with conditions on the ground, the Forest Ranger at Hope will supply directions to interested parties to the area. Interested parties are advised to examine the contract area for themselves before submitting bids.

Sealed tenders for this contract will be received by the Chief Forester up to 4 p.m., Friday, September 14, 1973, except that for specific reasons the Chief Forester may extend such time.

Tenders will not be considered unless made out on the tender form supplied, properly signed and witnessed, and accompanied by a deposit in the form of a certified cheque or money order in the sum of $50, payable to the Minister of Finance.

Tenders must be submitted in the envelope marked "Tender for Tree Planting."

The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted, and the Forest Service reserves the right to limit the number of contracts held by any party at any one time.

Prospective bidders are advised that this contract will be awarded only on proof that the successful bidder has arranged with the Workmen's Compensation Board for the necessary coverage of all employees and/or partners who will be working on the contract.

Note that prior to commencement of planting the successful bidder will be required to submit a deposit in the total amount of five per cent of the bid price.

Planting stock required for the contract will be supplied free of charge by the Forest Service f.o.b. at a place designated by the Forest Service.

Particulars may be obtained from the Chief Forester, Parliament Buildings, Victoria; the District Forester, Vancouver; or the Forest Ranger at Hope.

VANDALS STRIKE CRYSTAL POOL

Police said the thieves broke into the Quadra Street complex sometime Friday morning by prying open a roof hatch.

The cafeteria door was kicked in, the cash box broken open and $50 taken.

Police said there is no official estimate of the damage, but termed it, "extensive."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Allan Scott Alexander, 21, of 511 Davida, pleaded guilty to 10 break-ins, two charges of theft and two charges of wilful damage. He told police the profits from the break-ins and thefts were used to support his three capsule-a-day heroin habit.

Judge William Ostler, in sentencing Alexander in Victoria provincial court Friday, said he had given serious consideration to a jail term, but had decided against it because it was Alexander's first time in court.

Alexander has been in custody since he was arrested Aug. 16 because of what Judge Ostler termed his "voracious appetite" for heroin.

"You have a voracious appetite for heroin and whether you want to or not, you are likely to turn to crime to support it," Ostler said in refusing bail.

As a condition of the two-year probation term, Alexander must pay back more than $1,000 for money stolen and damage done in the break-ins.

Ronald William Moore, 37, of 1782 Bay Street was sentenced to two weeks in jail for being in care and control of a car while impaired. Moore was checked by police July 25 on Eastdowne.

NEY OFFERS B.C. BOWSER BIRDLAND

NANAIMO — Five acres of a 150-acre residential-resort development near here has been offered to the provincial government as a bird sanctuary.

Mayor Frank Ney, president of Nanaimo Realty Co. Ltd., said Thursday the offer was made because the land — some of it waterfront property — has become a nesting place for cranes.

Other wildlife that inhabit the parcel of land near Bowser are eagles and herons, he said, adding he thinks they should be left undisturbed.

Ney said representatives of the provincial fish and wildlife branch have already inspected the site.

"They said if the cranes were disturbed they'd simply move on to another nesting place. But nature keeps on having to retreat and how far you can keep moving them, that's the question."

He added thought was being given to banning the use of firearms in the surrounding area.

POLITICIANS LAST IN SURVEY

MONTREAL (CP) — Fifty rural blue collar workers were asked to rank occupations in terms of truthfulness, competence, altruism, and power by psychologists at the University of Maine.

Of 20 occupations surveyed, politicians brought up the rear, psychologists Richard Ryckman and Martin Sherman told a group attending the American Psychological Association convention in Montreal.

Comparable surveys conducted among college students, secretaries, and teachers brought similar results.

This, the psychologists said, proves the general public has definite beliefs about certain occupations.

Tot-Laden Train Slams Into Truck

WITTMUND, Germany (UPI) — A train loaded with school children struck the edge of a parked truck Friday in a fatal accident that hurled dozens of youngsters head-over-heels from their seats, police said.

Two children died of their injuries and at least 15 others were hospitalized in serious condition, they said.

Imports Soar In June

OTTAWA (CP) — June imports rose by more than $300 million over the June, 1972 figures to $1.9 billion, and the six-month total showed a rise of more than $2 billion, compared with the first half of 1972.

Statistics Canada reported Friday a January-June total of $11.3 billion compared with $9.2 billion in 1972.

The figures reflect the brisk pace of economic expansion.

June imports from the United States were $1.4 billion against the 1972 equivalent of $1.1 billion. Japan took second place at $89.6 million, down from $95.3 million, followed by the United Kingdom with $88.8 million, up from $84 million.

These three countries retained their relative positions in the six-month trade figures with the U.S. at $8.1 billion, Japan at $522.8 million and the U.K. at $515.8 million.

Sen. Molgat Bids to Head Ottawa Grits

WINNIPEG (CP) — Senator Gil Molgat of Manitoba has announced he will seek the presidency of the federal Liberal party at its biennial convention in Ottawa Sept. 14 to 16.

At a news conference, Molgat said he is running on a platform of greater decentralization of the party and more direct constituency involvement in all aspects of its work.

Sen. Richard Stanbury of Toronto has been party president since 1968.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it ever worthwhile to give vitamin pills to a canary? Keeper (mine) seems healthy but I was just wondering.

—W.R.

DEAR W.R.: No. First, I don't know of any vitamin pill that is the right size and, second, vitamin drops would be easier to use anyway. However, whether Keeper would actually derive any benefit from any vitamin supplement would depend mostly on his diet, partly on his environment and, of course, on his present condition. Since most pooped-out canaries didn't get that way because of a vitamin deficiency, it would certainly be a mistake to consider vitamins as an answer to signs of illness. On the other hand, giving preseribed dosages of vitamin supplements to a healthy bird (in the water is the usual procedure) would be contraindicated only if he refused to drink his water because it was so spiked.

DEAR DR. MILLER: To see if it would improve his bad temper any, we gave our cat, Spitty, tranquilizers for a few days. The only effect they seemed to have on him was to make him meaner than ever. What does this mean? —E.E.

DEAR E.E.: It means you shouldn't use them because (a) the tranquilizing effect simply removes what little inhibition he did have and allows his ornery disposition to be even more obvious or (b) he may actually be allergic to the tranquilizer. He might be more favorably affected by some other tranquilizer or some other dosage. Consider, however, that tranquilizers are only a short-term answer even where they are specifically indicated for animals that react favorably to them. The only time tranquilizers should be used at all is when they are prescribed by the veterinarian. He might feel the use was justified in a mean animal in conjunction with some type of training procedures. Ordinarily, however, tranquilizers are a temporary device to relieve apprehension and fear. In the veterinary hospital they are sometimes used in conjunction with other medication for relief of some types of spasms and as a preanesthetic drug.

Rail Offer 'An Insult' Say B.C. Union Chiefs

CORK, Ireland — A three-day race with death ended in victory for rescuers today when two men trapped in a midget submarine on the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean were lifted to the surface safe and well.

They had only 90 minutes of oxygen left when they were freed from their submarine and placed on the Vickers Voyager, the sub's mother ship and headquarters for the rescue effort.

Roger Maalinson, 35, and Roger Chapman, 28, clambered under their own power out of their crippled 19-foot submarine Pisces III 75 hours and 50 minutes after it sank in 1,375 feet of water off the Irish coast.

But the men escaped by a whisker.

Their midget sub, disabled while burying a new transatlantic telephone cable Wednesday, carried what was expected to be air enough for only 72 hours, plus a 45-minute emergency supply of oxygen. But they managed to stretch out the oxygen just long enough.

The rescue effort began shortly afterward with rescue subs flown in from Canada and Scotland and a U.S. unmanned rescue craft also participating.

The Canadian coast guard vessel John Cabot helped haul the Pisces III to the surface after the midget submarine from Scotland, Pisces II, managed to attach a strong rescue cable to the stricken vessel.

The John Cabot went to the rescue scene from off the British coast after hearing of the call for help.

The rescue effort was plagued throughout by mechanical difficulties and turbulent seas that cut underwater visibility almost to zero.

The Pisces II attached the rescue cable to the Pisces III today after an earlier attempt failed Friday night.

Pisces II and Pisces V, the other rescue sub flown in from Canada, took 11 hours to find the disabled craft Friday and tie a guide line to it so they could find it again when they descended with the heavy line.

Emergency oxygen supplies from face masks apparently were the differencce between life and death for the submariners.

It took 3½ hours to haul the sub to the surface today with the rescue cable attached to the John Cabot, the guide line attached to the Vickers Voyager and another line ranning from the U.S. unmanned undersea craft, Curiv III, all helping in the effort.

Four doctors aboard the Vickers Voyager examined Chapman and Mallinson. A helicopter flew them to Cork, where they transferred immediately to a jet for a flight to Barrow-in-Furness, England, where their families waited.

Sir Leonard Redshaw, chairman of Vickers Oceanics, owner of the Pisces, said the men were brought up in "our last chance." He described the operation as the deepest underseas rescue ever attempted.

OTTAWA — Leaders of Canada's striking non-operating rail unions are meeting non-stop to decide if they would obey compromise legislation passed by Parliament early today forcing them back to work by midnight.

There were signs of continued defiance from strike leaders in B.C. who termed the final wage settlement passed by Parliament as "an insult."

Co-chairman of the British Columbia joint strike committee Nick Zapantis said the British Columbia membership could very well defy the back-to-work order, even if the national leadership recommends acceptance.

If any case, he said he doubted a membership meeting to consider Parliament's action can be arranged until some time Sunday.

"We feel at present that (the offer) is unacceptable and we expect the (national) leadership to say the same," he said.

Parliament early today ordered the country's 56,000 non-operating railway employees back to work with legislation that also bars possible strikes by two other railway unions.

The legislation will give an immediate 34 cents an hour increase retroactive to Jan. 1, in contrast to the 30 cents an hour proposed by the government earlier.

The average hourly wage will be raised by $4.19 by July 1, 1974, from the present average hourly wage of $3.54 for non-ops.

This would still leave railway workers making less money than janitors in other industries, Zapartis said.

"It tells me they think we are so stupid we will take anything they offer," he added.

Spokesmen for Canadian National and Canadioan Pacific railroads said they expected the strikers to begin reporting for work as required by law at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. Some services could begin by noon Sunday and full services could be provided by Tuesday morning if the men come back to work, they said.

The Senate passed the bill by a unanimous voice vote at 5:40 a.m. EDT after an hour and half of debate, and acting governor-general, associate supreme court Justice Ronald Martland, gave the bill Royal assent 20 minutes later.

In the Commons, the legislation was approved on a vote of 187-26. The 96 Liberals, 84 Conservatives, six Social Credit party members and Independent Rock LaSalle were in favor.

The 25 New Democratic Party members and Social Credit member Lionel Beaudoin were opposed.

Failure of the men to return could result in jail terms for union leaders and fines against them of up to $5000 each for every day the workers stay out.

The amended legislation, if accepted by the unions, would cost the railways another $300 million over two years if wage raises are given to all workers, statements from CP Rail and Canadian National Railways said.

The present annual wage bill is now $850 million.

"This could well give a serious inflationary push to the economy," the CP Rail statement said, calling for action to help railways adjust their revenues to meet the costs.

NDP leader David Lewis said there would be no purpose in workers defying the law.

During debate on the bill, Transport Minister Jean Marchand and Labor Minister John Munro argued that Parliament should not be the place where wage levels for the workers are set.

Marchand, a former Quebec labor leader, led off with an impassioned speech that even union leaders in the public gallery admitted was eloquent.

"But we don't agree with him," said one union official.

As the Conservatives and NDP submitted proposals to raise the minimum wage above that set by the bill, Munro called upon the MPs not to make Parliament an auction place.

More labor disputes would come before Parliament if the minimum wage level was raised on the floor of the Commons, he warned.

HOUSE FIRE KILLS COMOX MAN

Courtenay RCMP said Kenneth Roy Jenkins, of Taylor Way, Comox, died in the fire which started shortly after midnight.

Cause of the fire and the amount of damage are not yet known.

Thousands Flee Naples Cholera

Times News Services

NAPLES — Thousands of persons were streaming out of this city today, fleeing from a cholera outbreak which has already taken nine lives.

And the cholera appeared to be spreading despite an extensive vaccination program.

Hospital officials said early today that the number of confirmed cases has risen to 42 and the number of suspected cases to more than 160.

To combat the spread of the disease, the government has started shipping 500,000 doses of cholera vaccine to Naples and the Adriatic city of Bari which has reported 10 confirmed and 40 suspected cases.

Fear is rising in this Mediterranean port of 1.3 million people, where the streets are filled with the stench of disinfectant and burning garbage.

Thousands of persons were reported heading out of the city in cars Friday night, while drug stores and clinics were besieged by people trying to obtain vaccine or antibiotics. But most shops were sold out.

Other residents of Naples took to the streets for the second consecutive day to protest a shortage of vaccine and demand immediate sanitation measures in the city's crowded slums.

At Portici 1,000 persons mobbed the mayor's car and beat on it with their fists as he tried to enter his office.

Later a crowd of 3,000 public housing residents burned tires, furniture and bags of garbage in the street.

ANGER CAUGHT FIRE

SICAMOUS (CP) — A North Vancouver man who told police he set a forest fire near here on Aug. 16 to express his anger, got a 60-day jail sentence for arson Friday.

Jeff Walton, 22, told police he set the fire because he was "just angry" at everything, police said. He pleaded guilty.

The fire burned more than three acres and blocked traffic on Highway 97-A for more than three hours. It cost about $10,000 to extinguish the blaze, a forestry branch official said.

33 Killed In Hotel Fire Panic

Times News Services

COPENHAGEN — At least 33 persons were killed early today when flames swept through a six-storey hotel in one of the Danish capital's worst fire disasters, police reported.

Another 20 are missing.

Many of the bodies so far brought out of the fire-ravaged Hafnia Hotel, in the heart of Copenhagen, were charred beyond recognition. There were fears that more bodies might still be in the rubble. (See picture on Page 2.)

The 85 guests in the hotel were mostly tourists from West Germany, the United States, Sweden and Britain.

The fire at the 75-year-old hotel near the City Hall square, was the worst hotel blaze to hit Denmark since the Second World War.

A fire department spokesman said the blaze was believed to have started on the main staircase between the second and third floors.

Some were hurt leaping from windows while others grabbed bedsheets, knotted them together, and slid down to safety.

A number of persons fled upward and then ran to adjoining roooftops.

The fire department spokesman said that ladders were raised but "many of the people did not understand us although we yelled to them in many languages."

Egg Prices Up 2 Cents Monday

Egg prices will rise two cents a dozen Monday.

An $8 a ton increase in the price of chicken feed is responsible for the hike, Ed Morgan, secretary-manager of the B.C. Egg Marketing Board, said today.

Feed industry spokesmen earlier this week predicted a 17-cent-a-dozen increase in production costs for eggs, based on the Canadian Wheat Board's decision to charge the $190-a-ton export price for wheat from local port elevators instead of the $121 domestic price.

Shortages of feed grains, and consequent higher prices, have been caused by the rail strike.

Morgan said there was a "strong possibility" that egg prices will level off once the strike is settled.

"I feel myself that once the strike is over and the grain shipments start moving again, the possibility exists that prices could move in the opposite direction," he said.

A spokesman for one of the largest feed manufacturing companies in the Lower Mainland said Friday his company, which he did not wish identified, had decided to wait until at least Thursday to decide whether to buy export grain from the Port of Vancouver.

The spokesman said his company is hoping truck shipments and an early end to the rail strike will get the company over the shortage without having to buy substantial amounts of export grain.

The supply situation generally still is rough, he said, but farmers are assured of getting adequate supplies. The cost of those supplies, however, will depend on whether export wheat is bought.

Who-Was-Who Washington Worry

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Watergate scandals and the current investigation of Vice-President Agnew have plunged the board of the Social List of Washington into confusion with their deadline for the 1974 edition one week away.

Who will be left in next year's Green Book? (the nickname for the social list because of its green suede cover)? Who will be dropped?

In the past, any breath of scandal or too much notoriety has meant that people previously included in Washington's prestigious, annual social register get bounced from its pages. Ostracism has always been the price of too many unfavorable headlines.

This year the four women and one man who make up "the secret five" board of directors of the Green List are wrestling with their consciences and all the charges accruing from the Watergate scandals. And the Agnew situation.

Those connected with the Green Book insist that there is one firm rule, adhered to through the 42 years the Green Book has been published: "Anyone involved in scandal does not make the book."

This year the question is: Does this rule go as high as President Nixon, who refutes all claims about his knowledge of Watergate?

And should Agnew's name be deleted because the government has told him that he is being investigated in connection with possible charges of "bribery, extortion, and conspiracy?"

The committee has a week to exercise the use of the red pencil before the list goes to the printer.

Carolyn Hagner Shaw, the book's publisher, says she "doesn't have the faintest idea" what decisions her committee will make this year.

"I don't want to hear or see or know anything about the board's decisions," she says.

Many have been dropped from the Green Book in the past.

The highest official to be ousted was Supreme Court justice William Douglas, after a series of divorces and remarriages.

OTTAWA (CP) — Non-operating rail union leaders have recommended to their membership that they return to work at 12:01 Sunday morning.

But leaders of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and general workers, representing 18,000 of the 56,000 non-operating workers, voted against a negotiating committee motion to obey the law.

This Russian Walter Mitty Made It All Happen for Him

MOSCOW (UPI) — Vasily Gorbatenko's life was a succession of heroic and brilliant deeds — at least that's the way he told the story.

As a boy, he was a partisan fighting in the forests against the Germans. He was a warrior so valiant his name struck terror in the hearts of the enemy. He was even wounded once but managed to escape.

Gorbatenko's job dossier said he went to eight institutes of higher education after the war, graduating for some of them twice.

But none of it really happened.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Friday Gorbatenko was an imposter whose heroic flights of fancy could have rivalled Walter Mitty.

Gorbatenko was wounded as a boy, but not while fighting Germans, Pravda said. He accidentally shot himself while playing with an old hunting rifle.

And Gorbatenko's diplomas were typed and signed by himself.

The newspaper accused Gorbatenko of taking correspondence courses from two schools and passing his examinations by cheating and bribery.

He eventually got a degree and became a professor at Yakutsk. With the permission of higher authorities, he organized a joint scientific council which had the authority to judge the qualifications of candidates for doctoral degrees.

"It was later discovered that half the persons on that council were non-existent and that he forged their signatures," Pravda said.

It said Gorbatenko stole doctoral dissertations and peddled them to candidates. The newspaper did not say how Gorbatenko was unmasked or what became of him.

China Back On Cruises

HONG KONG (UPI) — Visits to China by foreign cruise ships will resume next months for the first time since 1949, travel industry sources said Friday.

The 10,000-ton British liner Coral Princess will make the first trip, with scheduled stops at Tientsin and Shanghai.

The Coral Princess is to leave Kobe, Japan, Sept. 10 on a 27-day cruise, the sources reported. Aboard will be 406 Japanese students, 74 professors and officials on an educational trip.

The ship will be at Tientsin three days and then make a two-day visit to Shanghai. Other stops will include Manila, Singapore and Okinawa.

By JON ANDERSON

American authorities removed the people of the remote atoll in the Marshall Islands before the nuclear tests carried out at Bikini and nearby Eniwetok between 1946 and 1958.

Atomic explosions were set off in the air, on the surface and under the water. Entire islands simply disintegrated.

The vegetation of Bikini was stripped away by the fireballs and for many years the atoll was contaminated by nuclear fallout, unfit for human living.

Now one of the world's most remote housing developments is going up on this barren atoll. Workmen, toiling under the tropical sun, are putting the finishing touches to the homes in preparation for the islanders return—perhaps before the end of this year.

The people of Bikini, who numbered about 150 when they were evacuated in 1946, were eventually resettled on the rocky isle of Killi in the southern Marshalls group.

But they have longed to return ever since they left.

Killi has no safe lagoon for fishing, a major source of sustenance for the islanders, and their 27-year exile has been a time of extreme difficulty for them.

Since 1968, when the level of radiation on Bikini was declared low enough to make return possible, the United States has been preparing the atoll by planting coconuts and other tropical food plants, and constructing a new village.

The number of islanders was estimated last year at about 300.

The people were required to give their approval at each stage, although objections now are being raised on some aspects of the design. Each family will have a typhoon-resistant home with adjacent cooking, laundry and toilet areas.

The houses will be ready for occupancy towards the end of this year. But whether the people will accept them and other arrangements for their return now is a matter of some concern to trust territory officials.

There are, for instance, objections being raised to the housing design, though this was originally approved by the islanders.

Officials in the Marshall Islands district centre of Majuro, however, are confident that through negotiations, the path of return can be smoothed out.

Whether the people of Bikini go home this year or next, the homecoming is bound to be an emotional occasion.

Many will not remember the traditional home the islanders were forced to leave 27 years ago, and probably no one will recognize the islands today after the changes wrought by nuclear blasts.

But the coconuts and breadfruit are growing and the lagoon is again teeming with fish, so life may once again resume much of its old pattern.

$7 MILLION BID FROM JAMES BAY

OTTAWA (FP) — The James Bay Development Corporation wants a $7-million deep harbor built at Fort George, at the mouth of the La Grande River so that 30,000-ton tankers can deliver huge quantities of fuel more cheaply for the James Bay hydroelectric development projects.

And the corporation plans to ask Ottawa to foot all, or at least part, of the bill.

Andre Langlois, director of planning and development for the JBDC, said that plans for the proposed deep harbor will be submitted to Ottawa for approval and financing "within a few weeks."

He estimated that the harbor would cost $7 million. Plans call for construction to start next year.

The corporation, Langlois said, has already done its own internal studies on the design of the harbor facility and on the possibilities and problems of oil spills into James Bay.

But the project would not be specifically covered under the already-planned $10-million-worth of federal-provincial James Bay environmental studies. Nor is there any special impact study on the harbor being planned at the moment.

The harbor would handle an estimated one million tons or more of petroleum products during the first 10 years of its operation.

Langlois said in the peak year of 1978, the corporation plans to ship in as much as 200,000 tons of fuel. This would require, he said, about seven visits by 30,000-ton tankers in the peak year.

GARDENING
jack beastall

This Is Weekend to Sow The Grass Seed

Labor Day weekend is the acknowledged time for sowing grass seed in this part of Canada, providing the area has been properly prepared, weeds removed, levelled, and the soil has settled.

A lawn in the true sense of the word is something beyond the reach of home gardeners because of the expense of adequate preparation, cost of upkeep, and the time factor involved.

The best we can expect to achieve on an average income is a patch of grass, but there is no reason (excepting impatience) why that patch of grass should not be the best in the block.

Most of the grass troubles that keep gardeners in a constant state of worry are directly related to inadequate preparation of the site, which in turn relates to the budget and the unreasonable rush to "to make the place look presentable."

Every building we erect has an adverse effect on the soil. The weight of modern machinery compacts the soil to a considerable depth, ruins its texture, and changes the natural movement of water below the surface. When the water is forced down, or diverted, insufficient moisture rises to sustain plants.

Deep preparation is therefore essential before seed is sown in an endeavor to restore the vertical movement of soil moisture. Especially is this necessary to areas in front of buildings where the most damage is done by trucks and machines.

This is only the beginning of future lawn troubles. Trees may have been cut and stumps removed, leaving roots in the soil; or the location may have been covered with first and second growth conifers for hundreds of years and the soil laced with decaying and active roots. Until the roots have finally decomposed the grass above will be plagued with the fairy-ring fungus.

In an affluent society scraps of lumber from a construction job are not eagerly gathered for firewood. These scraps are buried, and each will start a fairy-ring as it gradually reverts to soil.

Some contractors burn a lot of the rubbish. The heat of the fires consumes the humus in the soil, destroys the beneficial micro-organisms, and the deposit of ashes contains higher levels of potash than grass will tolerate. Result; a problem spot where grass refuses to grow.

Wall plaster and stucco is usually mixed, and the equipment cleaned and washed down, in a spot that will eventually be included in the front grass area. Grass, and any other plants needing a slightly or definitely acid soil, will not thrive in these spots until the alkalinity has gone, but weeds will grow in profusion.

Chunks of brick and concrete, pieces of asphalt roofing, paper bags and sheets of plastic, are often buried in the final cleanup. Each is a potential block to the natural up and down movement of soil moisture, and the cause of troublesome brown patches.

If the place has to "look respectable" immediately, a crew of laborers is the only answer. Where money is lacking, the owner will have to invest his own spare time, in which case the grass area will not be ready for quite a while. But when it eventually materializes, it will be grass of which the owner can be justly proud.

Those home gardeners who followed the advice given last spring, working throughout the summer, watering, fertilizing, removing weeds and digging out perennial roots, can now go ahead with seeding.

The soil is warm and relatively dry. Cooler temperatures, light winds, increasing relative humidity, and the occasional shower, combine to provide ideal conditions for quick germination and strong growth of seedlings.

Grass seed must germinate within 12 days once it comes in contact with moisture, otherwise it will rot. As many home gardeners have learned, sowing after mid-September is risky, since the adverse weather conditions of late fall result in a poor stand of grass, and the work has to be repeated next year.

Reseeding over a poor stand of grass is not the answer. Each square foot of soil will support only so many plants. Three years after reseeding certain areas will begin to die out because crowding has limited air, light, food and root space.

To avoid future problems, never sow into freshly imported "top soil." The weed problem will be terrific, and there is always the possibility the soil may be too acid for grass plants. Better to add manure and compost to your present soil.

Buy a seed mixture compounded for west coast conditions, not a mixture suitable for anywhere in Canada. The latter will not contain sufficient seeds of the finer grasses that thrive so well here, but have a preponderance of coarse grasses for areas with cold winters, plus unneeded clover.

Specify whether the grass will be in sun or shade, whether it is to be restricted to viewing only, or required to take normal wear, or for rough play. There is a mixture suited to every soil and purpose.

Level the area carefully with frequent raking in every direction. Walking on the surface will compact the soil sufficiently. Never roll a soil containing clay.

Sow the seed broadcast by hand; no seeding machine has yet produced comparable results. Practice first with coarse sand in a corner of the vegetable garden. Then perfect the art of covering the seed (or sand) with a rake, leaving it evenly distributed and not gathered into heaps.

Keep sprinklers away from seeded areas. Dampen with a fine mist from the hose, held low but not directed at the soil. Mist the area frequently on sunny days, but don't saturate the soil enough to lower the soil temperature and delay germination.

Check frequently and remove all weed seedlings by hand as soon as they appear. No weed killers for at least two years because they inhibit the growth of the grass seedlings. A half-hour a day right from the start will take care of weeds before they become a serious problem.

Remember, it takes three years for the various nurse grasses to die out and the fine grasses to establish a turf. Three years from now you will be able to judge the results of your work.

Sowing the seed is the easiest part of the whole job, requiring the minimum of time and effort. It is the preparation that determines what the final results will be, and that is the part where invested time and effort really pays off.

WORK FOR WEEK

As early as possible get daffodil and all other narcissus bulbs into the ground. They do not flower earlier but blooms and bulbs are better for the early rooting

Clean out old growth from climbing roses, leaving bright new canes. Tie in those required to cover area.

Remember NO FERTILIZER now to any shrubs, trees or herbaceous perennials. Only exception is bonemeal (which does not become available to the plants until spring, and then slowly) at planting time for certain trees and shrubs tolerating lime.

Tuberous begonia flowering prolonged by removal of spent blooms and decaying leaves. No watering overhead.

Bush and runner beans must be picked every third day to keep crop in production for as long as frost remains absent.

Onions should have been lifted, but if any remain, lift now and spread to ripen. Those with thick necks will not keep. Use these in the next two or three weeks.

Lawn sowing this weekend. And have old car rug ready for covering tomatoes and squash if frost threatens on a clear night.

Contagious Cancers Now a Possibility

By PETER MOSLEY

LONDON (Reuter) — Recent revelations that cats can catch blood cancer from each other have raised again the nagging question: could some kinds of human cancer be contagious, too?

Over the years an overwhelming volume of evidence has tended to rule this out. There are, however, some isolated but well-documented cases of what appear to be limited epidemics of cancer. These include an outbreak of leukemia involving eight children in Illinois in the early 1960s, and a cluster of cases of Hodgkins disease in Albany, N.Y., a decade later.

Now a group of American scientists has produced evidence for the first time that mammals—in this case cats—can transmit leukemia (blood cancer) horizontally.

Hitherto it has been shown that certain viruses associated with leukemia could be transmitted vertically (genetically) from mother to child in animals and fowl and perhaps among humans.

FOUND IN FOWL

In fowl, there was also strong evidence for horizontal transmission of the virus by normal infection.

The real sticking-point for cancer researchers is that in humans, despite a shoal of red herrings, there is nothing that positively indicts viruses as the cause of cancer. Certainly, viruses can be found in association with cancer; but they may be incidental rather than causative.

The latest findings in cats have opened up new lines of investigation as far as human cancer is concerned: and they could, conceivably, lead toward a cancer vaccine.

A group of American veterinarians and cancer researchers led by Dr. William Hardy of the Sloan-Kettering cancer centre in New York, reported their findings in Nature magazine. Of almost 1,500 cats from disease-free houses that were tested, only two were found to be carrying feline leukemia virus.

HIGH INCIDENCE

But of almost 550 cats from infected areas, 177 had the virus and about 23 per cent developed leukemia and died within six months. This figure was about 900 times higher than normal.

"Thus," said Nature in commenting on the report, "leukemia in cats is an infectious disease."

But the magazine went on in much more alarming key. Noting that in test-tube experiments, the virus had been found to infect human cell cultures, the magazine said: "There is the possibility that the human population may be exposed to infection."

No scientists of repute think there is any serious danger of humans catching cancer from their cats. And Dr. Hardy and his colleagues state specifically that they have no evidence of this.

A PRIEST'S VIEW OF ARCTIC LIFE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rev. Raymond de Coccola says things are changing in the Arctic and laments that the book he wrote about how things used to be was censored.

"The publishers cut too much out of it," the 61-year-old priest said of his book Ayorama, written after he had spent 12 years among the Eskimos as an Oblate missionary. "They said it contained too much blood and sex —it was stupid because there was nothing in it which wasn't true."

The book, written in 1954, is being released soon in a paperback edition.

Father de Coccola said the Eskimos he knew lived as they had for thousands of years. He wrote about them and the way they lived before the military invaded their land and before big corporations began mineral exploration in the Arctic.

"There is a new breed of Eskimo these days that doesn't have to follow the ways of old," he said. "The things the old Eskimos did, they had to do to survive."

However, if the Oxford University Press censored Father de Coccola's book, the Roman Catholic Church approved it with hardly a murmur.

The book he wrote reflects that murder was common, cannibalism sometimes a necessity, killing of female infants a custom and the dumping of old people behind on the trail made sense.

Attacks of scurvy and a steady diet of fish and caribou meat finally affected his health so seriously that his superiors ordered him to leave the Arctic.

But he said one of the things he learned and will always remember from the years in the Arctic is "Ayorama", the Eskimo word meaning "that's life."

Weddings

Poole — Gilfillan

First United Church, Port Alberni, was the scene of the August 4, 1973, wedding of Cheryl Irene Gilfillan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alec Gilfillan, to Douglas G. Poole, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Poole, of Victoria. Reverend George A. Affleck performed the ceremony and music was provided by Mrs. Mueller.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long Empire gown of white silk, trimmed in white Italian lace. The long train was attached at the shoulders. She chose a white large brimmed hat and carried a bouquet of red roses with miniature white carnations. Matron of honour was Patricia Zanolli, sister of the bride. The bride's cousin, Susan Horlacher, was bridesmaid. The bride's attendants wore long yellow A-line, sleeveless crimplene gowns featuring large white collars with V-necklines. Complementing the ensembes were yellow picture hats and bouquets of yellow roses with white miniature carnations. Brother of the groom, Ernest A. Poole, was best man and serving as ushers were Milt Barnes, Jim and Bill Gilfillan. The bride's mother wore a short, mint-green dress of polyester crepe of sleeveless A-line style and chose a white carnation corsage. The mother of the groom chose a short A-line dress of turquoise crimplene and wore a white carnation corsage.

Out-of-town guests attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Percy Poole, Burlington, Ont.; Bob and Darlene Boyd, Miss Ellen Boyd, Parksville; Randy and Wendy Bowers, John and Sheila Forgie, Lorne and Dawn Falconer and family, Dick and Ruth Wilson and family, Ian and Carol Haynes, Milt and Audry Barnes and family, Mr. Rob Smith, Ross Bayles, Miss Louise Renwick, Erne and Barb Poole and family, Bill and Gay Miller and family, Norm and Dorothy Bennett, Chuck and Kathy Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Poole, Danny and Jackie Eddy, Jim and Michelle Fearn, of Victoria; Mrs. Adele Cordick and family, Kelowna, Byron and Lil Horlacher, Susan Horlacher, Richmond; Del and Dee Fossen, Powell River, and Harry and Hazel Shorter, Burnaby.

Ritz — Middleton

St. Andrew's Cathedral was the scene of a double-ring ceremony at 1:30 p.m. July 7, 1973, when Barbara Lynne, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Middleton, became the bride of Mr. Stanley Alan Ritz, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Ritz. The saying of the marriage vows was solemnized by Monsignor O'Connell.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her lagoda crepe gown, with empire waist, long slender sleeves with trim at neck and cuffs. The sleeveless coat flowed into a full train and was accented with the ruffle trim from neck to hemline. Her chapel veil was held in place with a cap in the same trim. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, blue carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath accented with pink ribbon. The bride was attended by Miss Sheila Rodger as maid of honor, Mrs. Aileen Holland was bridesmatron and Miss Kathy Ritz was bridesmaid. They were attired in identical floor-length gowns of turquoise blue flocked daisy chiffon over tri-acetate lining. They carried bouquets of white carnations and blue chrysanthemums accented with pink ribbon. The little flower-girl, Miss Laureen Middleton was captivating in a floor-length gown identical to the bridesmaids. Best man was Bruno Rocca and Messrs. Larry and Lorne Middleton ushered the guests. Peter Holland was Tim-beater.

Morrison—Creelman

A double ring ceremony was solemnized by Father W. J. O'Brien in Our Lady of the Rosary Church August 4, 1973, at 7 p.m., when Darlene, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Creelman became the bride of David Neil Morrison, youngest son of Mr. Angus Morrison of Montreal, and the late Mrs. Morrison.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in an empire style gown of polyester chiffon and lace. Her chapel-length veil was of silk illusion and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations. The bride was attended by her sister Mrs. Lynne Hunter and Mrs. Wendy Cullen, who wore matching gowns of pink polyester crepe. Junior bridesmaid Miss Tammy Hunter, niece of the bride wore a pink floral nylon gown. They all wore large brimmed hats and carried bouquets of pink and white carnations. Nephew of the bride Master David Hunter was the ring-bearer. The best man was Mr. Ronald Cullen and the usher was Mr. Bruce Ericson.

A reception followed at the Royal Colwood Golf Club. Mr. Ted Mills proposed the toast to the bride. After the reception the young couple left for an Up-Island honeymoon. The bride chose a navy blue suit with red accessories and her corsage was red roses. They will live in Victoria.

The groom's sister Miss Liz Morrison of Montreal and his aunt Mrs. F. Darche of London, Ont. were among the out of town guests

Macdonald — Evans

The marriage is announced of Mrs. Louise Evans of Victoria, B.C., and Dr. D. Chisholm Macdonald of Saskatoon, formerly of North Battleford, Sask. The wedding took place on August 25, 1973, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Saskatoon.

A reception at the Bessborough Hotel followed. They will reside at 97 Carlton Towers, 325-5th Ave. North, Saskatoon, Sask.

Groth—Redford

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized August 25, 1973, at 4 p.m. in the garden setting at the home of the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Daniels, 88 Caton Place, Victoria, when Dianne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Chesworth, 1040 Tolmie, exchanged marriage vows with Ivan, son of Mrs. L. Metcalfe, Vancouver, and the late Mr. H. Groth. Reverend K. Ridgway officiated and soloist Mel Chesworth was accompanied at the organ by Gary Webb.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length colonial type gown of orange taffeta with overlay of chiffon. Her only jewellery was a white pearl drop, a gift from the groom. Her chapel veil of orange net was caught in the arrangement of tiny orange rosebuds which prettily framed her face. She carried a bridal bouquet of orange rosebuds with white stephanotis. The groom wore a white dinner jacket with matching boutonniere and black pants. The bride was attended by her sister-in-law Mrs. Mel Chesworth as Matron of Honour. She was attired in a floor length gown of royal blue velvet in a slim empire style. Her veil was caught with rosebuds of a matching color. She carried a bouquet of royal blue rosebuds with silver net and trim. The little flower girl Karen, daughter of the bride was captivating in a floor length gown of royal blue velvet. Her headpiece was adorably like the Matron of Honour's. She carried a beautifully made basket of velvet and silk which was filled with rose petals which were to be strewn in her mother's pathway. The bride's son David, dressed in a blue velvet suit, carried the rings on a dainty white satin pillow which was hand embroidered. All the clothes and accessories for this wedding were sewn by the bride. Mr. Ron Daniels in white dinner jacket with matching boutonniere and black pants attended the groom.

The reception followed. Tables were beautifully decorated with floral centre pieces on orange and blue crepe paper doilies. The bride's table was centered with a beautifully decorated three tier cake complement of the bride's mother. A cold plate dinner was served followed by many dainties which had been baked by the bride's mother and sister. Mr. Gil Cormons gave a toast to the bride and a musical program followed. For her going away outfit, the bride wore a floral lerrsey two piece suit with white hat and gloves. The couple will reside in the Interior.

Ballard — Lace

Major and Mrs. John Lace of Sidney are pleased to announce the wedding of their eldest daughter Georgina Margaret, to Ronald Alfred, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ballard, of Vancouver. The ceremony took place on August 18, 1973, at Heather Road Bible Chapel, Vancouver. The Reverend Baker officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, in a beautiful white satin gown trimmed with lace and a long veil and carrying a bouquet of gold and white flowers, was given away by her father. Her sisters, Mrs. Johanna Feesey and Miss Virginia Lace, were matron of honor and bridesmaid. They wore matching primrose gowns and carried floral baskets. Mr Kenneth Ballard of Prince George was best man. Julia Feesey and Coralie Ballard, small nieces of the bride and groom, were flower girls in primrose frocks.

The reception was held at International House, UBC. The happy couple will be living in Vancouver.

Mason — Pepper

Mr. and Mrs. John Pepper announce with pleasure the marriage of their daughter, Lois, to Peter Mason, son of Dr. and Mrs. Geoffrey P. Mason of Victoria. The wedding was celebrated on August 18, in Emmanuel Baptist Church. Reverend Norman Archer officiating.

The bride was attended by her sisters Connie Smith and Susan Pepper and friend Barb Ritch. David Mason was best man for his brother and ushers were Brent Gerrett and Aytar Rains. Robin Soicer and Gill Mothersill sang during the ceremony.

Rates for publication of Wedding or Engagement Notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department. (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available.) 8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deepest thanks to our many friends and relatives for their expressions of kindness and sympathy shown through cards, floral offerings and donations to the Cancer Fund in the recent loss of our husband, father and grandfather, Ivan John Markusich. Also to Drs. Hough, Higgs, Willey and Heimlich and staff of 3rd Central, Royal Jubilee Hospital, our heartfelt thanks.—Mrs. Magda Markusich and Family.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, cards and beautiful floral offerings during our recent sad bereavement in the sudden loss of our beloved wife and mother, Helen Elizabeth Sommer. Special thanks to Rev. Bob McLaren and McCall Brothers Funeral Chapel. — Ted, Val and Steve Sommer.

I hereby want to express my deep appreciation and thanks for the care I received during my stay in the Royal Jubilee Hospital. I will always remember the kindness that surrounded me and the dedication of Doctors and Nurses that helped me on my way to recovery. —Mrs. Anne M. Etema.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BEGGS—In loving memory of "Mom" Nancy Marshall Beggs, who passed away Sept. 3, 1966.
Some day we hope to meet her.
Some day we know not when.
To clasp her hand in a better land.
Never to part again.
—Dearly loved and missed by her son and daughter-in-law Bert and Rose.

HARRISON—In loving memory of William H. Harrison, who passed away September 2, 1970.
Gone is the face we loved so dear.
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away from sight or speech.
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Elsie and children Mary, Judy, Bill, Ken and families.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Elsie and children Mary, Judy, Bill, Ken and families.

WOOD — In loving memory of our mother, Janet, who passed away September 1, 1971.
—Lovingly remembered by her daughter Mary and son-in-law Jim.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
Tree Planting Project 92H13-18
Situated: on Scuzzy and Uzlius Creeks.

Contractors are advised that the British Columbia Forest Service intends to let a planting contract in the Fall of 1973 for the planting of 120,000 trees on 170 acres, more or less, situated on Scuzzy and Uzlius Creeks, West and East respectively of Boston Bar.

In order that prospective bidders may have an opportunity to view the planting site and acquaint themselves with conditions on the ground, the Forest Ranger at Hope will supply directions to interested parties to the area. Interested parties are advised to examine the contract area for themselves before submitting bids.

Sealed tenders for this contract will be received by the Chief Forester up to 4 p.m., Friday, September 14, 1973, except that for specific reasons the Chief Forester may extend such time.

Tenders will not be considered unless made out on the tender form supplied, properly signed and witnessed, and accompanied by a deposit in the form of a certified cheque or money order in the sum of $50, payable to the Minister of Finance.

Tenders must be submitted in the envelope marked "Tender for Tree Planting."

The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted, and the Forest Service reserves the right to limit the number of contracts held by any party at any one time.

Prospective bidders are advised that this contract will be awarded only on proof that the successful bidder has arranged with the Workmen's Compensation Board for the necessary coverage of all employees and/or partners who will be working on the contract.

Note that prior to commencement of planting the successful bidder will be required to submit a deposit in the total amount of five per cent of the bid price.

Planting stock required for the contract will be supplied free of charge by the Forest Service f.o.b. at a place designated by the Forest Service.

Particulars may be obtained from the Chief Forester, Parliament Buildings, Victoria; the District Forester, Vancouver; or the Forest Ranger at Hope.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

VANDALS STRIKE CRYSTAL POOL

Victoria police are searching for the persons who broke into the Crystal Pool Friday causing extensive damage and stealing $150.

Police said the thieves broke into the Quadra Street complex sometime Friday morning by prying open a roof hatch.

The door of the general office was kicked in and ticket counter drawers in the office pried open and emptied on to the floor.

The culprits broke into the manager's office, broke open a cash box and stole $100.

The cafeteria door was kicked in, the cash box broken open and $50 taken.

Police said there is no official estimate of the damage, but termed it, "extensive."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Victoria man was fined $400 and given a two-year probation term for a rash of break-ins and thefts committed in Victoria and Saanich in August.

Allan Scott Alexander, 21, of 511 Davida, pleaded guilty to 10 break-ins, two charges of theft and two charges of wilful damage. He told police the profits from the break-ins and thefts were used to support his three capsule-a-day heroin habit.

Judge William Ostler, in sentencing Alexander in Victoria provincial court Friday, said he had given serious consideration to a jail term, but had decided against it because it was Alexander's first time in court.

Alexander has been in custody since he was arrested Aug. 16 because of what Judge Ostler termed his "voracious appetite" for heroin.

"You have a voracious appetite for heroin and whether you want to or not, you are likely to turn to crime to support it," Ostler said in refusing bail.

As a condition of the two-year probation term, Alexander must pay back more than $1,000 for money stolen and damage done in the break-ins.

Bruce K. Turner, 19, of 2758 Island View Road, was fined $75 for possession of a small amount of marijuana found when police checked his car on Douglas Street Thursday.

Ronald William Moore, 37, of 1782 Bay Street was sentenced to two weeks in jail for being in care and control of a car while impaired. Moore was checked by police July 25 on Eastdowne.

Darlene Edith Burry, 33, of 2645 Blanshard, was fined $100 for impaired driving on Fort Street June 22.

NEY OFFERS B.C. BOWSER BIRDLAND

NANAIMO — Five acres of a 150-acre residential-resort development near here has been offered to the provincial government as a bird sanctuary.

Mayor Frank Ney, president of Nanaimo Realty Co. Ltd., said Thursday the offer was made because the land — some of it waterfront property — has become a nesting place for cranes.

Other wildlife that inhabit the parcel of land near Bowser are eagles and herons, he said, adding he thinks they should be left undisturbed.

Ney said representatives of the provincial fish and wildlife branch have already inspected the site.

"They said if the cranes were disturbed they'd simply move on to another nesting place. But nature keeps on having to retreat and how far you can keep moving them, that's the question."

He added thought was being given to banning the use of firearms in the surrounding area.

POLITICIANS LAST IN SURVEY

MONTREAL (CP) — Fifty rural blue collar workers were asked to rank occupations in terms of truthfulness, competence, altruism, and power by psychologists at the University of Maine.

Of 20 occupations surveyed, politicians brought up the rear, psychologists Richard Ryckman and Martin Sherman told a group attending the American Psychological Association convention in Montreal.

Businessmen ranked in the bottom six, in the company of used car salesmen and auto and TV repairmen.

Included among the most reliable people were police, psychiatrists, judges, doctors, dentists, clergymen and college professors.

Comparable surveys conducted among college students, secretaries, and teachers brought similar results.

This, the psychologists said, proves the general public has definite beliefs about certain occupations.

Tot-Laden Train Slams Into Truck

WITTMUND, Germany (UPI) — A train loaded with school children struck the edge of a parked truck Friday in a fatal accident that hurled dozens of youngsters head-over-heels from their seats, police said.

Two children died of their injuries and at least 15 others were hospitalized in serious condition, they said.

Imports Soar In June

OTTAWA (CP) — June imports rose by more than $300 million over the June, 1972 figures to $1.9 billion, and the six-month total showed a rise of more than $2 billion, compared with the first half of 1972.

Statistics Canada reported Friday a January-June total of $11.3 billion compared with $9.2 billion in 1972.

The figures reflect the brisk pace of economic expansion.

June imports from the United States were $1.4 billion against the 1972 equivalent of $1.1 billion. Japan took second place at $89.6 million, down from $95.3 million, followed by the United Kingdom with $88.8 million, up from $84 million.

These three countries retained their relative positions in the six-month trade figures with the U.S. at $8.1 billion, Japan at $522.8 million and the U.K. at $515.8 million.

Sen. Molgat Bids to Head Ottawa Grits

WINNIPEG (CP) — Senator Gil Molgat of Manitoba has announced he will seek the presidency of the federal Liberal party at its biennial convention in Ottawa Sept. 14 to 16.

At a news conference, Molgat said he is running on a platform of greater decentralization of the party and more direct constituency involvement in all aspects of its work.

Sen. Richard Stanbury of Toronto has been party president since 1968.
